Mississippi Valley's Waterways Problem Is Called "The Business Man's Job"

"SUCCESS MEANS MORE DOLLARS FOR EVERYBODY"

President of the Chicago Association of Commerce Points Out That It Will Be the Fault of the Business Men if the Project Fails Now That the War Has Brought the Start in Development Too Long Delayed.

Demands That All Business Enterprise Be Freed as Quickly as Possible From Government Control, Asserting That Individual Initiative Is the Great Need in the Present Crisis.

WATERWAYS and other national and international problems were presented as "the business man's job," in the address of Harry H. Merrick, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, before the convention of the Mississippi Valley Waterways Association at Hotel Statler, Thursday. Merrick, who is vice president of the Central Trust Co., was formerly general manager of credits for Armour & Co., and was president of the Chicago branch of the National Security League in the period of the league's greatest activity, before the United States entered the war. His address was regarded by some of the delegates as the most vigorous and vital of the talks made to the convention. Certainly it was presented in the most incisive manner.

"This great valley of ours," Merrick said, "has failed of development as no other part of the United States has failed. In this valley we produce a great share of the wealth of the United States, and we of this valley, you of the Waterways Association, we of the Chicago Association of Commerce and of the new Mississippi Valley Association have failed in our duty, in that we have not insisted that the valley should be properly developed in the matter of waterways and in every other way.

"Our Job, Your Job, My Job."

"Only a few weeks ago I was in New Orleans and they drove me through the docks, and there are none finer in the United States, but do you realize that outside of a few cities in the valley that fact is little known? Do you realize that those docks are not used to capacity? Your work here in St. Louis, you of the Chamber of Commerce, is mighty fine, in the matter of the dock now building, with its capacity suited to the immediate plans of the next year or two. That is actual progress, but every one of us has his relation through his association, for at least 50 associations are represented here, in the working out of this shipping problem. That isn't one man's job, nor 10 men's job, whether it be Hurley, of whom we are so proud, or all of the men of all the bureaus at Washington. It is our job!

"Nothing has been said here, even by Mr. Barret, the best informed man in the United States upon Pan-American trade, about Mexico. You have had delegations from the valley, delegations from St. Louis, down there and the valley association has 35 men down there today. We business men must see to it in the interest of the valley, in the interest of St. Louis, of Chicago, of Kansas City, of Memphis and New Orleans and all the valley towns, that Mexico is brought into proper relation to the United States, so that we may trade with it.

"I believe that men such as those who have spoken to you from Washington at this convention will appreciate the advice of business men. The business men did bring about that condition, with the aid of Congress and the President, in Cuba, and today Cuba, with its less than 3,000,000 people, is one of our best and most appreciative customers, and from it we buy in tremendous measure. I know of one firm that does over a million dollars' worth of business a month through Havana out of Chicago, and there are many others.

"Means Dollars for All of Us."

"Mexico lies there undeveloped, in a condition of anarchy in large measure, and through some convention such as was adopted in Cuba and ultimately and recently Haiti and in some of the Central American republics in less degree, we can reconstitute Mexico and remove it as those republics I have just mentioned were removed from the revolutionary column, and that is a business man's job.

"Now that means dollars for the valley, and it means dollars for every one of you. It means dollars for you and for every bank and for every state of the valley, and for every state of the United States, and why the devil don't we get at the job? We let the valley lie there during war time, when shipments at valley centers were delayed in their progress to New York, not for weeks alone, but for months.

"Picture Uncle Sam, if you like, with one hand represented by the port of New York and the veins and arteries representing the railroads between the central states and the valley states, traveling up through the body and out through that arm to New York.

"Developed, fine muscles, but all of this tremendous force represented by the body of Uncle Sam out of balance with that one arm and that one set of muscles and veins and arteries, with the feet, if you like, resting on the Gulf of Mexico, not being developed, about the same size that they were when Uncle Sam was half grown, and the western arm resting on the Pacific, wasting away in favor of Japan. We permitting the commerce of the Western seas to be carried under the Japanese flag as it is carried today, permitting this wonderful valley, the greatest in all the world, to lie undeveloped.

"Our Fault, Your Fault, My Fault."

"That isn't the fault of Washington. It is your fault and it is my fault, and the relation and the interdependency of commercial associations lies right there. I think you have done a big thing in this convention and that you have called in some of the other organizations and that the other organizations, as I have measured them, fully appreciate the part they must play.

"There has been a sort of half-sneer about the development of the valley and the development of the waterways. Someone says 'pork barrel,' and there have been 'pork barrels,' not only in the valley proposition, but in other matters. Someone says, 'Why, that is engineering contracts and the pulling out of snags; we will never get anywhere.' Someone else says, 'What progress have we made in the prevention of floods?' You know that we have made progress, but not in as great measure as we should.

"And again someone says, 'Why, there is New Orleans and all Louisiana fighting for this, and it is up to Minneapolis and St. Paul to pass by on the other side of the street, because they are not interested. It isn't Chicago's problem and it isn't Kansas City's problem, because when the water passes Kansas City, Kansas City is through with it.'

"Now, from a business man's standpoint, we know today that there is from 40 to 60 per cent increased manufacturing production in the United States, as the result of war time development, which must either move up properly and in well-balanced fashion in proper foreign trade, properly financed and balanced by a purchasing power abroad, or else it must be thrown back upon its own source.

The Opportunity Is Ripe.

"That means, first, congestion, serious distress and then that form of commercial suicide that we call panic. We are not going to have that this time, if I understand the spirit of business organizations correctly.

"Just realize, if you like, in this high-pressure period, when every man is thinking about his business affairs and how he may adjust himself to conditions, that you have this convention here so splendidly attended, that immediately following that, on next Wednesday, the Mississippi Valley Association, which was formed in January at New Orleans, and which will hold its first formal convention in Chicago, in which you are interested just as the members of that association are interested in this association. The day following that, for three or four days more, you have another convention, the National Foreign Trade Council, one of the most important that the United States has ever known, and immediately following that (there is only 24 hours' interim), you have here in St. Louis the United States Chamber of Commerce, and every one of those conventions will be attended industriously and earnestly and studiously by men such as are here today. That means something.

"Men aren't leaving their business today simply for the pleasure of getting together and smoking a good cigar and having a lunch and a dinner. They are coming because, for the first time in their lives, they realize that it is the mass play that carries through, that it is the best thought out of conventions such as this that will bring us the result we must have.

"I, for one, don't want Government operation. I don't believe that bureaucratic Government is the kind of Government we should have in the United States, and I, for one, propose that we shall not have it—Democratic or Republican. I don't believe that the Lord gave all the knowledge of the human race to some chap who holds a bureaucratic job.

Believing in the Individual.

"I can even conceive that a convention such as this in session and not under a salary, seeking the thing that is right and just for a broad district of the country, may, as the result of its deliberations, arrive at a better result than salaried men who seek to hold their jobs.

"In this matter of the relation of Commerce Associations to the Government, and to one another, and to the problems of the day, lies a wonderful development in the United States. At times there is a strong tendency, as there has been in the past during the war period, to feel that the only safety, the only progress, lies in the line of Government domination and Government operation, and then the people find themselves, and they find that in the contact of men and women, in the conference between groups interested in special matters and their ultimate relation to the problem of Government, and the direction and administration of Government, lies real safety. I fancy that you all believe today in the individual, and the building up of the individual and his affairs, and not merely in the tremendous magnificent machine, such as the Emperor of Germany conceived and failed to carry through. So in the relation of these organizations, I believe, the safety of the future lies.

Greatest Thing in America.

"It seemed for a long time to many business men that, having passed the 100,000,000 mark in population, we were unwieldy in some sense, without proper leadership and that the ship was without a pilot and without a compass, and now we are finding through these many organizations, associations, chambers of commerce, waterways associations, associations in all the trades, that promptly upon the declaration of war, the instrumentalities of business and commerce can be brought into play, men can be brought to Washington as they were, whether you call them dollar-a-year men or whatever they may be, and the tremendous machine of 110,000,000 people, which had not been co-ordinated and where no plan existed, could nevertheless be rendered efficient by volunteers backed up by the entire business public of the land.

"The greatest thing in the United States, in my judgment, is the spirit of the individual business man who takes himself out of his own immediate problem, listens to argument on matters that relate to the Shipping Board, its disposition of the shippers' problems, reads and informs himself on that, arrives at his own opinion, discusses it with his fellows, and is prepared to back his judgment across the whole map and to see that his representative in Congress, in the House or in the Senate, is impressed with what he believes to be the right thing to do.

A Vision of the Future.

"If we stick to that and proceed along those lines in increasing degree, if we bring the Chamber of Commerce, the cotton associations, the agricultural association, the colleges, the valley association, the waterways association, and so forth, into contact, as we can do, even with groups of two or three hundred men, I will tell you that no nation in the world, guided along bureaucratic

British Censorship and Passport System Give English Tradesmen Advantage Over Ours

IN THE matter of world trade today there are problems, Congress not being in session and so many of our leaders being in foreign lands, that, so far as I know, are not even being deliberated upon.

Just before I left Chicago, one of the largest business firms in the West telephoned to me and said that one of its most prominent men desired to go immediately to South Africa. He had previously intended to go to Australia. He had applied for a passport and found that upon the vise of the British authorities he could get a passport to Australia. Then he applied to the State Department for a passport to South Africa and he was informed that he would be given one to Great Britain and there he might, from the British Government, obtain a passport at its convenience to go to South Africa. The passport situation is bad. The censorship as it prevails throughout the United States today, in our relations with foreign nations along commercial lines, is bad, and Congress is not in session and the heads of our Government are abroad. Therefore, we must take up these matters, we business men must take up these matters, and they have a bearing upon this subject of foreign trade, which immediately concerns the Mississippi Valley, that in order to send a cablegram in plain English to the far East, it must be relayed through Great Britain and censored by British authorities.

I am an optimist. I am English by descent. I pay all honor to Great Britain, but that is too much of a temptation for a trading nation and I don't want to subject Great Britain any longer to that temptation. Along optimistic lines, of course, I believe that they wouldn't yield to the temptation and disclose the prices and the offers contained in that cable correspondence to the leading British merchants. Yet we know that Germany did.—HARRY H. MERRICK.

Mrs. W. P. Ladd, Socialist Wife of a Socialist Episcopal Minister, Startles Exclusive Audiences at Her Lectures in Private Home by Her Views on the Necessity of All Persons Doing Something Useful—Just as Essential, She Says, to Train Girls as Well as Boys to Make Their Own Way.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

SOCIALISTIC discourses as a Lenten devotion or even diversion are something new in conservative circles, are they not?

Yet a fresh-faced young English woman the past week has been venturing in where angels heretofore may have feared to tread, and has been getting away with it.

An audience at St. Peter's Episcopal Church on Holy Thursday listened to her. Another at the Wednesday Club, exclusive invited audiences at the home of Mrs. Charles Nagel, 44 Westmoreland place, and I know not in what other strongholds of conservatism, have gathered to listen to Mrs. Ainslie Taylor Ladd espouse theories of radicalism.

Possibly it was as a graduate of Cambridge, wife of an Episcopal ecclesiastic of position, Dr. W. P. Ladd, dean of Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn., daughter of a British Colonel, niece of two British Generals and sister of a South African Governor, that an entree into our very conservative church, club and social circles was assured her.

Her Manner Ingratiating.

Her personality further disarmed suspicion of the violence usually associated with radicalism. She sits always in a wheeled chair although with no other indication of infirmity and with her youthful, fresh-complexioned face sparkling with animation, you quickly forget this detail.

Her English voice, too, with the enunciation so striven after by "our best people," makes any statement, however much it flavors of Bolshevism, palatable. Then, she always softens her arraignment of class, suppression of the masses, by saying "we" are guilty, "we" ought to change things thus and so.

One woman, an aggressive, commanding personage, coming out of the Wednesday Club, was heard to say, "She's a Socialist and a dangerous woman!" A response was: "But are not some of the things she stands for just what we've been working for in the Consumers' League all the time?"

Elsewhere, I'm told, women whom she addressed are inquiring where they can get a copy of that British labor platform she talked so much about (it was published in full in the Post-Dispatch a year ago), and wondering if it can be true that in England women of her station really do take an interest in such things.

I could not attend all the discourses, because to many of them I was not invited, but in an interview Mrs. Ladd was glad to recount to readers of the Post-Dispatch some of her theories.

"Every Woman Should Work."

"I think every woman ought to have a job and be paid for her work," was one declaration. "The system of training sons for work so they can go forth and become independent, contributing members of society, while daughters are left to be dependents, supported by fathers and brothers unless they happen to marry, is unfair to the daughters.

"Without early training for independence a girl may marry and be supported by her husband or she may wait until she is over 30 and find it is too late to begin. Then she continues a worthless, wasteful life, dependent upon her male relatives. Or she may throw herself into a loveless marriage in order to be supported. This choice, in my opinion, though you may not wish to print anything so bald, is nothing less than legalized prostitution."

Housekeeping Is a Job.

"But when a girl marries in the normal way for love, what use has she for independence?" she was asked.

"When I say training for an occupation, I regard housekeeping for her own family as a most desirable occupation. It is the one I prefer and my life is quite full with my two little boys and my husband. It is the thing of a wife's being made to feel that she is dependent that I object to. Every wife should be paid by her husband a fair share of what they both really earn.

"And if a married woman does not find enough to occupy her in her own home," continued Mrs. Ladd, "let her find something outside to do. If she is a wealthy woman, let it be some work for the community. There is always plenty of work for women to do. The war's demand for women's service brought the demand out in a striking and dramatic way, but there always exists plenty of work requiring women.

"And if a wealthy woman goes out to work, let her offer her services upon the same terms as the needy worker, so that in every case the best worker will be chosen. Let her not offer her services free, if it would otherwise be a paid job, and let her not accept a lower wage than the poor woman. Wealthy women wage earners have an immense chance to raise wages for other women, because they can be independent and so force their demands."

"But doesn't every wealthy woman who takes a salary she doesn't need deprive some needy woman of a job?"

No Woman Should Be Idle.

"She takes something, but she contributes something more to society as a whole," was the response. "While she is working she has not so much time to frivol away upon luxuries and the less that is spent upon luxuries, the more will be left to provide and produce necessities for the world. The point I wish to make is that no woman has the right to be idle. Every woman should have a job.

Mrs. Ladd was an active member of the Labor Party in England. I asked if she were interested in the organization of a labor party here.

"I do not feel we will get the fundamental reforms without trade unionism," she declared. "I am not so sure about unionism getting reforms through politics here as we do in England. With us, there, everything is done through politics. People have the greatest respect for politics. The word has no sinister qualification there. They expect every reform to come through Parliament. Even when it was decided to behead Charles I. the act was voted on and carried out by Parliament. Mob action, violence, has little effect in England. The history of the suffragettes affords an example of that. As soon as people found they were not being driven to it, suffrage was granted through Parliament."

"Do you mean to imply that in America reforms are more likely to come about by force, and that we are likely to have a violent revolution to get industrial reforms?" I inquired.

"I only think that it is more likely here than in England. I find Americans much given to violence of expression and thought. Never in England did I hear expressed the violent views on the war which I have heard in this country. Why, I have heard American women say they would like to see all German babies starved from birth, and that they would like to see their sons do in Germany what the Germans did in Belgium. Never in England does one hear such sentiments expressed."

"What do you think of the American woman's capacity for organization into trade unions, Mrs. Ladd?"

"Women are difficult to organize anywhere, and the foreign element makes it still harder here. It seems to me, too, we haven't the leadership we ought to have. In England the most enlightened, most highly educated, strongest thinkers, are in the Labor party. The organizers of women are young college women, or else those selected from the crafts to take special courses for the purpose of intelligently organizing the working women. That should be a great field for your American college women, but I find it an opportunity neglected by them."

Both Mrs. Ladd and her husband, who has been preaching at Christ Church Cathedral, and who also is a Socialist, working through the ministry of his church, whose missionary work is extending itself out into economic as well as social reforms, have expressed the regret that an appropriation to continue the Government free employment agencies has been defeated.

Free Labor Bureaus in England.

"In England," said Mrs. Ladd, "the free labor bureaus were established as far back as 1910 and are most successful. At first working people may have distrusted them because they were free, but they see in them now the means of an equable distribution of labor and the maintenance of equable standards of wages." Without this service, she pointed out, employers have it entirely within their own power to control the labor markets, and cause a surplus of unemployed in any given place, so as to bring wages down.

"I told one of my audiences of an incident related to me in the women's department of the free labor bureau here," she said. "One of your largest employers of women, the head of one of your richest business houses, telephoned for a number of girls whom he was willing to pay $7.50 a week. The agency refused to send them at that wage and the employer said he could get them elsewhere.

"Now, it has been determined that the lowest sum upon which a person can live in these times is $15 a week, has it not? I ask women how these girls, which this employer will get, are to obtain that additional necessary $7.50 a week.

"Will they go on working until they become weak from undernourishment? Marry, have children who are undernourished and incompetent? Or shall they go to the oldest trade in the world? And all the while there are women who are not taking an interest, who have not raised an outcry against such things."

"Employers argue that girls, having no dependents and being partially supported in their parents' homes, do not need the living wage," I reminded her.

Women Employers no Fairer Than Men

"I do not know what the figures are elsewhere," she responded, "but a survey in Boston established the fact there that not more than 11 per cent of women employed are not wholly supporting themselves and in most cases they are supporting others besides themselves. Employers do not ask men if they have dependents before and fix their wages accordingly," she added rather hotly.

"Do you find women employers any fairer than men?" I asked.

"No," she admitted. "I don't. In England wo-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

California and Missouri Roads.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Seeing the letter in the Post-Dispatch about good roads, reminds me I have motored from Los Angeles, Cal., over the Santa Fe Trail and found that Missouri had the worst roads of the entire trip. The roads in the deserts of California or Arizona have got the roads that I have gone over in Missouri beat a thousand times. What does the State do with the money that it gets for auto licenses? Let some of our road makers go to California and see the roads there that the State builds and not with convict labor, either, and they will wake up.

To Provide Work.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Now that there are hundreds of thousands of men out of employment and thousands upon thousands more coming over to swell the ranks. What more opportune moment than the present to revive that old but glorious idea of straightening out our poor wandering river and making of it a waterway that ocean-going ships can navigate? Engineers have time and again estimated and stated that the reclamations would more than offset the expense. Now all you business men who are clamoring and cudgeling your brains for a greater St. Louis, here is the one grand scheme staring you in the face. What will you do about it? Now all you employed, as well as unemployed (of whom I am one), will you not get out on the firing line and do "your bit" towards bringing this great and everlasting blessing to the Mississippi Valley and make St. Louis in fact as well as in name the Future Great City for all time to come?

Other St. Louis Fighters.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

As I am from St. Louis, and always read the Post-Dispatch back home, I had one sent me and noticed an item, which is inclosed, by one Mr. George A. Loppin, saying "Honor All St. Louis Fighters," referring to the 35th and 89th Divisions.

When St. Louis welcomes these fighters from the 35th and 89th, let them not forget there's very many St. Louisans in the 1st Division also. I myself was gassed twice, once by mustard gas in my eyes. I was blind for eight days, and again burned by gas. I was also wounded in the Argonne Woods.

The 1st Division relieved the 35th on Oct. 2, 1918, and stayed in the Argonne practically 40 days.

Remember the first St. Louisan to die in this war was from the 6th F. A., 1st Regular Army Division. So please when giving out this credit save a bit for the regulars who came over first and go home last. Don't St. Louis claim us?

I am 20 years old and have seen 22 months in the army, 20 months of which were in France and Germany.

Ex-Soldier Hunting Work.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Having read an article in your paper entitled "An Ex-Soldier's Complaint," I wish to state a few experiences of my own as I am not what you may call a knocker, but it is time for something to be done instead of the public saying "Why don't they go to the farm?" Now before we entered the war we were all working steady and making good wages. Since getting my discharge from service I find it a harrassing undertaking to look for employment and be refused and told no we need women and girls. Oh, yes, "Why don't you go to your old job?" you may ask. Well, I can give you the answer in very few words. The company I worked for before I entered service has shut down entirely. You may say, put him on the farm. I will explain this case, as I have had experience—too many hours for the pay. If he has someone depending on him to make the living, farm labor will not keep him and his dependents.

Oh, yes, give him a reception. But give him most needful of all—a job.

Jobs for War Workers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

All soldiers returning home are given the preference of all jobs and it is right that they should be put to work as soon as possible. But how about those who were rejected from the service and worked steady, hard and faithfully during the war? Now there are many of them thrown out of work because work is slack. When seeking new employment they are told that the soldiers are preferred. Why not include these men in the free employment office, for these men must live the same as the soldiers.

Why not get a movement to have a law passed while the Legislature is in session to make highway robbery a capital punishment? That might give some relief.

MISSOURI'S OX CART.

The Sunday Post-Dispatch's editorial on Backwoods Missouri made the people think.

The truth about conditions that block the State's progress hit Missouri hard. Truth is a hard hitter. There is no art of defense that wards off its blows.

As the Kansas City Star aptly expressed the situation: "There is only one way to change it and make the Post-Dispatch a liar; that is for the Legislature to put through the program of progressive legislation now pending."

The peanut politicians and their yap supporters heaped abuse on the Post-Dispatch, but we don't mind abuse in the public service. The howls proved that the punch went home.

Anything to start public thought and action; anything to get the wheels of progress turning; anything to break the combine of the yap, the peanut politician and the magnate which keeps Missouri on the backward path.

Of course, it was too late to save the good roads law and the good roads program for Missouri. Gov. Gardner served as the rubber stamp of the peanut politicians and the yaps. They had him by the throat and he yielded to their demands for spoils at the sacrifice of good roads and the vital interests of the State.

On the other hand there were signs of activity among the legislators. There were signs that the yaps and peanut politicians, who are running the Legislature, felt the sting of just condemnation. There was much motion and some go in the direction of progressive legislation. Efforts were made to bring order and action out of the chaos and the babble of peanut politics and partisanship and to save something from the wreck.

The constitutional convention bill can be saved. Nothing stands in its way but party politics, the curse of the State and the curse of the country.

The Democratic Senate passed the bill submitting the question of having a constitutional convention to the people. The Republican House passed a bill providing for the redistricting of senatorial districts in the State.

The Republicans in the House say they will not pass the constitution bill unless the Democrats of the Senate pass the redisticting bill.

The Democrats of the Senate say they will not pass the senatorial redistricting bill. They stand on the fulfillment of their pledge to pass the new constitution measure and ask the Republicans of the House to fulfill their pledge.

The Republicans are justified in protesting against the shameless gerrymander of the senatorial districts. The existing districts are grossly unfair and discriminating in favor of the Democrats. They are grossly unfair to the voters whose will in determining which party shall control the Senate is blocked by them.

The Democrats in the Senate ought to pass the redistricting bill. Their refusal to do it is a reflection on them and their party. They ought to play fair with the people. But how can they be expected to do it? The Democratic party of the State is falling. It is dominated by the yap and the peanut politician and the magnates' agents. It is holding desperately to every advantage it has, regardless of fairness and public welfare. It is blind to its own as well as the public interest.

On the other hand, the Republican party is a rising power in the State. It has gained some successes in the past. It has gained control of the House. It has elected a United States Senator. Its prospect for further victories is bright. This depends upon the action of the party's representatives—whether they win or lose public confidence and support.

What better way to gain public confidence and support than to stand for progress and the public's welfare? What wiser course for a rising party than to refuse to permit any question of party justice or party interest to stand in the way of serving the people. The party is pledged to a new constitution. Can it afford to violate that pledge on the plea that the Democrats refused to do the Republican party justice? Does one wrong justify another? Does Democratic wronging of the Republican party justify the Republican party's wronging of the people of the State?

Intelligent and progressive Republicans in or out of the Legislature should see the point. They ought to demand that the Republican House keep the party's pledge and meet the public demand by passing the constitution bill, regardless of mere party rights and interests. Do the Republicans expect to win the State by following their Democratic opponents into the morass of yappism and peanut politics?

The new constitution is in danger of falling between the stools of partisan politics. Is neither of the leading parties big enough and broad enough to sink politics for the public interest?

The question of its stand on progressive measures is again put to the Republican majority of the House by the Senate's adoption of the mortgage recording tax bill. Are the Republicans willing to go on record as defeating this progressive tax measure?

There is a chance for a workmen's compensation bill. The Senate has passed a compromise bill, with State insurance eliminated. It offers a basis for conference and agreement on a fair measure of compensation. State insurance is an incident of compensation. It is an issue of itself and can be fought out hereafter. It can be created at any time.

Neither the Senate nor the House, neither the employers or labor can afford to defeat all compensation legislation on account of hobbies or extreme features. They should come together in agreement on vital points of justice to employers and to employes. The important thing is to lay a sound foundation for fair dealing in industrial accidents and take Missouri out of the tailenders of industrial progress.

Peanut politics seem to have killed the St. Louis annexation enabling act. The great city of St. Louis, confronting growing and expanding competitors, is bound to the ox cart of yappism.

The abolition of the Tax Commission, if the yaps and peanut politicians accomplish their end, will be a distinct loss. That body has at least informed the people of the evils of the present system and has fixed a sound standard of assessment.

No strengthening of the Board of Equalization will do any good while it is controlled by the peanut politicians and the agents of special interests. It is necessary to change the character, capacity and purposes of its majority members.

We have shown how something may be saved from the wreckage of the present session of the Legislature, but our expectations are slight. The possibilities are small. Yappism has done its work too well. It is in the saddle. Salary increases go, but progressive measures fail.

Nothing worth while will be done to put Missouri on the forward path until the people are aroused to action.

When the intelligent and progressive elements in Missouri take the saddle there will be a radical change. When they throttle the yaps, the peanut politicians and the agents of the interests and put honest, capable and progressive men in office, Missouri will leap forward.

The ox cart will vanish.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE WICKED COUNTRYSIDE.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

AT last the superior merits and morality of Omaha as compared with the remainder of the State have earned public recognition.

The esteemed State Senate has amended the anti-dance bill to make it unlawful for any citizen of Nebraska to dance on a Sunday unless he does his dancing in Omaha. The reason, according to the veracious Lincoln Journal, is "because that city has an ordinance regulating dancing and has a Public Welfare Committee to see that all Sunday dances are properly danced!"

Three rousing cheers for Omaha!

Three more, and a tiger, for the State Senate!

Here is at last made evident that virtue is its own reward.

Perhaps this stinging legislative rebuke of the country girls and boys of Nebraska may bring them to a realization of their sins and of their heathen way of living.

Hereafter when they gather on a platform in some grove on a Sunday, after a week's hard work, to sing their joy of living with their toes, let them know that they are lawless and accursed. They may not know the shimmy, the foxtrot, the bunny-hug, the bear, the tango and all the modern improvements as danced, with the changing years, in Omaha! they may confine themselves to the good, honest, old-fashioned dances; they may have two or three score admiring mothers for chaperones—but nevertheless their dancing, under the arching vaults of God's first temple, is a sin dangerous and damnable because they have not an ordinance to regulate them and a Public Welfare Committee to inspect them as they play.

Plainly, what is needed in Nebraska is just oodles of policemen, as the World-Herald has pointed out before. There is no practice, no diversion, no outward and visible manifestation of the spiritual life that is within, that is safe and seemly to indulge unless there is police authority at hand to inspect and regulate it. There should be a policeman, a censor, a committee, some sort of agent of Gov. McKelvie's supreme State, present in every home. Who knows what may be going on behind that closed door? Freedom is dangerous, for the flesh is weak and the spirit infirm. What we need is regulation, official regulation, enforced by agents with gold stars and hickory clubs and long noses and peering eyes, who will have our every act under surveillance. Thus may we hope to grow to be a moral, righteous, sinless people. Thus only can the country boys and girls hope to rise to meet the high ideals of Omaha, which the honorable State Senate so wisely recommends for their emulation.

GOOD CAUSE; BAD METHODS.

From the New York World.

WITHOUT a cause Zapata could not have gone so far or held so long. His cause was, at bottom, the essentially just one that Mexican peons should not be made homeless by Diaz grants of vast tracts to favored corporations. This gave him strength, which during the brief time he was in power in the capital he used with unexpected mercy. But his field methods were those of the unlettered bandit; the end was destruction, ruin, downfall, death.

"NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE TO MAN."

(Translation from Horace.)

YOU, Seaborn Queen, that Cyprian waters sway,
You, Heavenly Twain, that leading blaze the way,
You, Monarch of the Winds, Japyga send,
Upon her course, my Virgil's ship attend.

The debt is yours, O Ship, that Virgil boast,
To you consigned and bound for Attic coast,
To bear him safe, and safety thence restore,
I pray, half of my soul to be once more.

An oaken chest and brazen ribs had he,
That ventured first upon the fearful sea,
In fragile boat, undaunted, though his sails
Were tossed by Aquilo and Afric gales.
Nor did his zeal the Hyades restrain,
Nor frantic Notus, sweeping o'er the main,
Whose rage aloft the waves of Hadria swayed
Or moment's breath its wildest waters stayed.

Nor visions of the deep withheld his way,
Though reaper grim marks him the monsters' prey,
Or, with a swelling wave, his vessel shocks,
Or, worse, with dread Acroceraunian rocks.
'Twas well, but vain, the all-wise God designed
The lands apart—by ocean wall confined,
Till that audacious man upon the sea
First sailed — transgressing heaven's decree!

Thus impious man forbidden things to share,
The direful wrath of heaven will heedless dare!
What evil hope did Japhet's son* inspire
To bring from heaven to man the eternal fire!

This wretched act to mortals brought amain
Consumption's scourge and fevers fitful train;
Before—man's final doom was long delayed—
But, now, his fated summons soon is made.

Lo, Daedalus essayed a flight in air
With wings well-wrought that mortals might not wear;
And Hercules, defiant, dared descend,
To Pluto's realms, from bonds to free his friend!
Presumptuous man all hazards dares defy,
And in his folly, seeks to reach the sky!
He, by his insolence, Jove's wrath provokes,
And from his hand the flaming bolt invokes!

EVENLY DIVIDED.

It was a mile over Mount Clemens.

The pilot of the plane from Selfridge Field was giving a visiting officer his first air voyage.

He cut off the motor.

"See those people?" shouted the pilot. "Fifty per cent of them think we are going to fall."

"They've got nothing on us," was the reply that streamed for half a mile back of the plane; "50 per cent of us do."—Detroit News.

It will not surprise anyone much that the Germans protest against the terms of peace to be imposed upon them. The Germans have long ago proven themselves incapable of looking at anything from an international point of view, and what is best for them as well as the rest of us must always meet their opposition. Nevertheless, the terms of peace will be imposed upon them, despite inferences from their protests that they should be in some way rewarded for having set the world aflame. There is no disposition in the terms of peace to take an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. The allies are merely making sure as may be made without sowing the seeds of wars to come that Germany suffers for her incredible misdeeds, and anything less than that is unthinkable. The trouble with the Germans is that they except themselves in every international relation. They are self-exempt from the operation of every law restraining the rest of us. However, as it has turned out, they have lost that case in the court of final resort; and they therefore stand penalized for crimes proven against them. Their protests that this is not in accord with the fourteen points is not going to be taken seriously anywhere outside of Germany. The fourteen points did not include any assurance that they were to get off scot free aftbringing civilization to the verge of destruction. Howl? Of course they will howl. They will even threaten to commit suicide by surrendering the government to the Bolshevists. But in the end they will crush rock or do whatever else the world thinks best for them and itself.

PLUGGING.

THERE'S a good old "slangy" word that of late is seldom heard
In this talk of high ideals and lofty dreaming.
'Tis a word of humble sound, not exclusive nor profound,
Never favored in the ranks of showy seeming.
'Tis a word that never thrills you, nor makes your senses throb—
This little word is "Plugging." Are you plugging at your job?

Few, indeed, may know the grandeur of the diplomatic board,
With its galaxy of statesmen keen and clever.
While a few may point the way to the newer, greater day,
All the rest of us must serve with plain endeavor.
There's a word that comes to face you when for favors you may ask—
This little word is "Plugging." Are you plugging at your task?

All the sages of the ages built their dreams through nights of toil,
With the will (men call it genius)
still to labor!
As on busy, patient pinions soars the lark above the soil,
So by working rises man above his neighbor.
Yes, one little word is parent of the two words "Making Good!"
That little word is "Plugging." Are you plugging as you should?

Unfolding of Peace Terms Show Germany Must Pay Greatest Price in History

Frank H. Simonds Points Out Empire Will Lose 20,000 or 30,000 Square Miles and More Than 6,000,000 Inhabitants.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS.
Author of "The Great War" and They Shall Not Pass."

PARIS, April 18.—The announcement that the Germans are coming to Versailles on April 25, serves to indicate that the conferences in Paris are drawing to a close, that a solution has been at least sketched for the largest problems that affect Germany. Five months and a half after the armistice the Germans will be asked to sign a treaty of peace. They will be allowed 15 days of grace, to expire on May 10, the anniversary of the treaty of Frankfort.

Two great great questions arise still unanswered, with the arrival of the Germans in sight. The first is: What exactly are the terms of peace? The second: Will the Germans sign? Neither question can yet be answered by any evidence at hand, although in every case so far as the peace terms are concerned a sketch has been put out officially or unofficially. We know Germany must recognize the loss of Alsace-Lorraine, the separation, at least temporarily, of the Saar coal region, of the surrender of the northern half of Schleswig, and nearly if not all of the Polish districts of West Prussia, Posen and Silesia. The fate of Danzig remains problematical.

Figures on Reparation.

As to reparations, it has been announced in all the French papers that the French solution, which would place the costs of the war—that is the costs of rebuilding the devastated areas in France and Belgium, replacing the ships of the allies sunk by submarines and of bearing pension charges—are to be borne by Germany. Many figures have been cited as an estimate, none seem to be exact. The sum of $5,000,000,000 is to be paid immediately; that is, within two years. Thereafter, according to a very intricate and complicated system of computing, the Germans are to pay large sums of money anywhere between $25,000,000,000 and $40,000,000,000, to meet the costs of restorations and the burden of pensions.

Finally German payments and performances are to be guaranteed by the occupation of the western bank of the Rhine for a long period of time, dependent upon the performance by Germany of her agreement, exactly as German troops occupied the eastern department of France after the Treaty of Frankfort.

As a supplementary guarantee, Germany is to be disarmed, forbidden to maintain more than 100,000 troops, the Rhine is to be the military frontier. For all time Germany is forbidden fortifications for troops west of the Rhine, while France, in due course of time, will retire within her own frontiers, thus leaving a zone politically German, but militarily neutral on either bank of the Rhine, and thus insuring France against a new invasion of her territory while she is still unprepared.

There remains one single great problem, probably settled, but concerning which no details have been published: Who is to mount guard on the Rhine during the years in which Germany will have to make reparation? France and Belgium certainly, but what of Great Britain and what of the United States? How long will our troops stay there, how long will the British? What guarantees will the English give of co-operation with the French if the Rhine is passed by German troops? What guarantee, if any, have we given?

Promises Please the French.

Some guarantees have certainly been given by the British, guarantees which are satisfactory to the French. Some kind of promise has been made by the President of the United States. How far-reaching or merely formal this promise is remains a great mystery. But it is true that both the British and American undertakings have pleased the French and brought better feeling and a sense of greater security than have existed in many weeks.

So far as affects Germany, the forthcoming preliminary treaty of peace will deprive her of between 20,000 and 30,000 square miles of European territory, inhabited by 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 of people, as well as of her colonies in Asia and Africa, amounting to more than 1,000,000 square miles of territory and from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 of people. It will disarm her. It will deprive her of her fleet. It will deprive her of her commercial marine. It will temporarily at least deprive her of the Saar coal region and it will place upon her a burden of between $25,000,000,000 and $50,000,000,000 to be paid as a reparation for her crimes in her war of aggression. Germany will lose her subject populations in Europe, that is the people of Alsace-Lorraine, the Danes of Schleswig, the Poles of the eastern provinces. She may ultimately be permitted to annex the German provinces of Austria, but this remains problematical, and there are many Germans who oppose such annexations, since it would raise for Germany many difficult questions. In sum, as a consequence of her attack upon the world, Germany will find herself disarmed, her economic machinery practically destroyed, so far as world markets are concerned, the iron districts of Lorraine, the coal districts of the Saar and the industrial regions of Upper Silesia gone. She will have paid the greatest price any country has ever paid in history for what must be reckoned the greatest offense against civilization of all time.

What Will Germany Do?

Now, brought face to face with these terms, will the Germans sign, following the example of the Russians at Brest-Litovsk, will they refuse to sign and offer passive resistance? Again, if they sign, will they sign in the spirit they signed the armistice and then, as in that case interpose every conceivable obstacle to its performance, compelling new efforts, raising new disputes, seeking to postpone payment until Great Britain and America are eliminated from the continent and France and Belgium stand alone in the presence of a superior enemy? Equally interesting is the question whether modern Germany will follow the example of Prussia after Jena, and, evading the provisions of this treaty as Prussia evaded the provisioin of the treaty of Tilsit, arm herself for a new struggle and seek to revive the traditions of Leipsic and Waterloo. These are great concerns for the future.

The weaknesses of the terms which stand out at the present time are to be found in the innumerable list of questions out of which disputes can and must arise. The Saar Valley solution is one of the most intricate of modern documents, recalling that Algeciras convention which was a prelude to Agadir and half a dozen Balkan settlements, which led without delay to new unsettlements.

Behind and underneath all material progress is that supplied by the league of nations. It is practically the guarantor of many material facts while, by rejection of all French amendments, it has deprived itself of all but moral force. Whatever may be the point of view at the present time, it is at least useful to present the European view of the league of nations. In both Great Britain and France it has been in all discussion of recent days subordinated to practical questions, and there is a universal tendency to regard the understanding between Great Britain, France and Italy, which more and more takes on the character of an alliance, an alliance which has at least the benevolent assent of the United States, as the real practical force.

Views on League of Nations.

In other words, in Europe the prevailing impression is that, after much preliminary negotiation, we have had recourse once more to the old system of alliance and balance of powers. It may be—as President Wilson and his friends, who have certain number of supporters in Great Britain, although few in France, believe—that the league of nations when is organized and begins to function will take on a character and have an influence which will steadily increase until it becomes all powerful and the moral writs which it issues will rule in every land. It is essential to bear in mind that this point of view exists and is strongly held particularly in certain American quarters, and it is equally important to recognize that it has been on the whole rejected so far by Europe possibly quite incorrectly.

When peace with Germany is signed, on or about May 10th, assuming the Germans do sign, there will remain all the great questions of the east and of the south, ranging from Russia to the Persian gulf, few of which have been more than opened so far. Only the Italian boundaries and claims are sure to be settled by the time German difficulties are out of the way, but at least and at last there seems a real possibility that we shall be at peace with Germany again in within a month and that the main business of the peace conference will be thus liquidated, although the map of Eastern Europe and western Asia will be still unmarked.

SAYS GERMANS COMMITTED 31 KINDS OF CRIME IN WAR

Nicholas Murray Butler Declares Teuton Scholars Must Show Contrition to Reestablish Selves.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Acknowledgment of Germany's wrongdoing and contrition by her scholars and savants for the "thirty-one kinds of crime" committed by the Germans during the war must be indicated before German scholarship and German science can be rehabilitated in the eyes of university men of France, England and America, Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, says in reply to a recent protest made by German professors against "the outrageous action" of the French high command in ordering German educators to leave the University of Strasbourg within 24 hours.

Reminding the protestors that "it is an established principle in England and the United States that anyone who comes into a court of equity seeking relief must come with clean hands, Dr. Butler declared that the allied people have not forgotten Germany's "amazing prostitution of scholarship and science to national lust," and that, before public sympathy can be expected the people of the allied nations want to know what measure of protest, if any, the rector and senate of the University of Leipsic recorded against "the inhuman treatment of the scholars of the University of Louvain and against the wanton and barbarous destruction of the liberty of that university."

PARTICULARLY significant is the opening of the Victory Liberty Loan campaign at Easter time, and to women it has an especial appeal. The rebirth of nature at this Easter is duplicated by the rebirth in all hearts of hope and joy again, of thankfulness that the war is ended and that once more we are living in a world of peace and security.

St. Louis women have a big share in the local campaign, as they will go from house to house in 24 wards and sell bonds. They did this last time with success and on all hands one hears expression from ward and precinct chairmen that there is indication of former records being broken.

One reason for this is that women have awakened to the possibilities of investments of their own and realize that by care and economy they can become bondholders and have no better investment than Government securities.

ONE of the most important weddings of the spring season was that of Miss Margaret Cassandra Jones to Sherman Leland Whipple Jr. of Brookline, Mass., which took place Friday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Webster Groves, with the Rev. J. Courtney Jones officiating. Miss Virginia Jones, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor, and little Irene Pettus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Pettus, the flower girl, with William Pickering Jones, the bride's young brother, as ring bearer. Milton Shaw Kimble of Bath, Me., a former classmate of Mr. Whipple, served as best man, while the ushers were the bride's cousin, Capt. Wilkins Jones, Lieut. Stephen Avery and Marriott Morrison.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding dinner at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. Whipple and his bride departed for the East, and after May 15 will be at home at "Clydehurst," the home of Mr. Whipple's father at Brookline, and later the couple will make their home in Webster, Mass.

Mr. Whipple prepared at Westminster School, Simsbury, Conn., for college, and had just entered Yale in the fall of 1916 when he left to go into overseas service as an ambulance driver in the French army. Later he entered the Transportation Division and when the United States entered the war he returned to Boston and entered the Harvard R. O. T. C., after which he was sent to Camp Lee, Va. Just before his commission was granted the armistice was signed and he was released from further military service.

Mr. Whipple's father, Sherman Leland Whipple, counsel for the United States Shipping Board, and his sister, Mrs. Lothrop Withington, formerly Miss Katherine Whipple of Brookline, came on to attend the wedding.

Miss Judge has traveled extensively both in this country and abroad, and before the war broke out made an extended tour around the world, with a party of which Mrs. Edwin T. Stanard, then Miss Edna Griesedieck, was also a member.

Since the outbreak of the war Miss Judge has been actively engaged in Red Cross canteen work and other war activities.

Mr. Cochran is a graduate of Princeton, class of 1908, and has recently been released from the service. No date for the wedding has been set, but it will probably take place in the near future.

The marriage took place at the Presbyterian Church in Joplin at noon and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Cleveland, pastor of the church. Comrade Writes That He Was Struck by Several Machine-Gun Bullets When Going Over the Top.

Miss Dorothy McVey of 2632 Park avenue is in receipt of a letter from John O'Rourke of G Company, 354th Infantry, in which he describes how her brother, Corp. William McVey, was killed in action in France.

The letter, written from Trien, Germany, Feb. 12, says in part:

"I was very close to your brother when he was struck by machine-gun bullets while advancing over the top on the morning of Nov. 2. The time I can't remember, but I don't think I shall ever forget the days of Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 and 2. I owe my life to the dear Lord for bringing me through such an awful barrage of big shells and everything that was in the Hun's power to check our advancement.

"Your brother was struck in several places. I bandaged up a wound in his thigh and had to leave him then as we were ordered forward, and when I returned there was no life. One thing you can be proud of, you had a brother who was one of the best and bravest who came across. He is buried on a hill about half a mile south of the village of Barricourt on the Argonne-Meuse sector with 15 other boys, who died similarly. All were buried on Nov. 2 or 3 and each has a nice grave and cross."

O'Rourke's home is at 5025 Wells avenue.

GASSED AFTER GIVING MASK TO ANOTHER

Sergt. W. J. Chaudet of 128th Artillery Arrives Home From Overseas.

Signal Sergeant William J. Chaudet of E Battery, 128th (St. Louis) Field Artillery home from overseas. He was slightly gassed on Oct. 2 when he gave up his mask to one of the men of his signal section, Private L. R. White of 3807 Fairview avenue. The action of the battle had dazed White, but Chaudet had the presence of mind to give White his own mask, and look for another for himself. He got one, but not until the gas had effected him.

He stayed with his battery for a couple of weeks, but his lungs weakened from the action of the gas, and he had to go to the hospital, remaining until a month ago, when he was invalided home and discharged. He enlisted in A Battery, the old National Guard organization, in August, 1917. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Chaudet, 3928 Lindell boulevard, where he lives with his wife. He is 28 years old.

Sergt. Chaudet was the head of a signal section of 25 men, which was charged with the task of keeping up inter-regimental communication, and the heaviest work of which came during battle, when the greatest difficulties were presented. The biggest battle the men of the Thirty-fifth participated in was in the Argonne Forest, starting on Sept. 26, when the 138th (St. Louis) Infantry, took Cheppy. A day later the 128th entered the town, as the infantry had advanced.

Lines Stone's Throw Apart.

"At Cheppy my men had to remove the bodies of almost a dozen dead Germans from the mouth of a dugout, so we could install our switchboard," Sergt. Chaudet said. "The Captain had picked the dugout as a good spot to protect our switchboard, and we had to get it in. There was some hesitation on the part of my men about removing the bodies, so I had to pitch in and start the job.

"We were so anxious to get our guns in action that we advanced to within almost a stone's throw of the German lines. The infantry had suffered such heavy losses that we were able to advance far closer to the enemy than ordinarily, in order to protect the front. The Captain said, 'If you fellows will stay, we'll stick it out,' so we stuck."

There were three troops of the Third (Regular Army) Cavalry attached to the Thirty-fifth Division, Sergt. Chaudet said, and on Oct. 1, the day the artillery was so far advanced, a cavalryman dashed from unit to unit, and said that orders were to retreat. It is thought that the cavalryman was a disguised German spy endeavoring to shatter our morale, but it was true that the American infantry was retreating, and it was then the Captain of E Battery decided to help fill the breach. Sergt. Chaudet said that his battery approached within 250 meters (about 300 yards) of the German lines at this time, but the next day the enemy barrage necessitated a retreat of one kilometer. One of E Battery's guns was blown to pieces.

Shelled Stringing Phones.

"Immediately upon pulling up near Charpentry on Sept. 30, I had set my men to installing the telephone lines," Sergt. Chaudet continued. "We had to run lines to the other batteries, and the battalion and regimental P. C.'s. We had very little wire, and were obliged to salvage some from the old German lines. Our guns were hardly placed in position when a German flew over and spotted our position. In a few minptes we were subjected to a terrific shelling.

"I was standing at the mouth of our dugout watching the infantry when a shell came over and knocked First Lieutenant Robert Drum of Kansas City and myself down the dugout steps. We came to a few minutes later, having sustained only bruises.

"When the gunners retreated on Oct. 2, I sent most of my men back with them, but kept. Corp. James Shelley, 3939 Maffitt avenue, with me. We repaired all the damaged lines and got everything in shape. When I was working on the battalion line, Private White came up. Just then the Huns were sending over gas shells and White had no mask. As soon as I saw his predicament I jerked my mask off and gave it to him. Holding my breath, I ran around trying to find one for myself, and found one at last. That night the gunners returned and gave the Huns a lively time. During the night we were relieved.

Shelled During Relief.

"During the relief I was chosen to precede the outfit to mark the roads. We had not been gone more than a few minutes when the Huns started shelling the road. As we were groping along in the darkness a shell exploded an ammunition dump a few yards from us and we were showered with fragments of shell. I was hit on the helmet half a dozen times, but not hard enough to penetrate. We were wearing our gas masks because the enemy fire consisted partly of gas shells, but the night was so dark that I could not see, so I took off my mask. The mustard gas fumes was very strong, and filled my lungs—the second gas episode I had. As soon as I could see my way, I proceeded, leaving markers on all doubtful points. The battery followed when the shelling let up a little. The next day we were at Varenes with a chance to rest and eat a little."

There were 16 lines on the section's switchboard, running to the various headquarters and observation posts. Together these formed a large amount of equipment, yet within 15 minutes after a marching order was received, the section of 25 men was in the habit of being on its way, so highly was their teamwork developed.

How Phones Were Used.

Over the phones at the front everybody was "mister" in order to keep enemy eavesdroppers guessing, and, moreover, no distinguishing mark of rank was permitted, Sergt. Chaudet said. Had insignias of rank been allowed, the German intelligence officers might have found the quizzing of American prisoners simpler.

Sergt. Chaudet was in army hospitals in France for about five months until about a month ago. He Sergt. Chaudet is a graduate of the college at St. Louis University, and was a mechanical engineer in the employ of the Davis Boring Tool Co., Spring avenue and Forest Park boulevard, prior to his enlistment. He has two brothers still in service. Capt. Felix Chaudet, 39, is in charge of transportation for the Seventieth Coast Artillery, and Corp. Robert Chaudet, 24, is in the band of the 128th Artillery, and acted as a runner in the fighting. Sergt. Chaudet was scheduled to go to an officers' training camp in France when the armistice was signed.

Sergt. Chaudet was discharged at Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., April 4. He came home on the French packet boat Roma from Marseilles in the company of about 800 others, including several old friends of his. He is recuperating now from the effects of the gas he was subjected to.

ENGLISHWOMAN SAYS EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE A JOB

en employers of domestic workers have been taught a severe lesson by the war. Their servants who went into munitions are refusing to come back to housework. I do not blame them. Yet conditions there were always better than they are here. In England domestic service is confined to a class, and where we have classes more definitely defined than you have here, each class has its class pride and boundaries which no other class overteps. In the great houses the servants were always well housed, they had their own sitting rooms, their half holidays and other rights, which employers were bound to respect. But even so, they know now that too much was required of them and they are not coming back to domestic service.

England's Domestic Service Reform.

"As a result a reformation of former conditions in those lines of work is on foot now in London, led largely by Lady Londonderry. The plan is a school for training expert domestic workers who can be hired by the hour or by the eight-hour day. One of the stipulations is that they shall be addressed as Miss or Mr., as they re entitled to be. Another is that ey shall have their hour off for ncheon, as other workers do."

"That will mean two or three shifts workers a day in households where nts must be attended to all the e," I suggested.

Either that or people will have earn to attend to their own s," she responded cheerily. "It O make for earlier dinners, simpler wg, all of which will be better for pll around."

BIG INCREASE IN BUSINESS OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

New York State Superintendent Attributes It Partly to Influenza Epidemic.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Life insurance companies now are handling more business than ever before, according to a report made public today by Jesse S. Phillips, State Superintendent of Insurance, which showed an increase of 100 per cent for the first quarter of 1919 over the same period last year.

The increase in applications for life insurance is believed by insurance men to be partly a result of the numerous deaths in the influenza epidemic last year, which caused many persons to obtain insurance to protect them against such hazards in the future.

So great have been the gains that eight New York companies may have to refuse further business after Oct. 1, when, according to a table compiled by Phillips, they will reach the limit set by law to the annual amount each company may handle.

D. S. C. AWARDED TO 47 OFFICERS AND MEN OF 35TH

Official Citations of Members of Missouri and Kansas National Guard Sent From France.

LIEUT.-COL. RIEGER AMONG THOSE NAMED

Acts of Heroism Were Performed in Argonne Offensive in Final Week of Last September.

Forty-seven officers and enlisted men of the Thirty-fifth (Missouri and Kansas National Guard) Division are named in an official list of citations received by the Post-Dispatch yesterday from the headquarters of the division in France. The Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded in each instance, being given to the nearest relative in cases where the man cited is dead.

In 13 of the cases the citations have previously been printed in the Post-Dispatch. These are: Second Lieutenant John D. Cosgrove, deceased, 139th Infantry; Sergt. Joseph Britton, deceased, I Company, 138th; Sergt. Frank A. Heueisen, A Company, 137th; Sergt. Willie A. Oldfield, I Company, 139th; Corp. Clayton H. Moore, Headquarters Company, 138th; First Sergeant John H. Fling, I Company, 138th; Barnard Stone, B Company, 138th; Col. Harry S. Howland, 138th; Bugler Charles B. Rymer, F Company, 138th; Bugler Joseph J. Coff, F Company, 138th; First Lieutenant Edward H. Price, 138th; Patrick F. Fleming, M Company, 138th, and Sergt. Albert E. Elsea, B Company, 129th Machine Gun Battalion.

Among the officers cited is Lieutenant-Colonel James E. Rieger, who is believed to be now in command of the returning 138th (St. Louis) Infantry. His citation, and the others not heretofore published, are as follows:

Lieutenant-Colonel James E. Riegler, 138th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Charpentry, Sept. 27. He commanded the battalion which had with conspicuous gallantry captured Vauquois Hill and the Bois de Rosignol and which was later held up for some hours in front of Charpentry by severe artillery and machine gun fire. He placed himself in front of all his men and thus starting them forward, led them to the attack with such speed and dash that a large number of the enemy were cut off and captured. Home address: Mrs. James E. Rieger. Kirksville, Moo.

Private Edgar H. O'Dell, Company K, 137th Infantry. Sept. 26. In the face of heavy machine gun fire he entered a building alone and captured 16 prisoners and four machine guns. He used an automatic rifle and hand grenades during his advance to the building, fire from which was checking our advance. Next of kin, Robert O'Dell, Oakfield Me.

Corp. Burtrus Kemmerer, Company H, 139th Infantry. Seeing his battalion Adjutant lying wounded several hundred yards in front of our lines and in great danger from heavy machine gun and rifle fire, Corp. (then private) Kemmerer, with a total disregard for personal danger, went to the assistance of this officer and succeeded in carrying him to safety. This gallant soldier was himself wounded while performing this heroic act. Home address, John Kemmerer, Carrolton, Mo.

Mechanic Benjamin E. Foust, Company F, 139th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Exermont, Sept. 29. "I'll Give You 3 Minutes To Remove Blackheads!"

A Secret About Removing the Beauty Destroyers Which Few People Know. Also the Way to Remove Superfluous Hairs by "Dissolving Them."

By Valeska Suratt

STEAMING the face has never yet resulted in the removal of blackheads. Steaming the face enlarges the pores of the skin. By what argument could it be said that blackheads would disappear for that reason? Does anyone expect them to fall out because the pores are larger? Neither can blackheads be entirely removed by pinching, because where there are large blackheads there are also smaller ones, sometimes to the extent of thousands. Here is a local treatment by which blackheads can be made to disappear in a few moments. A little neroxin sprinkled on a wet cloth, and rubbed on the blackheads, will make them vanish in a few minutes. You can easily convince yourself of this fact by trial. The neroxin can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents. Besides, it stimulates the skin and makes it fresh.

EVANGELINE—Why not use hydrolized talc on your armpits for that excessive perspiration? It far excels any liquid preparation and besides keeps the armpits normally fresh and does not absolutely dry them. Hydrolized talc can be supplied to you by any druggist for half a dollar, and it lasts a long while. Besides, it destroys all perspiration and other body odors.

MRS. F. G. B.—If beauty is only skin deep, so much more is the importance of making it as beautiful as possible. That muddiness may be very easily corrected, and you will find your freckles promptly disappearing, as well as all other blemishes by pursuing the following simple method. I have never known it to fail. Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and one ounce of zintone in a pint of water. A very rich, satiny cream will be the result. This should be used very freely every day. Nothing else will be necessary to give the skin a spotless and queenly beauty.

IN DOUBT—There is no use going about with hairy arms. You will be able to attend that dance without feeling embarrassed on that account, and you will have revealed to you a wonderful easy way to remove all superfluous hairs from any part of the body. This never irritates or reddens the skin. Moisten the hairs with a little sulfo solution and in a few moments all the hairs will dissolve away almost magically. Wipe off the dead hairs, and the work is done. There is nothing to get ready or to mix. You can get the sulfo solution at the drug store for about a dollar.

MRS. T. Y.—I know the difficulties of finding a face powder that is entirely free from chalkiness. Just try my own face powder for a while and I know you will appreciate it. "Valeska Suratt Face Powder," sold at drug stores for half a dollar in any tint. It is exquisitely and unusually fine.

WORRIED—The texture of your skin makes wrinkles very pronounced. You can quickly get rid of the wrinkles by using the new method given here. This has the effect of greatly refining the skin texture and as a result the pores of the skin are made smaller. When this occurs the skin takes on an added vigor and plumpness and at the same time small and deep wrinkles disappear promptly. It is surprising what a change it makes in one's appearance. Get two ounces of eptol from your druggist for about half a dollar, and mix this with one tablespoonful of glycerine in a half pint of water. No other wrinkle cream is necessary.

SORROWFUL—There is no question but that soaps dry up the secretions of the scalp and hair, and they also fail to remove the scale which forms in a film. The way to do is to dissolve this scale and let your hair breathe. This can be done easily by dissolving a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of water and used as a head-wash. Your scalp will be cleaner than it ever was before and your hair will have a silky sheen that is exquisite. There is enough eggol in a twenty-five cent package to last for many weeks.

BALDY—Your hair will absolutely stop falling and begin to grow in wonderful fashion if you will make up your own hair grower as follows: Add the contents of a one-ounce package of betaquinol, costing fifty cents at the drug store, to a half pint of water and a half pint of bay rum. This costs less than the hair treatments already prepared and always does the work. It will solve your hair problems once for all.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Women Find Clear Skin In Simple Laxative

A sense of false modesty often prevents women from admitting that many of her ills and disorders are due primarily to constipation.

But women who know themselves have learned that headache remedies and beautifiers only cover the trouble but do not dislodge it.

What is needed is a remedy to move the bowels and stir up the torpid liver. An ever-increasing number of sensible women take a small dose of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold by druggists under that name.

It will save a woman from the habitual use of headache remedies, skin lotions and similar makeshifts. Once the bowels are emptied and regulated, the headache and the pimples and blotches disappear. It is the rational, natural method.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin lasts a family a long time, and all will find use for it from time to time. Thoughtful people are never without it in the house.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 26 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

SYRUP PEPSIN

FREE SAMPLES—If you have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin send for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 468 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. If there are babies at home, ask for a copy of Dr. Caldwell's book, "The Care of Baby."

JUDGE SCOLDS A MONEY LENDER IN TRYING CASE

Refuses to Permit Him to Charge Borrower for Sending Duns to Him.

LONDON.—"Get away and deal with your wretched victims, but don't try to impose on me," was Judge Cluer's advice at Shoreditch County Court to a money lender who sued a London County Council employe for a loan obtained so long ago as 1908.

In addition to interest for the intervening period he now claimed $7.50 for making calls to try to collect the money and for letters written with the same object.

Judge Cluer: One thing is certain—you are not entitled to charge for "dunning" letters or for calls.

The money lender: But I had to call, as he would not pay.

Judge Cluer: I am very glad to see you are the victim this time, and not the other poor unfortunate. You are ashamed of your own name, as you trade under the name of a "Loan Office," and ashamed of your business, too, I should think.

"It is only because you are a wretched money lender that you impose on your wretched victims by charging for letters. They, poor fools, pay for it because they think they have to."

The Judge disallowed the charges, but allowed $1.62 interest from the date of the last payment, nine years ago.

ACT THAT WON D. S. C. 'NOTHING,' FLYER SAYS

Capt. S. L. Holland, Here for Tribute Day, Tells of Fights in Argonne Offensive.

Capt. S. L. Holland, 27 years old, of Bartow, Fla., winner of the Distinguished Service Cross for an exploit in the air while serving with the Twenty-fourth Aero Squadron under Capt. Maury Hill of St. Louis, who is here with the artillery exhibit to participate in the Tribute day gathering at Forest Park today, insists that he did nothing out of the ordinary and that his feat was all in the course of a day's work.

He and his pilot, Lieut. George E. Goldthwaite of Marion, Ind., ran into a concentration of German machine guns, had their gas tank burst, their landing gear shot away, were dazed by gas and had their plane riddled with bullets, but "it was nothing—merely in the day's work"—according to Capt. Holland, who told a Post-Dispatch reporter about it yesterday.

"It was on Oct. 15, during the Meuse-Argonne offensive, that Goldthwaite and I did the work for which we were awarded the Cross," Capt. Holland said.

Search for Massing Enemy.

"The staff of the First Army believed that the Germans were concentrating for a counter attack, and sent us out to learn the concentration point. We were in the air about one and one-half hours, flying low all the time, and finally found the concentration point, where a regiment of German shock troops was massing for the attack.

"At the same time we ran into a concentration of German machine guns and livened up. Bullets whizzed all around us, our gas tank was destroyed, our landing gear shot away and 16 bullets went through the fusilage between the pilot and me. He was grazed on the back by one, but neither of us was hurt. The plane was enveloped in gas, both cockpits being filled with it, and for a few minutes after we landed behind the American outposts we were a trifle dazed.

"It was only by clever maneuvering that Goldthwaite brought our plane down behind our lines, and when she landed her nose stuck in a shell hole. When we hit the ground we ran to a field telephone, got into communication with division headquarters, gave them the location of the German concentration point and they directed four batteries of field artillery to cut loose. The Germans simply were blown up and the attack was prevented."

On Nov. 5 Capt. Holland brought down the German plane with which he is officially credited. It was for his work in this fight that he and Lieut. Goldthwaite were recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross by Capt. Maury Hill. The recommendation was not acted upon, however, although Capt. Holland says the fight was a harder one than that in which he won his decoration.

Attacked by Five Fokkers.

"Five planes were ordered out on Nov. 5, on a photographic mission," he said, "but four of them failed to take to the air and Lieut. Goldthwaite and I went up alone. We crossed the lines, got our pictures and had started home when five Fokkers sighted us and swooped down for a fight. It was a long, running battle and the Fokkers literally peppered us with bullets, riddling our machines, but not hitting either of us. I gave one German a burst of fire and he fell. I was officially credited with his destruction. Our machine was not pursued after we crossed our lines, the Fokkers turning for home, but it was so badly damaged that it was salvaged."

On Sept. 26, during the Argonne offensive, Capt. Holland thinks he got his first German plane, although he was not officially credited with it.

"Lieut. Goldthwait and I had gone up alone," he said, "and we engaged a German two-seater. I gave him a burst of fire and saw the pilot tumble over into the cockpit. The machine went down in a sweeping rollaway, but I'm not to certain it was out of control and I was not given credit for its destruction."

Capt. Holland was detailed as an observer to the air service in May, 1918. Prior to that he was in the field artillery.

GEN. MAURICE TO SPEAK HERE THURSDAY NIGHT

British General Staff Officer to Spend Day in St. Louis This Week.

Major-General Sir Frederick Barton Maurice, director of military operations on the British General Staff for the last two years of the war, who is coming to St. Louis this week, is the first member of the allied high command to come to America since the armistice, and will give, officially, the story of the situation prior to the last German offensive about a year ago and the allied operations which resulted in bringing Germany to her knees.

It was at the first battle of Mons that Gen. Maurice first distinguished himself. Then a Lieutenant-Colonel, he was appointed chief of staff of the Third Division. Vastly outnumbered, this division fought until half wiped out. Then they fell back, fighting desperately and inflicting great punishment upon the enemy. Less than 5000 of the original 11,000 came out of this battle, but so important was the work done by the division that Gen. Maurice received the decoration of Commander of the Bath from King George in recognition of the achievement.

After the battle of Ypres and Neuve Chapelle he was made chief assistant to Gen. Sir William Robertson as chief of staff of the British army, and when Gen. Sir Douglas Haig succeeded Robertson as chief of staff Maurice was made director of military operations—in other words, chief strategist—for the British army.

Gen. Maurice will be in St. Louis only one day and will make but one address while here. He will speak Thursday night at Moolah Temple on "How the War Was Won," illustrating his talk by official photographs of the British and American battle front and some of the most important operations of the last few months of the war. The proceeds will go to a fund for relief of families of St. Louis men killed while fighting in the British and Canadian armies. These men, being soldiers of another flag than their own, their families are not eligible for relief from any of the regular American agencies and must be provided for by outside subscription.

ENTERTAINMENT FRIDAY FOR GERMAN PROTESTANT HOME

Annual Benefit Will Be Given at Odeon—Talented Musicians on Program.

The annual entertainment for the benefit of the German Protestant Orphans' Home, on St. Charles Rock road, will be given at 8 p. m. Friday at the Odeon, Grand and Finney avenues. A matinee will be given at 2 p. m. Saturday. Both performances will be under the personal direction of Miss Eugenia Getner.

The program includes some of the most talented singers, dancers and musicians in St. Louis, among whom are Mrs. Karl Kimmell and Miss Agnes Manda. A feature of the program will be a one-act comedietta, "You Win," in which Miss Manda will take the part of Mrs. Celia Grenville.

The German Protestant Orphans' Home was founded in 1858. It is open to all, making no distinction in regard to nationality or religion, and at present there are 221 children being cared for there. Last year it was necessary to borrow $4000 to conduct the institution, and the treasurer has recently been authorized to borrow an additional $2000 to meet expenses this year.

TRIAL OF 8 IN THE BIG MILK COMBINE STARTS TOMORROW

Men In Organization That Supplies Chicago Accused of Fixing Prices Contrary to Law.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Eight officials and members of the Milk Producers' Association will be placed on trial before Judge Gridley in criminal court here Monday for conspiracy to fix the price of milk in violation of the State food laws. The defendants are Charles H. Potter of Elgin, Ill., chairman of the Milk Board; Willis Kittle, secretary, and Arnold Huber, Frank H. Reese, William A. Goodwin, Robert M. Omann, Roy Lewis and Clinton J. Cooper.

The Association, comprising several thousand farmers in Southern Illinois, Western Indiana and Southern Wisconsin, furnishes Chicago's milk supply.

In October, 1917, officials of the Association asserted that production cost had increased and that farmers were conducting their dairy business at a loss. They raised the prices to Chicago wholesale dealers from $2.30 to $3.42 a hundred pounds and for a time conducted a strike to compel dealers to pay the new price. It is charged that farmers for a time destroyed large quantities of milk daily rather than sell it below the new rate. A serious milk famine in Chicago and suburbs followed, it is charged. Members of the Association finally won their fight and consumers paid the higher price.

The defendants were indicted on two conspiracy counts Feb. 28, 1918, and released on bonds of $10,000 each. At the request of the Federal Food Administration the States Attorney postponed trial until after the war.

Lutheran Hospital to Celebrate.

The sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the Lutheran Hospital, Ohio avenue and Potomac street, will be celebrated next Sunday at the Holy Cross Church at 8 p. m. The hospital was founded by Pastor F. Buenger at Broadway and Geyer avenue, and in 1883 the location was changed to its present site. Why Be Fat?

The answer of most fat people is that constant dieting is hard, continual exercise is tiresome, exhaustive—then, too, it might be harmful to force the weight down. That was the old-fashioned idea. Today in Marmola Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. Just a pleasant, harmless little tablet after each meal and at bedtime causes fat to vanish. This modern method is absolutely harmless, entails no dieting or exercise, and has the added advantage of cheapness. A large case of safe Marmola Prescription Table is sold by druggists at 75c. Or, if preferable, can be obtained by sending price direct to the Marmola Co., 64 Garfield Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce two, three or four pounds a week without fear of any bad after-effects whatever.

83 ST. LOUISANS GOING TO CHICAGO TRADE MEETINGS

Will Tell Gathering That This City Is to Be Center of Valley Activity in Foreign Business Fields.

MOVEMENT ALREADY UNDER WAY HERE

Delegates to Caucus for Solidity at Mississippi Valley Association and Foreign Trade Convention This Week.

Eighty-three men, representing virtually every line of industry and finance in St. Louis, will go to Chicago Tuesday night to say to the convention of the Mississippi Valley Association that if the association's purpose is to unite the valley for obtaining foreign trade, it is the purpose of St. Louis to become the center of that activity.

The Mississippi Valley Association was organized in New Orleans in January, with a declaration of industrial independence from the dominating trade influence of New York. It announced its purpose to divert the flow of valley commerce from its east-and-west course through New York to the more natural north-and-south course through New Orleans, and to further, for that purpose, the development of Mississippi waterways for export.

It announced its first measures for obtaining foreign trade would be the organization in the valley of a discount bank and an exporting and importing house.

Movement in Practical Shape.

Such movements now are on foot in St. Louis. The Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has said that the organization of a $25,000,000 corporation here to gather products in the valley and ship them to the world, and to gather world products and distribute them in the valley, now is assured. The St. Louis delegation will endeavor to get the indorsement of the St. Louis company as the trading house for members of the association.

An enabling act to permit the organization, also in St. Louis, of a $5,000,000 discount corporation, passed the Missouri Senate Friday. It is being fostered by a coterie of St. Louis bankers, headed by Festus J. Wade. Wade and from one to three representatives of all the larger St. Louis banks will attend the Chicago meeting.

The St. Louis delegation will caucus in Chicago previous to the opening of the convention at 10 a. m. Wednesday, and will march to the convention hall in a body, wearing badges, reading, "St. Louis in 1920," indicating their intention of bringing the convention of that year to St. Louis.

Following the one-day session, the St. Louis delegates will again caucus to determine what their demands in the National Foreign Trade convention, which convenes on Thursday for two days, shall be. The New York exporting interesests have from year to year dominated the National Foreign Trade convention. It is the intention of the new Mississippi Valley Association to break that domination this year.

St. Louis a Seaport.

John M. Parker of New Orleans, Progressive candidate for Vice President in 1916, is president of the Mississippi Valley Association, and it probable that New Orleans will be named as the permanent seat of the organization. The importance to St. Louis of a movement to develop foreign trade on north and south lines, is that this city, by the establishment of the Government River Service, now has been made a seaport of the United States. The bulk of valley exports are expected to move through here.

F. Ernest Cramer, chairman of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, will head the convention, and is named to conduct the special discussion at the convention on an exporting and importing company. The St. Louis delegation will include representatives of the Foreign Trade Bureau, the Credit Men's Association, the Furniture Board of Trade, the Chamber of Commerce, the Manufacturers' Association of St. Louis, the shoe industry and various other industries now engaged in export. Dr. Sebasto Sampaia, Brazilian Consul in St. Louis, and C. I. Luque, the commercial agent of the Mexican Government in St. Louis, will accompany the delegation.

The Modern View has just issued its annual Passover holiday number, consisting of 72 pages, in honor of the Jewish festival which is now being celebrated.

A special feature is the publication of the formal protest of 300 leading representative Jews of the United States, with their signatures, to the projected Jewish state in Palestine, giving their reasons for their opposition. The protest was handed by Congressman Julius Kahn of California to President Wilson, to be presented by him to the peace conference in behalf of American Jews.

Raymond Robins Tells City Club and Artists' Guild the Story of Russia

Man Who Spent Nine Months in Russia Under Changing Conditions Tells of Offers Made by Lenine and Trotzky to Reject German Peace Terms and Support the Cause of Allies, if They Were Given Assistance.

A DRAMATIC story of the soviets' rise to power in Russia, and a sensational recital of stupidity and blundering by the allies in Russia—blundering which finally converted the natural love of the Russians for the allies and America into hatred—was told by Raymond Robins before the City Club and the Artists Guild Friday afternoon and evening.

Robins spent nine months in Russia, three of which were during Kerensky's regime, and six under the present Bolshivik Government. During much of this period, he officially represented Ambassador Francis in his dealings with the Bolshevist officials. He has retained photographic copies of many of the official documents that passed through his hands.

Among the more startling of his statements about the Russian situation were the following:

Lenine and Trotzky agreed to reject the German peace terms and to renew the war against Germany, on condition that Great Britain and the United States promise the soviet government economic support. They delayed ratifying the treaty four days, waiting to hear from the British and American Governments. The word never came, and the treaty was ratified.

Lenine offered the American railroad mission half the available equipment in Russia to move war supplies back from the front, on conditions that the other half be used to move food into Russia. The allied military missions refused to have anything to do with the Bolshevist Government, the supplies were captured by the Germans and were used against the allies on the Western front in March and April of 1918.

There has never been the slightest evidence that Lenine or Trotzky were in German pay, and such a story, to those who have been in Russia, is absurd and preposterous. They deliberately risked their lives daily for the sake of their principles.

The story of the nationalization of women is a "contemptible and slanderous lie, and one of the most successful pieces of lying propaganda that has been used against the soviet government."

When American troops and the American flag went into Russia behind the Japanese flag and a Japanese General, they aroused the deepest racial hatred that there is in Russia, and drove millions of Russians into the ranks of the Bolshevists under the sacred battle cry of defending the soil of Russia against the historical yellow enemy.

"Campaign of Slander"

Robins made many other declarations which were in vivid contrast to many of the stories that have come, by one means or another, to the ears of American hearers. Moreover, he gave an explanation of why what he called "the most stupendous campaign of slander in history" has been waged against the soviet government.

There are three reasons, he said, why the soviets are lied about. One is because they have established a form of Government based on a principle entirely different from any heretofore upheld—a Government of workers. Second, he said, they have repudiated the French loans, which amount to 30,000,000,000 francs, which was loaned by France to the Czar's Government. Third, he concluded, is the danger that Bolshevism, with its program of self-determination, will spread across Turkestan, Afghanistan, and thence into India, thus endangering the British empire.

Robins declared that he does not believe in the principles of Bolshevism, but added that the United States is the only civilized country in the world today that is safe from it. So, he said:

"The way to answer Bolshevism's challenge is not with lying stories of atrocities that never happened, or with slanderous propaganda, but by a full and open discussion of the facts, and by removing the specter from the working man's table, and holding out to him the opportunity for a freer and a fuller human life."

Robins reached Russia in July, 1917, when Kerensky was in power. He departed last June.

"I found that Kerensky's Government had power in the cities," he said. "It did not reach into the life of the villages. When I got out into the villages, I would ask the representative of the Government for something. He would promise, and nothing would happen.

"Finally I learned that there was one way to get what I wanted. That was to apply to the head of the local soviet. These soviets are not new. They began about 200 years ago, and are somewhat like our old New England town meetings. Trotzky was chairman of one in Petrograd in 1906.

"Who's Who" on Raymond Robins

RAYMOND ROBINS, described in "Who's Who" as a social economist, is 45 years old, and had had a picturesque career. Born in New York of poor parents, he got his education in the country schools of Ohio, Kentucky and Florida. He was a miner, and went to the Klondike in the gold rush, where he "struck it rich." Much of his present ample fortune is a result of his "strike." He married Miss Margaret Dreier, who was perhaps more famous than himself as a social worker. He was Progressive candidate for United States Senator from Illinois in 1914, and chairman of the Progressive national convention in 1916. He is social service expert of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, has been a member of the Chicago Board of Education, and has been identified with many movements for improving the condition of the poor in Chicago, as well as a generous donor to such causes. He was a close personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt. He went to Russia as a Major in the Red Cross mission headed by Col. William B. Thompson of New York, and was promoted to Colonel in Russia. He lives in Chicago.

"The representatives are selected on two grounds—occupational and territorial. There are representatives from districts, and representatives from crafts. These elect the National All-Russian Soviet, which must meet at least once every three months. It selects an Executive Committee, comparable to our Congress. Over this is the Council of People's Commissars, a sort of cabinet, and the presiding officer at present is Lenine.

Soviets Are the Power

"The soviets are the living power in Russia. Bolshevism is merely a party program, which, because of the far-seeing wisdom of Lenine, has obtained the soviets' support. The soviets originally were overwhelmingly Menshevik, or moderate Socialist. The Bolshevik program may fall—the soviet will always be there. It is the base of all power in Russia.

"There are two kinds of minds in Russia: The 7-per-cent-tea-table mind, all of whose sympathies were with czarism and its privileges, and the outdoor-93-per cent mind, which was the new Russia. Of course, under the Cazr, it was the 7 per cent which the allied diplomats knew. And, after the 7 per cent had been kicked out, the allied diplomats still knew them, and they still had the ear of the allied diplomats. That is why we blundered in Russia.

"The allies were cursed in the eyes of the revolutionary Russians to begin with," he continued, "because they had been allied with the Czar. The Russian peasant knew that the Czar hadn't been fighting to make the world safe for democracy, and it was hard to convince them that his allies were. There were three things they wanted—bread, land and peace.

"The one big reason why the Russian soldiers deserted from the trenches was because they wanted to be back at home when the land was divided up."

The Red Cross mission was then working desperately to help Kerensky keep the soldiers in line. Money was needed for propaganda. None was available. "It was then that Bill Thompson, an American gentleman and a patriot, took $1,000,000 out of his own pocket and put it to our credit to fill the breach and hold the line," Robins declared dramatically. "That is the same million to which, since I returned to this country, I have heard men refer as 'the million Thompson gave the Bolsheviki!'

Waited Three Weeks

"We cabled the Government for $10,000,000 in all haste. The poison was working in swift and deadly fashion. In three weeks we got a polite reply saying the Government was 'interested' and was sending a man from the Committee on Public Information to Russia to inquire into the situation. Well, he got there," he added grimly, "just two weeks after the Bolshevist Government was established.

"I went to see Kerensky. I shall never forget the sight of that strained face, those nervous hands, that poor frame bowed under the heaviest burden carried that day by any man in the world—not a great man, but a good one, a genuine patriot. I shall never forget his agonized wail:

"'The allies are making me talk Western European liberalism two-thirds of the time, when I have to talk Russian Slavic Socialism at least one-third of the time to stay alive 24 hours!'"

Robins and Thompson agreed, he said, that the only thing that could save Kerensky was recognition of the soviets. He said he asked Thompson whether they had better consult Ambassador Francis about it. "He looked at me a minute, and replied, rather dryly, 'No, I don't believe we had.'" Robins said.

"And I want to interject, right here," said Robins, "that my observation taught me that if there is one thing the representative of a Western democracy likes in the East, it is a palace, and if there is one thing he likes better, it is a Prince; and if there is anybody he likes better than a Prince, it is a Princess."

A meeting of the allied military staffs was called to discuss what could be done to save the situation for the allies. Robins declared that Gen. Knox, head of the British mission, spoke. He denounced the Kerensky government for its weakness. The French General followed him, and ended by declaring that the Russian soldiers were cowardly yellow dogs.

"Then the Russian General rose, white-faced, quivering under the insult, and walked from the room, with his sword clanking at his heels," said Robins. "I had seen him quell stark mutiny in his barracks; I knew him; I have never known a braver man.

Russian General Quits

"Gen. Knox said what Russia needed was a military dictatorship, and that was what it would get. I told him, if I was not badly mistaken, we'd all get a dictatorship of a much different kind, pretty soon.

"He said to me, 'Why, you mean Lenine and Trotzky and that soap box crowd! The way to deal with them is to shoot them at sunrise.' And that is the way our conference ended on Friday.

"Three days later, on Monday, the Bolshevik troops took the fortress of Peter and Paul at the point of the bayonet. On Tuesday they controlled the telephone, telegraph and railroad systems. They stormed the Winter Palace on Wednesday, and at 2 a. m. Thursday they had called the first All-Russian Soviet, had issued a decree socializing industry and dividing the land, and had placed Lenine and Trotzky at the head of the Government, where they have been ever since. That is how far behind the rush of events the military missions were.

"And now, I want to make this statement, at whatever peril it involves: I saw Nicholai Lenine and Leon Trotzky an average of two or three times a week for six months. They never broke a promise they made to me; they never made a hypocritical statement to me, and they kept their word with me even when it cost them something to do it.

"I want to say that I sent 32 carloads of supplies to our ally, Rumania, through districts controlled by the Bolshevists and suffering from famine; the supplies were guarded by Bolshevist rifles, and they got to their destination in record time, a thousand miles away, and not a pound was missing.

Supplies Well Guarded

"Leon Trotzky, at my request, stopped and confiscated 53 carloads of metals which were being sent into Germany through Finland.

"He was always frank with me. He was not friendly to the allies or to the Central Powers. He was interested solely in a world social revolution. But he did fear the military autocracy of the Central Powers more, because it was nearer to him.

"He told me he was willing to let the allied officers enforce the embargo against Germany. He did so for purely selfish reasons, but the advantage to us was just as great. The allied military missions refused. They said they would have nothing to do with such murderers and cutthroats as the Bolsheviki. Besides, they said, the Bolshevist Government couldn't last six weeks.

"Then Lenine offered to let the American railroad mission take entire charge of the Transsiberian Railroad between Vladivostok and Ekaterinburg, and to move the supplies away from the front, and to move food into Russia. That too was turned down, for the reason that 'Lenine and Trotzky couldn't possibly remain in power six weeks.'

"This opportunity lay untouched before us for six weeks. Then the Brest-Litovsk conference failed, the German army swept forward capturing all those vast stores of guns and ammunition, and those guns were used to hurl that ammunition to kill British, French and American boys on the Western front in March and April, 1918.

"In all my dealings with Lenine and Trotzky, I was acting under the instructions of Ambassador Francis. I took a copy of these instructions, and I had him initial them. I am glad now that I did so. He doesn't seem to be so good a friend of mine back here as he was in Russia. But I have the record. I have the original instructions, and I have six photographic copies of them buried here and there."

Then came the story of the Brest Litovsk terms. "Lenine and Trotzky denounced the terms. Trotzky left the conference and never did return," Robins said. "It never was called anything but a robbers' peace; a peace of violence and force; a Perspective Showing Variety of Methods for Treating Different Blocks in the Plan Suggested by Messrs. Bartholomew and Herding.

Theoretical Treatment of Eight Blocks Shows How Excellent Apartments at Moderate Rent Could Be Provided for Hundreds of Families and the Region Made Highly Attractive Franz Herding, Town Planner, and Architect.

IN addition to demands for better pay and shorter hours upon the part of organized labor in numerous countries during and since the war, has also come a demand for better living conditions. This means better homes and better home environment.

The tenement and the slum are an outgrowth of bad industrial conditions and bad municipal conditions. Present-day civilization demands their elimination. They will be supplanted only when its has been proved that more substantial places of residence can be built in an economical manner.

As a result of the lack of building during the war period, there is now a more or less pronounced shortage of housing facilities in most of the large cities in the United States. The character of houses that are apt to be built to supply the increased needs of the community will depend upon the extent of the community's interest in the general housing problem.

Before the war and particularly during and since the war the better housing for working people has been a national issue in England. Previous to the war the movement took the form of what were called "garden cities," and certain industrial towns built near large industrial plans. The English Government is committed to the building of at least 500,000 houses for working people following the close of the war. These houses and their environment will be carefully planned and built in accordance with the best standards of healthful living conditions. This virtually means that housing will practically become a Government function and the building of houses on so great a scale will create a demand for nothing but the best type of low cost houses wherever they may be built, either by public or private enterprises. Already a considerable number of blocks in the congested district of the city of London have been razed, the slums eliminated and in their place have been erected new homes for working people very much after the plan herewith suggested.

Housing never became a serious factor in the national life of the United States until the outbreak of the war. The tremendous percentage of labor turnover in the shipyards and the large war industries made it necessary for the Government to undertake the construction of homes so that men working in the shipyards and muhitions plants could find suitable places in which to live and thereby enable them to remain and engage in the very necessary war work.

Fifty Towns Built for Workers.

Over 50 towns ranging from a few hundred to several thousand houses each were built through appropriations made to the Department of Labor (later known as the United States Housing Corporation) and to the Shipping Board for this purpose. Practicaly for the first time in the United States the best architectural and engineering talent was concentrated upon the designing of low cost houses which would furnish the most desirable living conditions. Many of these towns were completed in a very short space of time and while the unexpected signing of the armistice caused a curtailment of the work on some of them, a sufficient number of completed houses was built to demonstrate the practicability of low cost housing in the United States. Unfortunately none of these towns was built near St. Louis to serve as an example for future housing standards here.

For ten years St. Louis has made no advance in the housing field. Many houses have been built but they are the same types that were being built ten and twenty years ago Perhaps the last statement should be qualified by saying that one new type of dwelling has been developed in the form of a high class tenement, better known as apartment or efficiency apartment houses. In these latter a tremendous overcrowding of the land is developing—in some cases more than 1000 people to the acre, or a density of population greater than exists in our present tenement house districts in the eastern part of the city.

Change Wrought in 40 Years.

St. Louis has probably suffered more from a shifting of large residential districts than any other great American city. Less than 40 years ago the entire city of St. Louis was east of Grand avenue. Today at least two-thirds of the city's population is to be found west of Grand avenue. Immediately east of Grand avenue in the central section of the city was formerly the finest residential district. In that great central residential district today are nothing but boarding houses, vacant property and a large colored residential district. Tremendous losses have occurred in residential values. During the past five years less than ten permits have been issued for new residences or substantial repairs to existing dwellings in this central residential district which lies east of Grand avenue and between Market street and Cass avenue. The expansion of commerce and industry cannot begin to absorb all of the residential property that has been abandoned. The question, therefore, is continually asked "What is to become of this district?" and, "is it probable that any of this district can be rehabilitated for residential uses?"

Radical Changes Are Needed.

This latter question can most assuredly be answered in the negative if our future housing development is to proceed along the lines of the past. The present monotonous rows of flats and tenements and converted mansions are not merely unattractive places in which to live but they are not adapted to the present needs of the community so far as living conditions go. Much more desirable and attractive surroundings can be secured for little or no increase in cost in the newer residential districts to the west or to the north and south, so that people do not now care to live in the old district. The only way to rehabilitate the district east of Grand avenue is to create a thoroughly new environment. This can be done only by tearing down existing buildings and through the reconstruction of a portion of the district with new types of homes having good surroundings This means large scale operation, the razing and upbuilding of at least four, six or eight blocks as a self-contained community. This in turn raises the question as to whether such a large scale operation is practical and economical. In order to answer this question intelligently the writers of this article have made a careful study of a selected area of six blocks in the district east of Grand avenue, the results of which are presented herewith.

Large Operating Company Necessary.

If such a plan were to be carried out, a large operating company would be necessary, having ample funds at its disposal. Before attempting to undertake such an operation the company would first have made a careful study of general living conditions in the community to determine the number of families that could be expected to be accomodated; the number of rooms they would require, the rental they could pay, whether the location chosen would be accessible to their various places of work, etc. The operating company should be supported by funds raised by the community at large, being limited to a profit of not more than 6 or 8 per cent over and above operating, depreciation and maintenance cost.

Because of the unusual high cost of property, it would not be possible to go into the more desirable forms of detached dwellings that could be built on lower value land. The character of the dwellings built, therefore, would approach more the present form of apartment houses with larger, lighter rooms, more sanitary conveniences, better neighborhood conditions and generally better living environment than it is now possible to obtain in low price living quarters. Under these conditions the operating company would probably be forced to lease rather than sell its properties, maintaining a sufficient control over the entire development to insure the continuance of its operation as a complete desirable and self-contained neighborhood.

800 Apartments in Six Blocks.

In the plan, as shown herewith, in part covering an aera of six blocks, there would be 800 four and five room apartments, and 200 two and three room apartments. Each apartment would contain a well constructed and modernly equipped bath room, a combined living and dining room of size approximately 12' 2"x16' 6", a kitchen 18¼'x13¼', bed rooms of size 13'x14' or 11'x17'.

The apartments would be only two rooms deep, insuring adequate light and air. They would be so arranged as to have cross ventilation, which is very desirable. Ample closets would be provided in all of the rooms. One of the most desirable features of the apartments would be their arrangement with kitchen, bath and bedroom facing the street and living room and another bedroom facing the open interior of the block, which would be so planned as to offer an exceedingly attractive outlook.

A balcony or sun parlor overlooking the interior of the block would also be provided. The interiors of the blocks would be free from backyard fences and sheds, being planted with grass and trees and provided with playgrounds and other recreational facilities. The buildings would be of fireproof construction, each apartment having separate entrances upon a thoroughly fireproof hallway.

The present plan is nothing more than a suggestion. In this instance, however, it was found desirable to plan four-story buildings, in order to secure the necessary number of apartments. It probably would be found more desirable to build the structures in units of 16 to 24 apartments possibly, and arrange these other than in rows in order to overcome what might be considered a somewhat monotonous feature of the row-type house in the present plan.

Numerous Community Features.

One of the interesting features of the present scheme is that numerous community features have been provided so as to make of the entire scheme a self-contained community. These features include a hotel of 250 rooms, a Y. M. C. A. containing 50 rooms, Y. W. C. A. containing 50 rooms, numerous stores and offices at the more important street intersections, a theater, community house, gymnasium, swimming pool and bath house, bowling alleys, nursery and shelters. With all of these various features it would be possible in such a large area as is being planned, to create an environment sufficiently attractive and self-contained to make it a desirable place of residence. It might even be located near enough to the downtown commercial and industrial districts to permit of walking distance between.

Property Would Cost $1,500,000.

In order to determine whether such a plan as is herewith proposed could actually be carried out, an estimate was made on the probable cost of acquiring all the property within the six blocks considered, tearing down existing buildings and the rebuilding of the area with the new buildings herewith described. A model of the district was prepared. Careful estimates of cost were made for the building of these houses and various community features.

It is estimated that to acquire the property involved would cost approximately $1,500,000. Other locations than that chosen for the present study might be secured at a lower figure, and would reduce the cost of acquiring the property which is unusually high in the present instance, but the present location along Olive street was selected as being one of the most difficult places to develop. By choosing a difficult problem such as is presented by property along Olive street, it was felt that if the housing development plan could be made a financial success, similar developments of less expensive property east of Grand avenue would be unusually good financial investments

Total Cost $2,660,000.

At the present cost of building materials it is estimated that the entire community planned could be built for $2,660,000, of which sum $2,100,000 would be for the houses and heating plant, and $560,000 for other shameful peace. But the Germans were marching on Petrograd.

RAYMOND ROBINS TELLS CITY CLUB STORY OF RUSSIA

"It was then I drew up a paper (and Robins showed a photographic copy) stating that if the British and the United States Governments would promise economic support, the soviet government would reject the humiliating terms and renew the fight against Germany. I put the paper before Trotzky as a proposal. He said he would agree to it. I asked him to sign it, and he replied:

"'My God, man, do you want my life? I promise you that I agree to it. I have never broken my word, and the Germans are 30 miles from Petrograd.' It was true. I accepted his word and asked him if Lenine would agree. Trotzky said he would, and Lenine did. Both promised, in the presence of myself and another person, to live up to the agreement. Then I saw Lockhart, the head of the British special mission. He had been sent there after Thompson had talked for two hours with Lloyd George. Thompson couldn't get two minutes with President Wilson, but the head of the British military mission and the British Ambassador had been recalled on the strength of what he told Lloyd George.

"Lockhart agreed that it was a good proposal. He cabled his Government a recommendation that they accept it. Harold Williams, a newspaper correspondent, and a confidential agent of that Government, also cabled such a recommendation, although he was bitterly anti-Bolshevik.

"The head of the Associated Press in Russia and the head of the National City Bank in Russia also cabled their respective organizations in the United States that the proposal was a good one, and should be accepted. I made the same recommendation to our Government, and Ambassador Francis sent two cables, copies of which I have." Robins did not say, however, what recommendations the Ambassador made.

"Then we waited to hear from home. I asked Lenine for more time, and he postponed the meeting of the ratification convention two days. Then I asked more time, and Lenine prolonged the debate two days. We waited, wearily, hoping desperately, prayerfully, for the word from Washington or London. Nothing but silence.

"At last Lenine arose, in his little back office.

"'It is no use,' he said sorrowfully. 'Your Governments prefer the German Kaiser to revolutionary Russia. I shall ask the convention to ratify the treaty. We will get back what the robbers have stolen whenever the opportunity comes.'

"Then," Robins said, "I was recalled. I learned later that my recall was recalled, and I was ordered to stay, but it was too late. I had gone. The allied missions were horrified when I told them I was leaving by way of Siberia. They told me Lenine didn't have a shadow of authority 500 miles from Moscow; that Siberia was filled with lawless marauding bands. Well, I didn't believe it.

"I left last May, in a special car, carrying valuable state documents, and sealed papers for business concerns. I carried a letter from Lenine. In that 6000 miles, my car was not inspected once; I was treated with the utmost courtesy by Soviet officers; I found the railroad in better condition than when I entered Russia, and I made the trip in entire comfort. That was what Lenine's letter did for me."

"After that," he continued tersely, "came intervention by the allies through Siberia. It was stupid, futile and fatuous. As a military proposition, it was impossible. No military man would ever give it serious thought for a moment. A French official admitted this to me, but said:

"'Russia owes France 30,000,000,000 francs. What difference if the allies do win the war on the western front, if France loses the savings of a hundred years. If we didn't intervene, we couldn't keep the French peasants in the trenches three months.'

"American boys and American officers and the American flag went into Russia behind a Japanese General and behind the Japanese flag. When we did that we lost all the admiration Russia had for America. We turned against ourselves the deepest cultural instinct which the Russian people have. They have been fighting the invasions of the Tartars, the Mongols and the yellow races for thousands of years.

"Russians who had opposed the Bolsheviki Government bitterly, rushed to it, and rallied under the red flag to the battle cry of 'Defend sacred Russia from the yellow scourge.' We threw away the friendship of a great people, and, not only that, but we started whatever atrocities followed.

"The people asked: 'Who is it that brought in the yellow dogs on prostrate Russia?' and the answer was: 'The bourgeoise.' Then it was that the bourgeoise suffered. And it was not from the Bolshevist Government that they suffered, but at the hands of enraged, patriotic Russians."

Robins then briefly told of his return to America. He said he refused to speak, because he knew the truth would injure the morale of the fighting forces. He endured the taunt of cowardice, he said, until after the signing of the armistice, then he laid all the facts before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee.

"I do not believe that Bolshevism is a sound social principle," the speaker summed up. Its development is reasonable to those who know the history of Russia. It has no place in America. The fact that we have injustices is due to bad practice, not to bad theory. Our theory of righting wrongs through the ballot is right.

"But the world is shaking before the challenge of Bolshevism. It has a powerful appeal. Some of those who jeered at the 'long-haired poets and the soap-box speakers' have wallowed in the bloody dust. Their bodies have darkened the surface of a dozen rivers, and the gutters have run with their blood in Petrograd, in Moscow, in Berlin, in Munich and in a dozen other of the great cities of the world.

"Lloyd George cannot enforce the plain letter of the law against the mutinying sailors at Dover, because the workers will not suffer it. Clemenceau's fame is safe—grand old man—but his work is done. France today has a Socialist majority. Only a few days ago 100,000 Frenchmen marched down the Champs Elysees under red flags, and laid wreaths on the bust of Juares, the murdered Socialist leader, and the gendarmes did not fire a shot.

"The Italian Government is a shell masquerading over a rumbling volcano. Only the United States is safe. Only we have time to answer the challenge of Bolshevism.

"The answer is not lies and slander; it is not the suppression of free speech and free press. It is a full discussion of the facts, and a better human life for those who work.

"The Czar had the best force attack on ideas in the world's history. He had the Black Hundred, the secret police, the Cossack whip and sword and the power to send hundreds overnight to the life and death of Siberia, without trial. His relentless hand reached with cruel force to the most remote hamlet. He was head of the church. And what is the answer?" Robins' voice rang through the crowded room.

"What is the answer today—Lenine in the Kremlin—Trotzky in the imperial palace of the Czars, and Bolshevism — triumphant, overwhelming Bolshevism—in almost undisputed power!

"The answer in America is a sound policy of reconstruction; a holding out of the hand to the downtrodden and exploited. It is the changing of conditions so that men may not need to wonder from one day to the next where their bread is coming from.

and where their heads will rest. It is the opening up of opportunities to the many that have been enjoyed by a privileged few.

"If this Government was fairly represented by some non-union coal mines that I know, and by some rotton police courts that I know, it would better be overturned. But it is not. America remains, as a whole sound and healthy. We believe in American ideals—it is time to carry them out. When the employer learns that he is his brother's keeper, and when priest and minister learn that the only living church is a serving church, then, and not until then, can we bid the coming generations hail."

As Robins finished his eloquent peroration, a thunder of applause swept through the City Club dining room. Men crowded from all sides to shake his hands, and to ask additional questions. He gave out printed copies of his recommendations with regard to Russia. They follow:

1. Lift embargo on all Russian fronts.

2. Enter into direct negotiations for an armistice on all fronts where allied or Czech forces are engaged.

3. Insist in armistice negotiations upon general political amnesty to be declared and guaranteed by both sides, allied forces to be retained in Russia solely for the purpose of enforcing such guaranties and to be used after signing of armistice in reorganizing and operating Russian railways primarily for transport of food supplies throughout Russia.

4. Send relief through American Red Cross to Petrograd and Moscow immediately upon signing of armistice.

5. Send commission of inquiry with industrial and trade experts to Moscow to ascertain and report on present situation in Soviet Russia and best means of bringing social peace, economic reorganization and relief to all the people of Russia.

At the Artists' Guild last night Robins answered questions put to him about various phases of the situation.

He described Lenine and Trotzky as very different. Lenine is a calm, far-seeing, rather kindly man, with a profound knowledge of human nature, and particularly of the Russian character. He has a ready wit and a remarkable faculty of coolly meeting difficult situations, Robins said. He is very unassuming in pose, and usually wears an ordinary sack suit and a woolen shirt. He said Lenine5s faculty of analyzing conditions, and providing for the future, was almost uncanny. It was almost impossible to suggest something to him that he hadn't already thought of, Robins related.

Trotzky he described as a brilliant, keen, comprehensive thinker on international conditions, who, he said, would instantly sacrifice Russia or any other one nation for the purpose of carrying out his principles of world-wide socialism. Trotzky is not so calm as Lenine, he said, nor is he so thoroughly Russian.

One of Robins' hearers asked if "women in Russia have the same right to vote as they do here?" During the laughter that followed, he replied that the women of Russia have the same right to vote as men.

As to professional men, some of them have the vote, and some do not, he said. Physicians, dentists, teachers, engineers, writers and the like to have their own Soviets and vote, being listed as "producers." As to lawyers, he said, "there is nothing doing. The Russian's opinion of lawyers are that they are parasites." They cannot vote unless they work at something else.

He was asked if the peasants have supported the Soviet Government, and whether they have worked well under it. He replied:

"Lenine, with characteristic wisdom, allowed each local Soviet to divide the land among the peasants in its district. They hold their land through the Soviets. Will they support them? Answer yourself. As to production, the 1918 crop in Siberia was the greatest in its history."

Answering a question about the church, he said that it is dead in Russia. He related that it always had been the Czar's custom to order every newspaper to print, on Easter morning, in large letters on the front page: "Christ Is Risen." On the first Easter after the revolution every newspaper of the new order carried across its front page the words: "One hundred years ago today Karl Marx was born." Marx, of course, was the Socialist teacher on whose doctrines the Soviet republic is mainly founded.

He said that what terrorism there was did not start until after the invasion by the Japanese, which, as he had said, was blamed on the business men. Jacob Peters, the official who is reported as having signed thousands of death warrants, is a very pleasant Lett, who formerly resided in England and whose wife and four children are there now, the speaker said.

Robins said he had often eaten with Peters, and that Peters had, at his request, released a number of political prisoners of noble birth who had undoubtedly plotted to overthrow the revolutionary government.

As illustrating the reports circulated here about Russia, Robins told of being approached by a Senator who showed him a newspaper which stated that Lenine and Trotzky were fleeing toward Murmansk; that the Soviet Government was overthrown and that Korniloff and Kaledines were marching on Moscow with two divisions of Cossacks. Robins said the Senator wanted to know what Robins, then recently returned, had to say about that. His reply was, he said:

"My experience has taught me that Lenine and Trotzky are about the last men in Russia to run anywhere; Murmansk certainly is the last place they would run, as they would be shot when they got there; Kaledines stood on his front porch and blew out his brains three months before I left Russia, and Korniloff was killed by his own troops a month before I left. With those exceptions the story may be true."

PRESIDENT OF PANAMA SAYS COUNTRY IS BEING TRADUCED

Porras Denounces Statement Criticising Moral Condition of Isthmus and Says Panama Is Clean.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Former Senator Thompson of Kansas, received today an open letter from President Porras of Panama, denouncing as unwarranted statements made in a letter inserted by the Senator in the Congressional record at the last session from Brigadier General R. M. Blatchford, commanding general of the Canal Zone, and a statenint by Major Wells, Judge Advocate General, criticising moral conditions in the zone and in the cities of Panama and Colon.

Such statements, President Porras wrote, were the "most unfair insult that this country could possibly receive from any source." He criticised Thimpson's action in putting the communication in the record saying: "Such action on your part simply means the most humiliating disregard for the position that Panama, although a very small nation, indeed, has assumed as a friend and ally of the United States, placing at that nation's disposition her territory, together with all her resources."

The President further declared that the statement of the officers could "only be taken as another proof of the ignorance of Americans in general with reference to everything relating to conditions in Latin-America and to the prejudices of certain high seated officials, whose positions should render more diplomatic and discreet."

JUDGE TAYLOR TO NAME MEN IN STREET IMPROVEMENT

Commissioners to assess damages and fix the assessment district for the establishment of King's highway from Easton avenue to Penrose Park will be appointed by Circuit Judge Taylor tomorrow. The stretch is 16 blocks and will make King's highway a continuous boulevard from Forest Park to Penrose Park.

The work will cost approximately $165,000, according to W. W. Horner, engineer in the Department of Streets and Sewers.

It is planned to make a double roadway of asphalt, each side 27 feet in width, with an ornamental parkway of trees and shrubbery in the center. The width of the parkway will vary at different points from 25 to 60 feet.

The project was begun in 1909, but was held up by litigation started by objecting property holders, who alleged, among other things, that the ordinance providing for the improvement was void because it designated the work as a street widening proposition instead of a boulevard scheme. The Supreme Court upheld the ordinance.

Spanish War Veterans' Meeting.

The Department of Missouri of Spanish War Veterans will hold a muster at the armory, Grand avenue and Market street, tomorrow at 8 p. m. Arnold Meyer, Department Commander, has requested all members to be present in uniform.

Adjutant-General Harvey C. Clark, Assistant U. S. Treasurer, W. D. Vandiver, Maj. Allan Showers of the G. A. R., the Rev. E. Combie Smith and Mayor Kiel will speak. Members of the North St. Louis Turning Society will present Grecian dances, and the Jefferson Barracks Band will play.

PREDICTS THAT LABOR WILL SEEK TO CONTROL

Dr. H. W. Laidler Declares That Next Struggle in Human Affairs Will Be Industrial.

A forthcoming industrial war, in which labor will seek to gain control of industrial affairs, was forecast by Dr. Harry W. Laidler of New York, secretary of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, in an address on "A New World in the Making," at a noon luncheon yesterday at the City Club.

"The next struggle in human affairs," said Dr. Laidler, "will be an industrial struggle in which the workers will attempt to obtain control over their own industrial affairs. There is a feeling that under our competitive system lies chaos and tremendous waste. It has been declared in New York that that city wastes $250,000,000 in distribution of food. If society could do away with the jobber and the middlemen and the distributors securing their share of tribute it would offer, perhaps, a way to the realization of a proper fullness of life for the workers with opportunity for them to obtain proper education and development."

"The tendency of labor in America," Dr. Laidler declared, "is toward the formation of an American labor party that shall be a national organization with a partially socialistic program.

"Evidences of a certain militancy among the rank and file of industrial workers are seen today that were not seen several years ago. We find the co-operative movement gradually becoming stronger.

"We find the miners of Illinois building 50 co-operative stores; the Finns throughout the country are urging and effecting co-operation; at Seattle the unions are building co-operative laundries. The railroad unions are giving thousands of dollars to the movement. It means the equalization of opportunity."

After charging lack of vision at Washington in so far as national affairs are concerned, Dr. Laidler outlined the foreign industrial situation at length.

$7000 for Son's Death.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 19.—A jury in Judge Allen C. Southern's Division of the Circuit Court returned a verdict of $7000 today against the Frisco Railroad in favor of Mrs. Anna Tonquist of Sweden for the death of her son, Seven G. Tonquist, Sept. 8, 1917. Tonquist had enlisted in the army in Galesburg, Ill., and was on the way to Fort Sam Houston, Tex. When the train on which he was traveling passed near Newburg, Mo., Tonquist raised the window and looked out. His head struck a coal car and he was killed.

MODEL HOUSING PLAN FOR DISTRICT EAST OF GRAND AV.

buildings. When the prices of building materials decrease, as they probably will during the next few years, the cost of the present plan would also be reduced in this respect. Assuming that it would be necessary, therefore, to earn 10 per cent gross annually on this investment of $4,160,000 there should be an annual income of $416,000. Assuming that the four and five room apartments would rent for $25 and $30 per month and the three-room apartments for $16 and $20 per month, there would be a yearly rental return from houses of $295,200. It is estimated that there would be an additional rental return of $86,000 per annum from the stores and other buildings. This makes a total gross income of $381,200 per annum or slightly over 9 per cent. Assuming the estimated annual expense would be $161,600—which would include 1 per cent for fixed charges (taxes, etc.), .3 per cent management, .3 per cent for rent collection, 2 per cent for amortization, 6 per cent for vacancies and .5 per cent for coal. The estimated annual return is therefore $219,600, or 5⅛ per cent upon the total investment.

Cost Elsewhere Much Lower.

From the above figures it will be seen that a very liberal estimate for the cost of acquiring the property has been made. In proportion to the amount of money to be expended for actual housing development, the cost of site should be materially reduced and, as previously stated, at locations other than upon Olive street, this figure could be reduced considerably. If the cost of acquiring the site could be reduced from $1,500,000 to $750,000 a net return of 6.1 would be possible, based upon the figures above.

The estimate of annual income from the stores, theater and other buildings is believed to be conservative for the excellent location of many of the stores and offices should produce an annual income in excess of the amount estimated; the other community features of the plan, such as the playgrounds, shelter houses, nursery and community center, should be operated free of charge except for special privileges, being thereby special inducements offered by this community form of development.

Should such an undertaking as that herewith suggested or one similar thereto be carried out and prove successful, it should serve to greatly improve housing conditions in the community through establishing a much higher standard than now exists. If successful, additional areas could be planned and built, owners of present poorly designed and ill-kempt property would be forced to bring it to a more desirable state for occupancy in order to rent it. The present plan would afford housing accommodations for about 3500 to 4000 people and would produce a density of population of 150 persons per acre, or considerably less than is now occurring in the better apartment house districts of the city.

Practicality of Plan Shown.

The present plan was devised merely to answer the question whether it is practicable to develop good homes which would rent for comparatively low prices in the present high value districts of the city which have constantly been depreciating in value. A much more desirable plan might be devised than the one here presented. In undertaking the present studies we set ourselves a task of solving the most difficult problem possible. We even restricted ourselves by choosing a location at a point where the east and west streets carry a considerable traffic and for this reason could not be closed or changed substantially in alignment. In the plan prepared only one minor north and south street was closed. The arrangement of buildings with numerous off-sets, arcades and grouping to relieve the monotony of the row type of house produces a result that is believed to be interesting and attractive.

If the conclusions that are to be drawn from the studies made prove of any interest and value in the consideration of the rather complicated problem of producing improved housing conditions in St. Louis, we will feel that our labors have been justified.

MRS. SCHENK GRANTED DIVORCE

Mrs. Edith Schenk of 7240 Rule avenue, Maplewood, was granted a divorce from Oscar A. Schenk, general agent of the Bankers' Life of Des Moines, with $150 a month alimony for herself and $50 each for their two children, Dorothy, 14, and John, 11, by Circuit Judge Wurdemann at Clayton yesterday. Another daughter, Helen, 18, was not provided for. Mrs. Schenk was also allowed a $300 attorney's fee.

Mrs. Schenk testified that Schenk's attitude toward his family changed about three years ago and from then on he swore and used abusive language toward her and the children. She also charged that he associated with other women. She claims that Schenk has an income of $1000 a month and has property worth $30,000. They were married in 1895 and separated a month ago. Schenk did not appear in court, but was represented by an attorney.

GOVERNMENT BOOKS ON THE HIRING OF MEN

Series Issued That May Serve as Guides to Employers in Several Lines.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics has recently compiled and published a series of handbooks which are proving of great value to employers in hiring men. The handbooks are entitled "Descriptions of Occupations," each book being devoted to one particular line of business or industry and containing detailed descriptions of the jobs in that particular line.

For example, one handbook is devoted to "Office Employes." It lists 74 office jobs, describes the functions of each job, gives the personal qualifications required to fill the job, and indicates the schooling generally required.

Nine other handbooks have been published, covering the following lines: Metal working, mines and mining, slaughtering and meat packing, logging camps and sawmills, textiles and clothing, water transportation, cane sugar refining, flour milling, boots and shoes, medicinal manufacturing. Other handbooks are in coures of preparation.

These handbooks were prepared in response to the request of the United States Employment Service, which immediately upon its organization in 1917 realized the necessity of having some standard by which job requirements and qualifications might be measured.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics had been at work for years on descriptions of occupations in the industries included in its regular wage studies, so there was considerable material right at hand. This has been carefully gone over and revised to meet present-day conditions, and at the same time the bureau has taken up new studies of industries on which it had no data suitable for this purpose.

The "Descriptions" have been been found of great value by the Employment Service in its work of placing men; and hundreds of employers who have made individual use of these handbooks have likewise pronounced them of far-reaching practical service.

Maj. Drumm, Pioneer Cattleman, Provided for Children's Institution in His Will.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 19.—The homeless and neglected children of Kansas City are the chief beneficiaries under the will of Maj. Andrew Drumm, pioneer cattleman. A trust estate of about $1,800,000 is established to found the Andrew Drumm Instution. The home for the education and training of the waifs will be on a 370-acre farm, two miles southeast of Independence, acquired by Maj. Drumm in 1912, to carry out the plans for his later benevolence. The will states that Mrs. Cordelia Drumm joins her husband in establishing the choldren's institute.

The will bequeaths $150,000 to his widow and gives her an annual income of $10,000. The residue of the estate, estimated at $1,800,000 is left in trust to establish the children's institute. The institute is not to be a charity enterprise but a place where poor children may work to obtain an education and a home.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —ADV.

Society Women Learn Hair-Curling Secret

"If your hair is straight, flat, dull looking, I need not ask if you long to possess perpetually wavy, light, fluffy, glossy tresses," says Gladys Coleman in Society World. "I'll tell you what to do. Tonight, after your hair has had its usual brushing, take a clean toothbrush, dip it in a saucer of pure liquid silmerine and run this through the hair from crown to tip.

"When morning dawns and you have yawned yourself out of your downy cot, you will have a real surprise, quite an agreeable one. Your hair will have a prettier and more natural-looking curl and luster than it has ever had before—and there will be nothing streaky, sticky, greasy or anything unpleasant about it. If you will get the liquid silmerine from your druggist it will require no preparation at all, and four or five ounces will last for months. This is just the finest thing imaginable for the purpose."—ADV.

Omega Oil for Swellings & Inflammation

Rub Omega Oil gently over the place that hurts. Then soak a piece of flannel with the Oil, lay it on the painful part and cover with dry flannel. This simple treatment usually gives quick relief.

Housewife Becomes New Woman

"All of our best doctors had given me up. I was unable to leave my bed for 16 weeks, and was yellow as a pumpkin, besides the terrible stomach pains I suffered. Our druggist advised my husband to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and it has saved my life. I am a new woman now." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz

(Toilet Tips)

The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain, and unless the growth is extremely stubborn, a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment, be sure your druggist sells you delatone.—ADV.

NO SPECIAL CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL LIKELY NOW

Building at City Institution Wanted for Purpose Cannot Be Obtained at Present.

The clinic and detention building which is urgently needed at the city hospital, Fourteenth street and Lafayette avenue, is in fair way of being built, but the prospect of being a children's hospital for special work is at present doubtful, despite great need for it.

It is the desire of Hospital Commissioner Shutt and Dr. Rolla Henry, manager of the city hospital, to remodel the three-story building on the east side of the present group, now used as a residence for the internes, and make of it a modern and thoroughly equipped plant for the treatment of juvenile orthopedic and other specialized cases not now possible of treatment at the city institution. The children's wards now in use are available only for routine medical and surgical work. There are many children of poor parents in the city that cannot be taken to private institutions for treatment because of the cost, and therefore, go uncured.

The building wanted for the children's hospital cannot be had because of the necessity of quartering internes there. As the hospital was originally planned the physicians should be quartered on the upper floors of the main building, where the 100 nurses now stay. Formerly the nurses lived in a separate building rented on Dillon street. The nurses' present quarters were not designed for such use, and a greater objection is that on the grounds the nurses cannot get away from the hospital "atmosphere" in their recreation hours.

The cost of remodeling the internes' quarters for use for children would not be great and could be cared for out of the hospital building fund or the hospital item of the city budget. Until the physicians move to their proper quarters and a new nurses' home is built, this cannot be done, however.

"We cannot do anything at all for the nurses' home at the present time, but must wait for lower cost of building materials and more money in the building fund," said Director of Public Welfare Schmoll. He explained that it would cost approximately $150,000 to build a three-story home with 100 single rooms. This estimate includes recreation and dining rooms, bathing and a gymnasium. A site as near the hospital as possible would be chosen, yet off of the grounds. Probably a tunnel would be built to connect the home with the main buildings, affording privacy and protection.

C. OF C. SAFETY COUNCIL NAMES TRAFFIC VIGILANCE COMMITTEE

It Has 100 Members Who Report All Violation of Regulations That They Observe.

A vigilance committee of 100 members, who report violations of traffic regulations coming under their observation, to E. G. March, secretary of the Complaint Board at the city hall, has been formed by the Safety Council of the Chamber of Commerce.

Reports of "chance taking" are made on cards furnished for the purpose. They will be investigated, and first offenders will be admonished to be more careful, but persistent violators will be prosecuted.

The Public Safety Division of the Safety Council is now working out plans for correcting the traffic evils and drafting new ordinances to meet the hazards of increased traffic.

In the list of traffic misdemeanors reported are: Reckless driving in front of a street car, leaving the scene of an accident, passing a car discharging or taking on passengers, driving out from a curb without signaling, driving to the left of a street car on a double track, driving to the right of other vehicles, failure to sound horn or slacken speed when approaching a crossing or curve, creating hazard by excessive speed, failure to signal change of direction and failure to display lights.

Maj. Roy Britton is chairman of the committee and Deputy Coroner William Devers is secretary.

Approximately 300 certificates will be issued to safety supervisors who have completed the course in safety engineering, at the Planters Hotel next Friday, when C. W. Price, secretary of the National Safety Council, will be the principal speaker.

GREAT OPEN AIR SUNRISE EASTER WORSHIP IS PLANNED

About 100,000 Expected to Take Part in Outdoor Celebration Near Riverside, California.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 19.—When the rising sun's first shafts light up the mountain tops near here tomorrow morning, tens of thousands of reverent worshipers of all creeds will kneel in prayer in the great outdoors in celebration of the festival of Easter. Hundreds of men, women and children have started today for the slopes of Mount Rubidoux, near Riverside, for Hollywood and Eagle Rock in the San Fernando hills, and other points where the simple but impressive annual open-air services are held each Easter morning at sunrise.

It was on Mount Rubidoux that the first of these outdoor services was held at sunrise more than a decade ago at the suggestion of Jacob A. Riis. On April 26, 1907, a great cross was raised on the summit of Rubidoux and dedicated by the late Bishop Conaty to Father Junipero Serra, among the first of the builders of civilization in California.

One hundred thousand persons are estimated to have attended the services last Easter morning.

E. J. WALLACE FRAMED SENATE COAL MEASURE

He Defends Bill and Says Crossley Had Nothing to Do With Its Preparation.

E. J. Wallace, who was advisor to the St. Louis Fuel Commission under the Fuel Administration, said yesterday that he was the author of Senate Bill No. 714, which was engrossed in the Senate Tuesday night. Wallace said his claim of authorship was prompted in fairness to Lieutenant-Governor Crossley, as newspaper dispatches from Jefferson City had stated the bill was Crossley's "pet measure."

"I framed the bill, Wallace said," and induced Senators Lysaght of St. Joseph and Brownlee of Linn County to introduce it jointly. Crossley had nothing whatever to do with it, although he believes the bill is an important one."

Wallace maintains that the bill, by limiting the dealers' margin of profit, and by placing the coal business under the supervision of the Attorney-General of Missouri, prevents the exploiting of the consumer who is unable to purchase his coal in the summer months and buys only in ton lots. "This consumer," he said, "would get his coal at a legitimate profit which includes the loss that the dealer suffers in the summer months when he actually sells his coal to the larger buyers at a price which is virtually giving it away.'

Dispatches from Jefferson City Wednesday said that Senators who voted for engrossment of the bill later said they did not know what it was and that they would kill it when it comes up for final passage, maintaining that it permits coal dealers to violate the anti-trust laws of the State by fixing prices without becoming liable for the penalties of the law.

WEDDING OF AMERICAN IN IRLICH HALTED DRAMATICALLY

Germans Scandalized by Bride in Affair in Which U. S. Secret Service Takes a Hand.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

COBLENZ, April 17.—A dramatic climax halted the wedding in the Rhine village of Irlich last Sunday of Sergt. Charles J. Vinces of Chicago and Stella Setz. Vinces holds the rank of M. D. in Field Hospital No. 1, in Irlich. The prospective bride lived in Eggers, where Field Hospital No. 15, a part of the Second Division, is located.

When wedding plans were discovered, an officer of "G2B," army secret service branch, after investigation of the supposed flagrant defiance of the antifraternization orders, ordered the authorities to keep hands off while awaiting developments. In the meantime, Germans over the countryside became excited.

The romance came out when Sergt. Emery Blue of El Paso, Tex., after pledging the wife of the village schoolmaster to secrecy, arranged for an apartment for the bridal couple. He secured rooms formerly occupied by a German General.

When a train arrived every man, woman and child in the village, numbering 300, were in the streets. Sergt. Vinces presented her with a bouquet of flowers when his intended stepped off the train, dressed in bridal outfit of white hat, long veil and white gloves. She had golden hair and pearly teeth. The couple marched up the street, followed by a crowd of boisterous Americans and chattering Germans toward the church. Then a hitch occurred on account of a breakdown of the truck bringing Pearl Hawkins, a mail man of the Second Division, who had been selected to perform the ceremony.

In the meantime the bride scandalized the villagers by accepting a cigarette from one of Sergt. Vinces' comrades and blowing the smoke through the bridal veil. She permitted American soldiers to slap her on the back, responding only, "Goot, goot."

The daughter of a family where Vinces was billeted tearfully appealed to him not to marry the brazen creature, who was unworthy of an American Sergeant, arguing that the wedding was illegal, as bans had not been announced. Vinces, moved by the tears of the maiden, strode to the side of his intended, and in loud and forceful English ordered the frivolous one to leave.

The latter, fulfilling the natives' evil estimates of her character, started to undress in front of the church, tearing off the white waist, disclosing an old shirt, and then removing her thin veil and golden wig, showing the close-clipped black head of Corp. William O. Morris of East Orange, N. J., with the rank of M. D. in Field Hospital No. 15.

"Der verrueckte Amerikaner" ("The crazy Americans"), grunted the Germans, on dispersing and returning to their afternoon beer and penuchle.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL EVENTS OF THE WEEK

CARUSO ONCE CALLED IN ITALY 'BROKEN TENOR'

Star Who Sings Here May 2 Falls Into Vivacious Mood of Reminiscence.

"There was once a time, says Enrico Caruso, when he was nicknamed in Italy "the Broken Tenor." Today, 25 years later, at the age of 46, the Metropolitan Opera Company star is acclaimed not only the foremost tenor but the greatest singer of the age—greatest in natural beauty and energy of tone, greatest in the fine art of song, first in power of emotional communication by means of the voice. His appearance at the Coliseum on the evening of May 2 will mark his local debut in concert, and his first visit to this city since he was here eight years ago in opera. It will be a distinction for the musical season second only to Sergei Rachmaninoff's piano recital.

This being the silver anniversary year of Caruso's advent on the operatic stage, he has been persuaded to talk more than his wont of the early days when he received $2 a night for singing, when his audiences expressed commiseration for "the poor young man," and his teacher himself admonished him that his voice was "but a breath of wind that blows past the window and is gone." The following reminiscences, narrated in a recent interview, will be of interest to all music lovers.

Teacher Didn't Believe in Him.

"Three years, four years were needed to convince me that I had something within me and this conviction changed me from amateur to professional in a day," said the great tenor. "I began to change my life, to care for my habits, to stay in nights, to cultivate my mind as well as my voice. I was never a bad boy—my poor mother often said I was the best of her children—but these three years from 18 to 21 made me consciously live the artist's life. And what was it convinced me? Not my maestro, Vergine, oh, no; he never believed in me, he called me a breath of wind, a shrill whistle that would pass as the wind passes. To the last he doubted my future. Ah, yes, Guglielmo Vergine, teacher of voice in the conservatory of Naples, was obstinate, unreasonable. After people had begun to applaud me he would snap his fingers and say, 'But they are stupid, stupid!'

"Not from him came my self-conviction but from the strangers who would come to offer me money, 500 lire for two songs, and it grew upon me that if I studied, if I worked, I would one day sing and satisfy myself!

Sang While Shining Buttons.

"I had sung in a church choir in Naples from my fourteenth year to my eighteenth—sung contralto. Then my voice changed, and about that time I had to become a soldier. I could and did continue to sing, but it was different—the voice—and there was no method. As I shined the buttons on my uniform at Rieti, an officer, Maj. Mogliati, heard me. He sent for me and said: 'If you continue to sing like this you will lose your voice; you must learn to sing correctly. I shall introduce you to a gentleman who will take an interest.' He did, and it was so, through a young man who became my life friend and who followed me to New York (he is dead now), that I was taken to Vergine.

"At once he pronounced my aspirations hopeless. The maestro agreed with my father that I should never be able to sing, but would be wise to keep on earning my 2 lire (40 cents) a day as mechanic in my father's shop in Napoli. 'There is no voice,' cried Vergine, 'and mark with what effort he sings. The voice should issue without forte; forte is the bane of music and stress is its decease. No, I shall not teach him.'

"But my dear friend did not accept this verdict and urged the maestro to hear me again. The second time he was more hopeful, and I became his pupil after he had carefully bound me to a contract for five years by which he was to receive 25 per cent of all moneys I should get from any source for singing.

"Then he proceeded to cramp me, to bind my voice in chains, to restrain my inclination to color a note, to deprive me of the power of emphasis. And so for three years I studied against my grain, repressing whatever nature told me in order to be a Vergine product.

Engagement at $2 a Night.

"Came the moment when I could test what I had learned before an audience. I was engaged for 10 lire ($2) a night to sing in a new opera by Alberto Franchetti, author of 'Asrael' and 'Germania.'

"Poor Boy!" Said Audience.

"He was a rich Neapolitan whose mother used to say, 'My son is a musicial composer, but not of necessity,' and his first opera, 'L'Amico Francesco,' in which I appeared as an old carpenter with a beard, ran one night.

"I sang my role in the Vergine method, but despite all drawbacks the people were kind to me. My voice, held in as I had been taught, still possessed, they told me, something of its former contralto color, and it was fresh, yes, virginal. They did not hiss me when I delivered my high notes lackadaisically and without the condemned forte, but they showed that they were disappointed by commiserating me. 'Poor boy,' they said, 'he has a sympathetic voice, but it is not great.' And it proved to be what was always said as I continued to sing whenever I could get engaged. After a time my avoidance of forte brought me the soubriquet of the "Broken Tenor."

"Later I had another quasi debut, this time as Faust in Boito's 'Mephistophele,' and in this role, because I departed from my maestro's counsel, I earned more success. Vergine was disgusted and predicted for me a long silence if I persisted against his advice. However, he took his 25 per cent from my earnings as usual.

"In 1896 the directors of opera at Salerno, a small city 30 miles southeast of Naples, decided to produce 'I Puritani' and engaged the great Lombardi to conduct the orchestra. At the last moment their tenor fell ill and they were perplexed. There was, they said, no tenor to sing the role in Naples and the expense of bringing one down from Milan would be enormous. Said Lombardi, 'But there is a tenor in Naples who can sing the role.' 'Who is he?' 'Enrico Caruso.'

"The directors laughed and shouted in derision, 'The broken tenor!' But Lombardi convinced them that it would not be necessary to hire Caruso and they might safely try him.

"Sing Like a Bullfighter!"

"Lombardi sent for me and never shall I forget the first question he put to me: 'My boy,' said he, 'are you stupid?' I replied that I did not think so and he proceeded to demonstrate to me that I was singing in a stupid manner. 'You are a mechanic; then draw me a locomotive if you can.' I drew a rude picture of a railway engine, with boiler, smokestack, wheels, pistons, etc. He took it in his hand and asked me what made the wheels go round. I explained that by firing the engine steam was generated, life was given to the rods and the wheels turned. Said he, placing his hand on my forehead, 'This, your mind, is fired in the same way; this, the diaphragm, is the bellows and sends the air to your cords. This, your heart, colors the air as it passes to do its work. Do you see the analogy?' 'No, maestro,' I replied sorrowfully.

Goodby to the Broken Tenor

"Lombardi shook his head sadly. 'Let us try again,' said he, 'and this time draw me a picture of a correo de Taurus.' I drew a bullring with the doors for the admission of the bandilleros and a single door for the entrance of the bull. 'Ah, the bull enters and lunges toward you. What are you going to do? Run?' 'No,' I said, 'I will put myself in an attitude of defense, so, with my hand clenched. I shall attack in turn.' 'Good,' cried Lombardi, 'and in singing it is the same; you shall put yourself in readiness for the attack and you shall sing with all that is in you when the right moment comes. It means your life or death as an artist.'

"And then I understood. I was not to stand cold and statuesque, singing pretty notes with no distinction among them, but I was to attack and to defend. A great light shone on me and never again did I sing against nature, but always with all the voice I had when the right moment came and always with the color that my heart told me should envelop my poet's words. It was an illumination never afterward to wholly go out. I sang 'I Puritani' and with success for so young a singer. From that night on I was never again called the 'broken tenor.'"

Flag of the City for Him.

It is a far cry from the Caruso of those trials to the Caruso to whom Chairman J. C. Van Riper of the St. Louis district of the Victory Loan will present an emblem, during an intermission in the concert, in recognition of the tenor's aid, through three concerts, in gaining pledges of nearly $8,000,000 for previous Liberty Loans. For other war causes his singing realized an aggregate of more than half a million dollars. His efforts in behalf of the New York Police Reserve Fund raised a fund of $300,000, for which he was made an honorary officer of the New York police department. He is to be made an honorary captain of police in this city.

The tenor will spend two days in St. Louis. He will arrive on May 1, and Mayor Kiel, at public exercises, will bestow upon him the flag of the city. At the concert he will be assisted by an orchestra of 70 St. Louis musicians, directed by Roberto Maronzoni, principal conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House. Under the direction of Walter D. Thompson, 1000 seats will be purchased and given free to blind men, women and children of the city.

'ABE' AND 'MAWRUSS' IN CLUTCHES OF A VAMPIRE

Partners Form "Fillum" Company in New Comedy, "Business Before Pleasure."

"Abe" Potash and "Mawruss" Perlmutter encountered many a vicissitude in the cloak and suit business, but nothing to compare with the troubles they had between themselves—and with their wives!—when they broke into the "fillum" game and hired a vampire. How they worried through is demonstrated in the comedy, "Business Before Pleasure," with which Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr open tonight at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater.

Abe and Mawruss have organized the Potash and Perlmutter Fillum Co., and applicants for membership in the cast are forced to show a sample of their goods. No company is complete without a vampire, and the partners retain a siren whom they have much difficulty in persuading Mmes. Potash and Perlmutter to regard as a mere employe. The company has reverses, money and homes are about to be lost, when a turn of luck brings everything right.

The production is primarily a fun maker, enlivened by the familiar bickerings between the partners which have nothing to do with their loyalty to each other. Members of the cast include Sue MacManamy, Jennie Muskowitz, Lottie Kendall, Helen Cunningham, Edward Mordant, Frank Allsworth, Wilfred Lytel and others.

Neil O'Brien and his "Great American Minstrels" hold forth this week at the American, beginning tonight. An ensemble of comedy, song and dance occupy the first half of the program; the second part includes a sketch, "Meatless Day," with Neil as "Simple Sam;" Vaughn Comfort and Johnnie King in "Coontown Divorcons," and "Aunt Sally Simkins' Syncopated Serial," a dancing story. In the company are Aris B. Raines, "Sugarfoot" Gaffney, Louis Tracy, William Doran, Fred Miller, F. E. Quinn and other entertainers.

The Shubert-Jefferson will close its season this week. The American, next week, will present the comedy with music, "The Better 'Ole," based on the war cartoons of Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, with De Wolf Hopper in the part of "Old Bill."

The headliners this week at the Orpheum will be Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield, in a sketch of comedy and songs. Other skits will be given by Paul Morton and Naomi Glass, Herbert Williams and Hilda Wolfus, Mayone Whipple and Walter Houston, Harry Green and a company in "George Washington Cohen," and Katherine Murray, a singing comedienne.

Jack Levy and "the Four Symphony Sisters" will lead off at the Columbia, and a dream-story, "The Sandman's Hour," will be the feature at the Grand. The Garrick's chief entertainment will be dispensed by William Creamer, Morey Barton and Jack Sparling. The Gayety will present "Step Lively, Girls," featuring Anna Propp who, 4 feet 4 inches tall, boasts that she is the smallest actress on the stage. The Standard's attraction is "Frolics of the Nite."

CAROLINA LAZZARI SOLOIST WITH MORNING CHORAL CLUB

Contralto of Chicago Opera Association to Sing at Odeon Thursday Night.

Miss Carolina Lazzari, contralto of the Chicago Opera Association, will be the soloist at the Morning Choral Club's annual concert, Thursday night, at the Odeon. She will sing an aria from "Les Huguenots," and groups of songs in Italian, French and English.

The club of female voices, under the direction of Charles Galloway, will sing Huhn's "The Unknown," a cantata, "The Legend of Miana," by H. de Fontenailles, "The Victor's Parade," by Herman, and several miscellaneous numbers, among them, by request, the "Will-of-the Wisp," of Spross.

The club's annual frolic will be held at the Congress Theater, Olive street near Sarah street, at 11 o'clock on the morning of April 29. For the first time associate as well as active members will be invited.

MME. LOUISE HOMER TO BE APOLLO CLUB SOLOIST TUESDAY

Contralto of Metropolitan Opera House Not Heard in St. Louis Since 1917.

Mme. Louise Homer, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and one of the most popular of concert artists, has been engaged as soloist with the Apollo Club for its concert Tuesday night at the Odeon. This will be Mme. Homer's first appearance here since she was soloist with the Symphony Orchestra, in November, 1917.

It is one of her principles that songs should be sung in a tongue comprehensible to the audience, and her numbers will be in English, save two airs in French.

The list will include Beethoven's "God in Nature;" Handel's "He Shall Feed His Flock," one of the most beautiful melodies in oratorio, from "The Messiah;" "My Heart Ever Faithful," by Bach; three songs by her husband, Sidney Homer, "To Russia," "Cuddle Doon" and "The House That Jack Built," the last still in manuscript; two songs by John Aldén Carpenter, and other lyrics by Americans.

The contralto's French selections will be an air from Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodique," and the gavotte, "Me Voici Dans Son Boudoir," from Thomas' "Mignon."

The club, directed by Charles Galloway, will give F. Hegar's "May Day;" A.E. Little's "Summer Night;" C. Harris' "A Grand Party;" H. J. Stewart's "The Song of the Camp," repeated by request from a previous program; and Charles Wakefield Cadman's "A Mighty Vulcan."

The Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "Pirates of Penzance," will be given Friday night at the Cleveland High School by the music clubs of McKinley High School, under the direction of Paul John Weaver. It Is Dedicated to Col. F. M. Rumbold.

A composition called "The Awakening," which was written by Charles Kunkel for the First Missouri Field Artillery and dedicated to Col. F. M. Rumbold, will be played as a piano duet by the composer and Otto Ulrich Friday night at the Wednesday Club Auditorium. The music is said to describe "terrific cannonading and bombardment, routing the enemy."

Others on the program, which is free to the public, will be P. G. Anton, violoncellist; Charles A. Kaub, violinist, and Gino Monaco, tenor.

PLAY CONTEST AROUND OPEN-AIR THEATER

Art League Announces Competition for Work of St. Louis Spirit.

The St. Louis Art League will hold a competition of St. Louis dramatic writers to produce a play of St. Louis spirit, built around the setting of the Open-Air Theater in Forest Park, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. W. F. Saunders, chairman of the Art League Committee on Drama and the Literary Arts.

The suggestion was made to the committee by a newspaper critic. Local critics and playwrights share the belief that the Open-Air Theater offers a splendid inspiration for dramatic production interpretative of St. Louis history and purposes. The new competition will be added to the program for the current season.

There will also be held another competition similar to the one of last year, which brought out the winning plays staged this month at the Artists' Guild Theater by the joint producing forces of the Art League, the Guild and The Players. This competition calls for one-act plays by St. Louis authors. A jury to pass upon the works submitted will be announced later. Selected plays will be submitted also to Art League audiences in readings. Later the prize plays selected by the jury will be given stage production. All St. Louis writers are invited to send in their manuscripts for these competitions.

An interesting conclusion to the activities growing out of the recent Are League Drama Competition will be given by Prof. Otto Heller Friday in the Artists' Guild auditorium, when the chairman of the Lectures Committee will give a talk on "How Not to Write a Play."

Dr. Heller's lecture is expected to be a very frank expression of opinion upon the merits of the work already done, and upon the lines on which still greater successes can be expected. Heller will discuss a number of questions relating to drama appreciation in St. Louis.

He will discuss the essential requirements of the drama, and show that the great majority of the things that pass under the name of drama in our community are not dramas at all.

PAUL BROWN OFFERS $100,000 TO BARNES HOSPITAL FUND

Will Give That Amount If $400,000 Can Be Raised From Others to Meet Deficit.

Paul Brown, 10 Washington terrace, president of Paul Brown & Co., brokers, has recently offered to donate $100,000 to the endowment fund of Barnes Hospital, if a sum of $400,000 could be raised from other donors. According to Brown, who is a trustee of the hospital, the endowment fund is now about $1,000,000, exclusive of the buildings and grounds, but an annual deficit of $30,000 has occurred for the past three years, necessitating a campaign for subscriptions to make up the amount.

The Rev. J. W. Lee, chaplain of Barnes, says that he has been quietly seeking donations for the past few days, and that several men, whose names he would not divulge, have agreed to contribute sums of from $10,000 to $25,000. He stated that the expenses of operation of the hospital amount to about $75,000 yearly, and that unless the endowment fund is increased, the deficit will be again met with this year.

ROYAL RECEPTION FOR FRENCH BAND COMING TOMORROW

Organization Will Be Met at Station by Citizens' Committee and Will Go to City Hall Later.

A military band of orchestral artistry, composed of men who are not only of rank as musicians but heroes wounded and decorated for valor in the war, is promised at the Coliseum tomorrow night, when the French Army Band, under the baton of Capt. Fernand Pollain, will give a concert.

This organization was first brought to this country by the French High Commission, at the invitation of Secretary of War Baker. During 1918 it made a tour of all the military camps. In behalf of the last Liberty Loan drive it played at concerts in 42 cities, at which $7,000,000 was raised. The French Government has extended its furlough until next month.

Its personnel is composed of no ordinary blowers of horns and thumpers of drums. Twenty of them took prizes at the Paris Conservatory of Music. Capt. Pollain took first prize there as a violoncello player, and made tours as a virtuoso. He was a member of a celebrated trio in which Eugen Ysaye was violinist. In addition, every man is a veteran of the war, decorated for bravery. Capt. Pollain himself led a charge at Nantes, and lay 36 hours wounded in No Man's Land. He wears the Croix de Guerre.

A Distinguished Program.

The program at the Coliseum will comprise compositions bearing for the most part honored names in music. It is as follows:

1. (a) Star Spangled Banner.
 (b) The Marseillaise.
2. Overture to "Phedre"....Massenet
3. Violin Solo, "Rodno Capriccioso" —Saint-Seans
 M. Alexandre Debruille.
4. (a) "March of the Little Leaden Soldiers" ....Pierne
 (b) "American Patrol'....Meacham
5. Andante and Allegretto from "Rapsodie Norvegienne"..........Lalo
6. Piano Solos—
 (b) Barcarolle ....Faure
 (b) Etude en forme de valse —Saint-Saens
 M. Georges Hrucs.
7. Ballet Music from "Sylvia".Delibes
 (a) Valse lente.
 (b) Pizzicato.
 (c) Marche et Cortege de Bacchus.
8 (a) La Pere de la Vivtorie..Ganne
 (b) Marche du Regiment de Sambre et Meuse.........Planquette

On its arrival in this country the band was honored by an official reception at the White House, and at its first American concert, in Washington, President and Mrs. Wilson headed the list of boxholders. Its present concerts are for the benefit of the French War Relief Fund. The band appears here under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, the Advertising Club of St. Louis, the Rotary Club, the Societe Francaise and other organizations.

The band will reach St. Louis from the East at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. It will be met at the station by a reception committee headed by Marc Seguin, French Consul at St. Louis, and composed of Mayor and Mrs. Henry W. Kiel, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, Lieutenant and Mrs. Maurice Faure, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Donnell, Major and Mrs. William H. Cocke, Mr. and Mrs. H. Worthington Eddy, Mr. and Mrs. Colin M. Selph; Mmes. Pernet McCarty, Marc Seguin, Frank M. Crunden, Guy Study, Charles Cummings Collins, Max Goldstein, Victor Ehling, Lon O. Hocker, Joseph W. Folk, Tom L. Anderson, Lee Meriwether, Murray Carleton, Norton Schuyler, Louis P. Aloe, Robert L. Morton, Charles G. Mulligan, M. Lemoine and C. W. Hughes.

The visitors will be escorted in automobiles to Hotel Statler, the management of which will extend hospitality to them.

Reception at City Hall.

After breakfast the reception committee will again take charge of them at 9:30 a. m., forming an automobile parade escort and accompanying them to the city hall, where a public reception will be tendered. During the reception, acting Mayor Louis P. Aloe will deliver an address of welcome, and Marc Seguin will extend a second welcome in French.

After the city hall reception the band will be taken for a drive through the residence and scenic portions of the city and to the City Club, where the members will be guests at luncheon. During the luncheon G. V. R. Mechin, president of the local Societe Francaise, will present each veteran with an

Make Finest Lager Beer in Your Own Home

One of the large breweries which, until recently, made an extra fine quality of beer, has now turned its excellent equipment over to the making of Blue Ribbon Malt Extract. The same men who for years have been engaged in brewing beer and are past masters in the art of making barley malt are now devoting their time to the making of this malt extract. Of itself this malt extract is nonalcoholic and can be sent to any "dry" section. With its use and by following the simple and easy-to-follow directions you can make, right in your own home, and without any special apparatus, the finest quality genuine malt and hops beer you ever tasted. Not a "near beer," but the real thing, with sparkle, creamy foam and as delicious a taste as any beer that was ever drawn from a keg or poured from a bottle. Improves with age just like any other beer.

Blue Ribbon Malt Extract is so highly concentrated that a very small quantity goes a long way. Your beer will cost you less than one-third the average cost of brewery beer, it is purer, more wholesome, better tasting than any you ever bought.

Here's a wonderful opportunity for agents in any territory. Be first in your section to introduce Blue Ribbon Malt Extract. Enormous sales and big profits for you if you act quick. Don't let anyone get in ahead of you. Write at once for full particulars and easy instructions for brewing. $1.00 brings you a 2-pound can and hops. Make 5 gallons or more and see for yourself that it "hits the spot" and has all the zip and tang of your favorite brand of beer. Write today—sure. Address, Premier Food Products Company, 682 Cantrell St., Decatur, Ill.—ADV.

Phosphorus Strengthens and Vitalizes Every Nerve and Organ of the Human Body

Says Doctor Who Prescribes Ordinary Phosphorated Malt for Weak, Nervous, Rundown, Anaemic People.

Without phosphorus, says Dr. Reid, good health is impossible. Phosphorus strengthens and vitalizes every nerve and organ of the human body. Without it even plants will not grow. More phosphorus is a common need of both men and women, though few realize it. Most of them believe that stomach, liver or kidney trouble, or a lack of iron in the blood, is making them sick, weak and unhappy, when all they really need is a little more phosphorus to tone up the nervous system and give strength and vigor to the body. When people come to me nervous and rundown and irritable, and everything looks blue, and it seems there is nothing but trouble, trouble, everywhere, I prescribe ordinary phosphorated malt, which not only supplies the phosphorus, but brings malt, one of the best-known tonics and tissue builders, to the aid of the wasting tissues. I have seen it double endurance and mental activity in less than ten days' time, and in cases where nothing else had proved to be of real value. I have seen it bring roses to the cheeks of pale, nervous overworked women, and the crimson blood of health and a smile of happiness to the faces of children recovering from illness of long duration. Recently a patient came to me physically run down and on the verge of mental collapse. He found no pleasure in life, his daily work had become drudgery and he got no rest or recreation from his sports and holidays. He could neither sleep nor keep his mind on his work. I advised him to eat less and take two five-grain tablets of phosphorated malt after meals. In less than ten days he walked into my office full of vim and vigor—his eyes bright, his step firm and buoyant, and his manner that of a man of twenty-five, though he was well past fifty.

Physicians everywhere know the value of phosphorus, and almost every woman knows the tonic value of malt, a remarkable tissue builder, especially adapted to the needs of nursing mothers and weak, anaemic women. Combined with phosphorus and phosphates as in phosphorated malt, it nourishes the body and aids the system to turn food into living tissue. The old liquid forms of malt are inconvenient to take, the most of them contain alcohol, which causes a needless stimulation, always followed by depressing reaction. Phosphorated malt retains the nutritive properties of malt without the evil effects of alcohol. I have seen it produce such astonishing results that I prescribe it in my practice, recommend it to my friends and take it myself. After a few days of phosphorated malt you awake in the morning feeling refreshed and vigorous and rise ready to begin the day's work with redoubled confidence and energy.

NOTE—To find out what phosphorated malt will do for you, get a package and learn for yourself; or ask a friend who has used it; or get the formula from your druggist—it is printed plainly on every package—then ask your doctor. The manufacturers of phosphorated malt have such confidence in it that they guarantee it will double the endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in ten days' time or the price will be refunded. They insist that all druggists sell it subject to this guarantee. It is dispensed by druggists everywhere and specially by Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and Enderle Drug Co.—ADVERTISEMENT.

emblem of the society as a souvenir of his visit to St. Louis.

Following the conclusion of this function the bandsmen will be shown points of interest downtown.

The French army band, which is familiarly known as "The Band From the Trenches," was gathered from practically all the celebrated units of the French fighting forces and combined into a musical unit. Some of them were Blue Devils, some belonged to less famous units and more than one was a soldier in that rapidly gathered emergency army that poured out of their taxicab transports onto Von Kluck's over-eager and unprotected flank to save Paris and the West during the first few weeks of the world war.

Capt. Pollain joined the colors at the outbreak of the war as an officer of infantry. He was wounded in battle and cited in the order of the day, which won him the Croix de Guerre and the rank of Captain. The following is the text of his citation:

"Pollain, Fernand, officer, exceedingly brave, the first of September led his section in an assault on the Farm St. Evre, which he captured. He was seriously wounded by the bursting of a shell in going out to reconnoiter the ground in advance of his men. He remained wounded on the ground for 18 hours during the bombardment of two artilleries."

On the same day Capt. Pollain received two other minor wounds, and was carried back to safety by his son, an under officer of the same regiment, who went out in the night to find him, carrying him to the ambulance of the first line under the fire of the Germans. Being incapacitated for further service by reason of his wounds, he was authorized to appear in the United States during the period covered by the tour of the Paris Conservatoire Orchestra, in the capacity of 'cello solist, from which position he was subsequently transferred to the leadership of the army band.

The band will leave St. Louis for the continuation of its tour to Western points tomorrow night.

WEBSTER GROVES ACTS TO CHECK THE WAVE OF CRIME

Mayor Calls Meeting for Monday to Appoint Vigilance Committee to Aid Police.

Carl H. Holekamp, Mayor of Webster Groves has issued a call for a meeting of business men and police officials tomorrow night to plan the organization of a Vigilance Bureau to aid the police of the town in checking crime.

The police force of Webster Groves now consists of a Marshal and four deputies. It has been suggested that about 50 citizens be sworn in as auxiliary policemen, and that four or five of these volunteers do police duty each night. A part of the plan is to install electric alarm bells in the homes of all members of the auxiliary force so that all might be called out in an emergency.

LIQUOR FREIGHT STOLEN

CLARION, Io.—California liquor will be routed around Iowa hereafter. When a carload paused in the freight yards in Clarion this week, two barrels of wine and 20 cases of whisky disappeared. The barrels were found in a field near-by with not a single drop of liquid in them. The whisky has vanished.

At anti-prohibition prices the liquor stolen would be worth about $1000. At the ruling market in contraband goods in Iowa it is worth a fabulous sum.

Hudson Victories Still Lead In Super-Six Endurance

The Hudson Super-Six won all worth while stock car records and because of its supreme endurance decisively conquered many of the swiftest and costliest racers that ever struggled for speedway honors.

Those stock car records, certified by the A. A. A., established its commanding superiority. But it was not in winning the Pike's Peak Hill Climb with a special, the double transcontinental run with a phaeton model, the fastest mile for a stock chassis, or in travelling 1819 miles in 24 hours and breaking all acceleration records, that the Super-Six gained its greatest prestige and repute as a life car dependable in any emergency and master of any conditions of travel.

Leader on Highway and Boulevard

Sixty thousand Hudson Super-Six owners, in the daily use of the Super-Six, on city boulevard and unimproved country road, have proved it the foremost car in endurance and faultless performance. The driver of a Hudson handles the wheel confidently, because he knows that a touch will loose the eager power of the Hudson against any obstacle of time, distance or gravity, and that its endurance will always arrive.

Hudson leadership rests upon initiative. As a pioneer in mechanical design it developed the exclusive Super-Six motor, which by minimizing friction delivered the maximum of engine power to the driving wheels without self-destruction, and produced the car that will last a life time.

Hudson initiative has also made it the leader of mode.

This supremacy of style has not emphasized itself in the Hudson as it would have in another make of car, because it was dwarfed and diminished by the more vivid mechanical leadership, typified in great feats of speed and hard struggle against time over thousands of miles of rugged roads.

Hudson is Model of Fashion

But the owners of Hudsons know, and their friends know, and better than anyone else the men in the trade know and admit the Hudson leadership in design. The distinctive types of Hudson bodies have influenced motor design everywhere. But as Hudson is the leader you will always find in it the advance ideas, the fitness and balance of a creation conceived in its entirety, and not a patch-up of plagarized design.

It will be some time yet before the factory will reach full production. To insure getting a Hudson Super-Six when you want one you had better act now. Sales have already compelled the establishment of Hudson waiting lists.

Come and See the New Chandler Touring Car

Most Beautiful Big-car Offering of the Season, and the Price is Only $1795

THE new Chandler touring model is here. We have waited for it. Old Chandler owners have waited for it. It's here now and we are all proud and happy.

The Chandler of the past has had splendid bodies, but the new Chandler touring car even surpasses its immediate fore-runner in beauty of line, in bigness, in comfort of its cushioning, in the nicety of its custom-like workmanship and in its lustrous finish.

The new Chandler Touring is a big car. Its high hood and radiator, its broad cowl, its wide and deep doors give it distinctive appearance.

And it RIDES,--it rides like a dream

Nothing has been cut out to permit the delivery of this fine big touring car at the Chandler price. Indeed, many little details of nicety are added. The back curtain window is beveled plate glass. The clear-vision side curtains fit snugly and open with the doors. There are detachable rear quarter-bow curtains. There are outside door handles.

Features which have been standard Chandler qualities in the past are continued. The cushions are upholstered in genuine hand-buffed plaited leather. The front compartment floor boards are covered with heavy gray linoleum, aluminum-bound. The two comfortable auxiliary chairs fold away, entirely concealed, when not in use.

Carrying this Handsome Body Is the Famous Chandler Chassis

You will choose the new Chandler touring for its bigness and its comfort and its handsome dignity. But you will choose it, too, for its mechanical excellence. Fifty thousand Chandler owners know, better than we can tell you, what a good car the Chandler is. The famous Chandler motor and the sturdy excellence of the whole chassis make the Chandler notable among fine cars.

The Chandler continues for 1919 all its distinguished mechanical features; solid cast aluminum motor base extending from frame to frame, silent chain drive for the auxiliary motor shafts, annular ball bearings, Bosch Magneto ignition and many other features of design and equipment characteristic of the highest-class motor car construction.

CHANDLER MOTOR CAR COMPANY, CLEVELAND, O.

UNCLE SAM TO DRIVE "FRITZ" ABOUT CITY

Mechanical Man to Pull Float to Aid Victory Loan, "Marching" by Own Power.

"Fritz," an exponent of iron if not of blood, towering to a stature of 12 feet, and planting a heel of 100 pounds' weight upon the earth at every step, is scheduled to visit St. Louis this week, on behalf of the Victory Loan. He comes as a prisoner, harnessed to a float representing a transport ship, and perhaps symbolizes the unwilling aid which German vessels gave in moving United States troops across the ocean.

"Fritz" is a mechanical man, built of iron, and walking with energy supplied by a 20-horsepower automobile engine. The automaton was designed by Arthur B. Christopher, mechanical engineer with offices in the Fullerton Building, and built by C. T. Small of 6701 Vernon avenue. Christopher says he has been at work on the apparatus at odd times for six years. He has rebuilt it six times, he relates, and spent $15,000 before he was able to endow legs of metal with a realistic likness to human locomotion.

The Mechanical Man.

A Post-Dispatch reporter saw the mechanical man before it was adorned with the accoutrements of the Hun. It existed them only from the hips down, and the caststeel shanks dangled in woe-begone nakedness. One could make out hipjoints, thighs, knees, lower legs, ankles and feet, the last huge sabots of caststeel about 24 inches long and each weighing 100 pounds.

The structure was supported by a pair of massive iron rods, for it cannot stand alone as yet. The rods connected with a two-wheeled cart in the rear, on which was mounted a gasoline engine. The entire apparatus weighed about two and a half tons.

A mechanic mounted a seat in front of the engine and turned a wheel. The engine began barking. A tremor was seen to pass down one of the great iron legs. A foot advanced itself and plunged down upon the ground. As the earth was soft, it did not at once get a foothold. With a grotesque simulation of sentience, the iron heel began digging itself into the earth to get a purchase. Firmly planted at last, the leg lurched forward with force enough to kick a man into the air.

Marches by Own Power.

A moment later the automaton was marching firmly ahead, lifting one leg after another, and basing its massave pedal extremities deep in the soil. It marched forward, turned a corner—it is steered on the principal of a tractor—made circle and returned to its starting place. The rate was about two miles an hour. Christopher says his apparatus can double this speed on a pavement.

At first, Christopher attempted to import motion to his machine by means of imitating human physiology, with metal tendons, etc. He found the scheme impracticable, as he did trigger and dashpot devices. His present apparatus is extremely simple, with a surprisingly small number of parts. The movements of locomotion are gained by means of two master cams, two follow-up cams, four bell cranks, four connecting rods, two pairs of bevel gears and six spur gears. The steering is managed by means of one pair of worm gears. It is arranged for the engine's exhaust to be discharged through the automaton's nostrils. The giant has strength enough to draw several tons of weight.

5 CHILDREN CRY FOR MOTHER

She Took Sixth, a Blind One With Her In Flight.

Five children, ranging from 8 to 13, who were left to keep house when their mother, Mrs. Anna Herold, 33 years old, 1040 Geyer avenue left home two weeks ago with her sixth child, Arthur, 6 years old, are crying for her return. Mrs. Herold's husband, a decorator, said that she had frequently threatened to leave him becouse he was not earning enough to provide for his family in the manner in which she believed they ought to be supported.

When she departed she left a note for the five children who were at school stating that she would not return.

PART THREE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 20, 1919. PAGES 1—16.

Part That Saloniki Had in Allied Victory Told by Man Who Was There

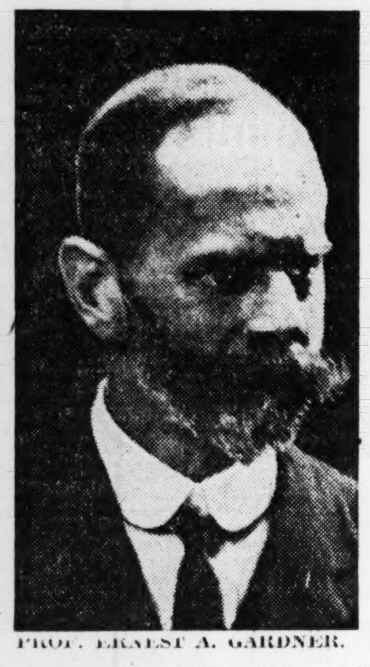
Noted British Archaelogist, Who Was in Naval Forces Stationed There, Describes Some of His Experiences During Visit to St. Louis.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

WE all know the part that souvenir-hunting played in the war. But many of us did not know, until Prof. Ernest Arthur Gardner, who is also Lieutenant-Commander Gardner of the British Royal Navy, came to St. Louis last week, of the part that archeology had in the war.

Souvenir-hunting and archeology are quite closely related. Archeology is a select and scholarly form of antique souvenir-hunting, or souvenir-hunting is a modern and popular form of archeology, whichever way one prefers to express it.

When the war began, Prof. Gardner had been engaged in archeology for 30 years, excavating and studying in Greece and Egypt, and lecturing to advanced students in the British School of Archeology, in Athens, and in University College, London. For nine years he was director of the school in Athens. He had written textbooks, handbooks, encyclopedia and magazine articles, and had become one of the foremost scholars in his line of research.



PROF. ERNEST A. GARDNER.

The war found him 52 years old, physically vigorous and eager to do his bit. Before the war had gone far, men as old as he were representing themselves to grinning recruiting Sergeants as being 40-odd, and were hurrying to the trenches.

Prof. Gardner was willing to serve wherever he was needed. It seemed to him that the place which he knew most about would be the place where he could serve best. The place he knew most about was Greece. He knew it better than he knew the Strand, or Mayfair, or Bloomsbury. He knew the Greece of 30-odd centuries ago, which sent an expeditionary force of its own to Troy, and he knew the Greece of the days before and after the Balkan Wars.

Events were pointing to Greece as a place where the services of Englishmen would be needed. The Admiralty saw the connection, and when the British forces went to Saloniki in the fall of 1915, Prof. Gardner went along as a naval Lieutenant-Commander.

"Inspector of Antiquities."

The same reasoning applied to a body of men, most of them younger than Prof. Gardner, who were students in the British School of Archeology in Athens. When the new Lieutenant-Commander began his shore duty assignment at Saloniki he found these Oxford and Cambridge scholars serving as interpreters and intelligence men. Modern Greek is much like the so-called "dead language" of the same name, as any high school student of the Anabasis may notice from the papers lying around in downtown shoe-shining stands. The students of archeology in Athens had learned both.

Soon Lieutenant-Commander Gardner was bearing the added title of Inspector of Antiquities. It was found that a prehistoric mound makes an excellent gun emplacement, or location for a dugout. And almost everywhere that the Tommies put their spades into Macedonian soil, coins, ornaments, utensils or bits of architecture were found.

In France these things would be souvenirs for the soldiers. In Greece they are part of the national treasure of antiquities, not to be taken out of the country. Under the circumstances, the British, who were not very sure of their welcome in Saloniki anyway, could make no better bid for Greek friendship than by taking the best care of all the antiquities they might turn up.

"Fight, Not Excavant."

So the articles discovered went to Prof. Gardner and were grouped by him in his office in the White Tower, which is a conspicuous point in Saloniki's sky line. Before he left Saloniki in August, 1917, this collection grew to the proportions of a museum, in which was portrayed the prehistoric age in Macedonia. It is his hope that this museum will be made permanent, and that it will be connected with the work of the school in Athens. He hopes to return to Greece, to look after this and other matters of scholarly concern, within a year or two.

Prof. Gardner was pleased with the articles which chance finders sent to him in Saloniki, but he felt that he could get much more valuable matter if he could do some excavating in certain places of his own selection. One day he asked the commanding officer if he might have a detail of soldiers to do some excavating at a place which was very promising in an archaeological way, but which had no immediate military value.

"He refused the request," Prof. Gardner now relates. "He said the men were there to fight, not to excavate. Of course, he was quite right."

Prof. Gardner was in St. Louis Wednesday and Thursday, in the course of a tour of university centers which will extend to California and British Columbia, speaking before chapters of the American Institute of Archeology, under the provisions of the Eliot Norton lectureship fund. He was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Mepham of 4457 Westminster place, and visited Cahokia Mound, near Collinsville, with a party headed by Prof. F. W. Shipley of Washington University. He spoke on Greek sculpture before the local chapter of the Archeological Institute at Jefferson Memorial Wednesday night, and he spoke Thursday at a City Club luncheon on his observations in Saloniki.

Saloniki and the War.

In an interview which I had with Prof. Gardner at the Mepham home, and in his City Club talk, he held that the Saloniki expedition, which the "west front" school of war critics used to decry as an unprofitable "sideshow," was in fact an important contribution to the winning of the war.

"Even when the allied force in Macedonia seemed to be making no progress," he said, "it was holding back its own weight in German troops from the west front. When those German troops were finally removed, the Greek and Serbian forces having meanwhile gone into service on this front, Bulgaria collapsed and the end of the war followed.

"Our position in Saloniki was very delicate, for it was neutral territory when we went there. But having gone, we were bound to stay. The best of the Greeks were with us, and if we had gone away we would have left them at the mercy of the King and the Germans.

"The tragic thing about the Saloniki expedition was that it was too late to accomplish its immediate purpose, which was to save Serbia. It was not possible, without a stronger force, to regain and restore Serbia.

U-Boats Involved.

"But what we could do, and did, was to keep the Germans in the north from making a juncture with the King's forces in Athens and

Justice for Labor Must Be America's Shield From Bolshevism, Says Gompers

"BEWARE OF INDUSTRIAL AUTOCRACY," HIS WARNING

In First of Series of Three Articles on the Outlook for Labor, President of American Federation Declares Bourbon Employers Must Understand That Their Day of Absolutism Is as Surely Ended as Is That of the Political Absolutists.

This is the first of a series of three articles by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, on the future of labor in America. The second article will appear in the Sunday Post-Dispatch of May 4, the subject being "The Battle Line of Labor." The third article, "Labor and Beer," will be printed in the Post-Dispatch of May 18.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS.
President of the American Federation of Labor.

AMERICA is not merely a name, a land, a country, a continent; America is a symbol. It is an ideal, the hope of the world.

It is the duty of every citizen to stand by his country in times of stress and war as well as during times of peace. The man who would not fight, or make the supreme sacrifice, if necessary, to save and protect his home and his country, who would not fight for liberty, is undeserving and unworthy of living in a free country.

American organized workers have always endeavored to promote good will among the peoples of the world. The possibility of war has ever been regarded by them as the black shadow of an indescribable catastrophe. The interests of the workers are identical with those of peace. War has never meant to them opportunity for gain or exploitation. It has always meant to them privation, direst suffering, service on the firing line and in the actual fighting of the war, and bearing the burdens that follow in its wake. The workers abhor war with all its frightfulness, horror, bloodshed and mangled flesh, but they realize that there are greater evils than war. Peace secured through the surrender of a principle vital to liberty, justice and democracy is nothing less than coward servility.

The American labor movement never advocated peace at any price. It never encouraged nor gave support to any movement of peace at any price. While it recognizes that peace is essential for normal, progressive development, it steadfastly refused to advocate peace at the sacrifice of the ideals of freedom and justice.

Despite the fact that there are within the membership of the American Federation of Labor men of all nationalities, yet on March 12, 1917, nearly a month prior to the declaration of war on the part of our Government, the representatives of the national and international unions of America met in solemn conference and there conceived the position which the workers of America should take, whether we would be permitted to enjoy the priceless privilege of peace or whether we would be dragged into the maelstrom of war. At that conference certain fundamental principles were laid down. Among them were:

1. That the standards of living of the American people should be maintained or improved and not deteriorated; and,
2. That the rights and liberties of the people of the United States should be maintained and secured whether in peace or in war.

Federation's War Declaration.

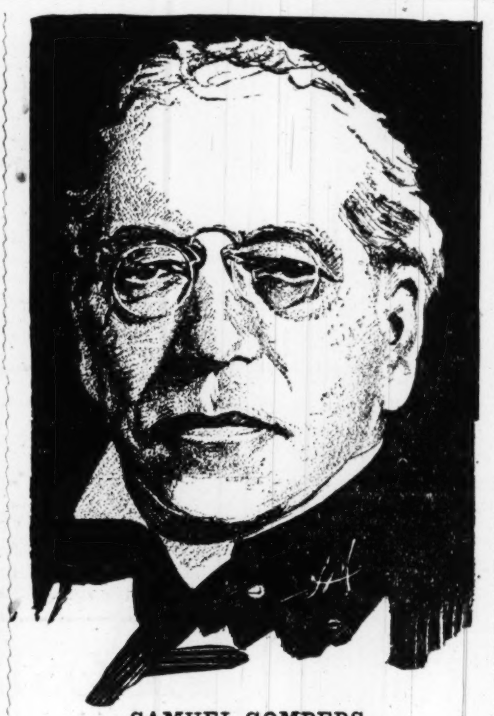
We then unanimously declared:

"We, the officers of the National and International Trade Unions of America in national conference assembled in the capital of our nation, hereby pledge ourselves in peace or in war, in stress or in storm, to stand unreservedly by the standards of liberty and the safety and preservation of the institutions and ideals of our republic.

"In this solemn hour of our nation's life, it is our earnest hope that our republic may be safeguarded in its unswerving desire for peace; that our people may be spared the horrors and the burdens of war; that they may have the opportunity to cultivate and develop the arts of peace, human brotherhood and a higher civilization.

"But, despite all our endeavors and hopes, should our country be drawn into the maelstrom of the European conflict, we, with these ideals of liberty and justice herein declared, as the indispensable basis for national policies, offer our services to our country in every field of activity to defend, safeguard and preserve the republic of the United States of America against its enemies, whomsoever they may be, and we call upon our fellow workers and fellow citizens in the holy name of Labor, Justice, Freedom and Humanity to devotedly and patriotically give like service."

Though distinctly removed from one another, our soldiers, sailors and workers were united into one solid phalanx in the great contest between democracy and autocracy to decide the right of peoples to govern themselves, or the might and powers of Kings and Emperors to rule and dominate their subjects. With unceasing endeavor and to the utmost of their superb powers, they answered every call that was made upon them. American Labor realized that upon the armies on the battlefield, supported by our mighty industrial army at home, rested the burden of freeing the world from the menace of enslavement that autocratic rulers sought to fasten upon the peoples of all the world. America's workers played a mighty and majestic part in the winning of the Great War.



SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Labor proved the Government's greatest asset in insuring victory. The American Federation of Labor assumed proportions of a vast machine in the interests of our nation and its cause. It minimized in its inception the movement which was intended to create pacifism in the ranks of Labor. It rendered ineffective influences which aimed to weaken the forces of our Government.

American Labor and Democracy.

American Labor has kept its trust with democracy and the principles of liberty and justice. It yields to no person or institution in its fidelity and devotion to our republic. American Labor is proud that fewer conscientious objectors were found in its ranks than among any other group of people.

Comparison between the pronouncements and activities of individuals and associations who without warrant or authority assume to speak in the name of Labor, and the loyal attitude and patriotic declarations and accomplishments of the organized labor movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor, is vivid. I invite careful reading of the paragraphs quoted above from "American Labor's Position in Peace or in War," of March 12, 1917, and the following declaration of the American Socialist Party:

"The American people did not want and do not want this war. They have not been consulted about the war and have had no part in declaring war. They have been plunged into this war by the trickery and treachery of the ruling class of this country through its representatives in the national administration and national Congress, its demagogic agitators, its subsidized press, and other servile instruments of public expression.

"We brand the declaration of war by our Government as a crime against the people of the United States and against the nations of the world.

"In all modern history there has been no war more unjustifiable than the war in which we are about to engage.

"No greater dishonor has ever been forced upon a people than that which the capitalist class is forcing upon this nation against its will."

No other influence in our country was viewed with such favor by the autocratic governments of Germany and Austria as was the pernicious propaganda of the Socialists to destroy or weaken the forces of democracy in this great struggle.

While the greatest of all wars has ended, our work is not yet completed. Peace has come, not technically, but to all intents and purposes. The imperial governments of Austria and Germany are no more. The peace conference is meeting in France. Of course, we are all interested in territorial readjustments and the right of small nations to the opportunity to live their own lives and to work out their own destinies. We are all concerned as to what shall be written into the peace treaty, especially in so far as it affects our own people.

We concentrated all our efforts during the war and fought for the principles of our country and the ideals of justice and freedom; we threw the weight of our physical force, our wealth and our spirit into the balance. We have won, and it is good for all to understand that we should be alert and vigilant to see to it that the sacrifices we made to win the war shall not be lost around the peace table.

The affairs of the whole world are in the process of remaking. Relations between nation and nation, and between the peoples within the various nations, and among working people particularly, are undergoing a new change and a new life.

I stand in so far as I can and dare—and I dare much—for the principles of natural and rational development and growth.

I am opposed, as is organized labor of America, to any destructive policy.

There is nothing that is worth while maintaining that I would aid or abet in destroying.

Our policy, our work, our method, our ideas and our ideals are to build, to construct, to grow, to help in the development of the highest and best in the human family; to make today a better day than yesterday, to make tomorrow a better day than today, to make tomorrow and tomorrow's tomorrow each a better day than the one that has gone before. That evolutionary process of progress and improvement is the basis for the opportunity for freedom, justice and democracy.

That is the constructive policy of progress. If that policy of the American labor movement is opposed, and successfully opposed, then our work, our activities and our movement will be sent to destruction.

If we are impotent, if we are incapable of securing for the workers improvements in their conditions, then we ought not to exist. I say for myself that if I were convinced that the American labor movement is impotent to be of service to my fellows, I would quit it and abandon the organization to its justifiable fate.

It is a question of dealing with such a movement as represented by the American trade unions—the American Federation of Labor—or dealing with a body of irresponsible or irreconcilables. If we are not on the right track, then those who represent the wildest orgy of destruction, with no consideration for the rights of individuals, will come to the front. It is a matter of choice between dealing with such elements or dealing with the constructive forces of the organized labor movement of our country.

I do not know that I am entitled to very great credit because I am not a Bolshevik. With my understanding of American institutions and American opportunities. I repeat that the man who would not be a patriot in defense of the institutions of our country would be undeserving the privilege of living in this country.

It is true that we have discussed democracy, We have used that term glibly and often without understanding. It is true that we have discussed freedom, and often without understanding. I have had the opportunity of travel in Germany. I have never heard any people so vociferously and enthusiastically sing and shout the terms of freedom and democracy as did the German people.

Freedom is not a condition, nor is democracy a condition. Freedom is the exercise, the functioning of freedom, the practice of freedom, the practice of democracy. All that society can give, all that government can give, is the opportunity of freedom. It depends upon the people to be intelligent and grow into the feeling, the exercise and practice of the function of freedom. It was because the principles of freedom and democracy were menaced by the system of autocracy and militarism that the people of our country and the peoples of other countries and of the democracies of the world rallied around their banners and declared, and made good their willingness to make the supreme sacrifice, for the principles, the institutions and the practice of freedom which were threatened to be overwhelmed and crushed.

Labor Movement for Progress.

If I thought that Bolshevism was the right road to go, that it meant freedom, justice and the principles of humane society and living conditions, I would join the Bolsheviki. It is because I know that the whole scheme leads to nowhere, that it is destructive in its efforts and in its every activity, that it compels reaction and brings about a situation worse than the one it has undertaken to displace, that I oppose and fight it.

The American labor movement is founded upon the historic development of conditions of industry and commerce in our country, based upon the ideas and the ideals of American institutions; it is a movement that is rational, natural, orderly and yet insistent that the rights to which the workers are entitled shall be fully accorded.

The American labor movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor and our trade unions is this:

> We believe in progress; we believe that all the fruits and the results of the genius of past ages and of today do not belong to any particular class, that they belong in truth as a fair share, and opportunity for a fair share, to every man and women who gives service to society and who aids civilization. If society stands like a stone wall against that

'Why the Filipino People Ask for Independence Now'

An Interview With Manuel L. Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate and Chairman of the Philippine Independence Commission, Now in the United States, to Ask Autonomy for the Islands.

By ROWLAND THOMAS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 19.—There is at present in New York, after a visit to Washington, a commission of forty Filipino representatives, according to their own statement, of every class and section of our sole Oriental possession. They were sent here, they state, by the whole Filipino people for one specific purpose. Their errand is to ask fulfillment of a pledge made by this nation. They put one question to this country: "Will you or won't you grant us independence and complete self-rule?"

Of the theoretical right of this people to ask this question and insist upon a definite answer there can be no doubt. More than 20 years ago ultimate independence was promised to the Filipinos, in plain word, by Congress. And the pledge has been even more plainly reiterated since, notably in the Jones law, passed Aug. 20, 1916, which stated that autonomy would be granted if a stable government could be established. There is no debatable ground on that side of the situation.

MANUEL QUEZON.

But the good sense, the seasonableness of asking such a question now, is not so clear for many obvious reasons. So I went up to the Hotel Belmont prepared to ask Manuel L. Quezon, chairman and spokesman of these untimely questioners, to answer me some pertinent inquiries in his turn. Particularly the following, which seemed to go to the room of the matter:

"Why should the Philippines ask for independence now? And what specific advantages would independence give them over the present arrangements? Are they asking for independence because they really need it or merely because they want it?"

Practical vs. Theoretical.

And as I rode up in the subway my mind was occupied with a reminescence. Almost 20 years ago, when American civil government of the Philippines was still in its incipient stages, I happened to be in Manila. I remembered how, among other modern improvements, the white overlords started in that city a manual training and trade school to create a much-needed supply of skilled mechanics, and, after this institution had been running for a few weeks, a deputation of its students waited upon the Superintendent of Public Instruction to voice a most serious grievance.

"Sair," said the spokesman, "our complaint is that you give too much practical and not enough theoretical instruction. You must not forget, sair, that while the Americano is undoubtedly strong here"—he laid a forefinger on his biceps—"the principal ability of our Filipino lies up"—the eloquent digit this time indicated his forehead and its hinterland of brain bowl—"lies up here."

Was Manuel Queson going to answer stodgily practical doubts about the expediency of setting up at this time one more small, unseasoned nation to be an added element of uncertainty in a sadly uncertain world by making a similar appeal to the high and remote courts of pure intellect?

Manuel Quezon did not do that.

"The doubtfulness you express," he said, "is natural enough. And your questions are perfectly fair. I will try to answer them as fully as you wish.

The First Advantage.

"You ask what advantages we think independence would have for us, as compared with the present arrangement. I will name two which we are quite sure of. The first concerns our purely domestic and internal affairs, over which, at present, we have no effective control, no matter how vitally they concern us. We can make laws, to be sure, but those laws cannot have effect without the approval of Congress and the President. Take the one matter, for instance, of land and other natural resources. We Filipinos realize that though we have great natural wealth in our country, it is by no means limitless wealth. We want to be sure that it is used wisely and properly for our own benefit and conserved prudently for the benefit of the Filipinos who are not born yet. Wishing that we may, for instance, feel it nesessary to forbid the sale of lands or other fundamental wealth to any foreigners. And we can make such laws. But before these laws become effective they must receive approval in this country, where, naturally, they will be considered not merely as they affect us Filipinos, but as they might affect the United States in respect to certain possible international complications.

"Another great practical advantage of independence would affect our foreign affairs. At present we have no power to make any laws of any sort affecting them. We cannot make such a thing, for instance, as a trade agreement with any country. All such arrangements have to be made in Washington. And the Philippines are so remote, their products and their whole industrial and commercial organization, all their economic needs, are so different that it is very difficult, firstly, to obtain the interest of Congress in them at all; and, secondly, to induce Congress to consider them as what they really are—purely Filipino matters.

Why They Want It Now.

"A third great advantage we see in independence would be the fact that we would be independent. Independence is like food. You do not miss it unless you do not have it. Its value is not something that can be argued about or settled by formula. If you asked a hungry man what the great advantage of food to him would be, he would simply answer you, food. And now we see the advantage of being independent. It is a fundamental desire with us, as it would be with you if you did not have it.

"Those are three reasons why we are asking you for independence. Why are we asking for it now? I will give you some reasons for that also.

"In the first place, there is the Jones law, through which, in 1916, Congress promised us independence as soon as a stable government could be established. We have accepted that promise in good faith. We set to work under it in good faith to meet its terms, and gain our independence. And now we have met its terms. The man you sent out there for that purpose, Governor-General Francis Burton Harrison, has come back and told you that the foundation of our nation has been well laid.

"A stable government has been

Why Society Women Wash Their Own Hair

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about 3 cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—ADV.

LETTER FROM HANDLESS AND BLIND SOLDIER

Writes on His Own Specially Built Typewriter to Blind American of Joy of Living.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The first letter ever written by one blind soldier without hands to another similarly afflicted has just been received by an American soldier in a New York hospital. It was a message of good cheer written by Alan H. Nichols of London, a British soldier, to show his American comrade and fellow sufferer that "a man's a man for a' that."

A copy of the letter and of another dictated by the sightless and handless British soldier have been received by the Associated Press from Sir Arthur Pearson, newspaper publisher and president of the British National Institute for the Blind, of London.

One letter was written by Nichols with artificial hands on a specially constructed typewriter keyboard. Its purpose was to show that no matter how terribly handicapped the war victims might be, they could rise above their deprivations and conquer the giant despair. This blind but cheerful and happy Tommy Atkins informed his Yankee fellow in affliction that he was still able to dance, swim, ride horseback, play dominoes (with his nose); feed himself; carry a cane, take his handkerchief from his pocket and do almost everything a man with two eyes and two hands could do, except roll his own cigarettes and strike a match. He uses a taper.

First Case on Record.

Sir Arthur, in a note accompanying the missive, said he supposed it was the first case on record where a man "suffering the tremendously severe handicap of blindness and the loss of both hands" had been able to write, unaided, to anyone. The original letter, he said, was sent by Nichols from the Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Institute, known as St. Dunstan's, to the wounded American soldier, whom the London publisher had seen in a New York hospital.

Here is the letter:

3, New Street,
St. John's Wood, N. W.
17th March, 1919.

Dear Mr.————

Enclosed you will find a rather lengthy letter which I dictated for you, but I am typing this one myself to convince you that this is practicable.

I understand from Sir Arthur Pearson that you are free from other physical disabilities and in this respect you are more fortunate than I.

In September, 1916, I received my little souvenir and I still have quite a number of pieces of shrapnel in my chest and legs which cause me no little annoyance at times.

In September, 1917, an operation was necessary to remove some of the shrapnel from my chest and three weeks later another operation resulted in the removal of portions of ribs and still more pieces of foreign matter.

Earns Own Livelihood.

At Brighton, where I was sent to one of St. Dunstan's annexes, I soon found myself getting fit and it was during my convalescence that Sir Arthur arranged for me to take lessons in elocution which enables me to earn my own livelihood.

My work is most interesting, and consists of speaking on the work of St. Dunstan's and the National Institute for the Blind. It will surprise you, I know, when I tell you that in addition to this I control and organize the lantern slide department which is the advertising medium of the N. I. B. and St. Dunstan's.

In conclusion, permit me to express the hope that you have not given up the idea of ever doing anything when I feel sure there is so much for you to do. Yours, sincerely,

ALAN M. NICHOLS.

In his dictated letter Nicholas assured the American: "When you are fit and well and able to run about you will find there is still plenty in life worth living for. When I first became like this," he continued, "I could not see anything that was likely to interest me on this earth. I was inclined to think I was the most unfortunate person on earth. In short, I was often contemplating a method of quitting this life. At that time I never dreamed of the possibilities of a pair of artificial hands, and I can assure you that I now surprise everybody, but the one I surprise most is myself.

Is Able to Feed Himself.

"I can take off my hat, carry a walking stick and attache case and feed myself with a spoon and fork. I have a specially made cigarette case similar in appearance to a metal match box which fits in my waistcoat pocket. I can take this from my pocket and help myself to a cigarette. I have not yet accomplished the feat of striking a match, but this is overcome by having what we call on this side spills, strips of paper a foot in length. There are a hundred and one little things I can do, such as using my handkerchief, and this includes taking it from my pocket."

Encouraging the American to write his own letters, Nicholas said that he used an ordinary typewriter with a metal case over the keyboard having holes immediately above each key. The case resembles four steps and in the middle of each step is a rib "to let me know when I am central. Attached to my hand I have a key or striker which resembles a small hammer. It takes me about half an hour for one sheet of foolscap double spacing, but, of course, this will improve by practice."

Nichols advised the maimed Amer-

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS TO BE TRAINED AS U. S. A. OFFICERS

The Board of Education has approved a recommendation by Supt. Withers that units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps be organized in the high schools, and they are to be in operation of the 1919-20 school year. Supt. Withers expects the early enrollment in the military branch to be not less than 1000.

Assured introduction of the organization in the public high schools is the result of the work by Maj. Wallace M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics in Washington University.

In their junior years in the organization the Government allowance of uniforms will be equivalent to $125 a year to each of the boys enrolled, while in the third and fourth, or senior years, which are not obligatory any more than are the first two, the boys will draw $12 a month, with uniform and other allowances.

This Skin Peeler All the Rage in Society

There is a growing tendency among women of culture and fashion to pay more attention to hygienic means of preserving their charms. The advent of mercolized wax doubtless has been largely responsible for this. This remarkable substance produces complexions so natural in appearance, so magnetically beautiful, artificial complexions are no longer desired. Instead of "doctoring" an offensive skin, the skin is peeled off. The wax peels the skin so gradually, in such fine particles, no discomfort is experienced. The fresher, younger skin beneath, wholly in evidence within a week or two, is lily white, satiny soft and smooth. It's not a patched-over complexion, but a brand-new one. That's why mercolized wax has become such a rage among society folk. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings. All druggists have it; one ounce will do.—ADV.

Air-in
"The Coat with Lungs"

UNTIL it rains, neither you nor anyone else will realize that Air-in is a raincoat. Its style, its unusually fine texture, its general "quality" appearance single it out in any group as the topcoat of a gentleman. Once it rains, however, the utility of Air-in becomes pleasantly apparent—it is perfectly rain-proof.

The distinguishing feature of Air-in is its scientific ventilation. In the vent at the back of Air-in there is an arrangement which allows the air to circulate so that there is none of that stuffiness which causes discomfort and often develops colds — a ventilation system which actually gives lungs to this raincoat.

HARDSHIPS OF SIGNAL CORPS IN ALASKA

Mercury Drops From 50 to 82 Degrees Below Zero With Fierce Blizzards.

VALDEZ, Alaska, March 10 (by mail).—Up among deep snows and fierce gales, in some of the most lonely spots in the world in winter time, where the mercury sometimes is from 50 to 86 degrees below zero, the men of Uncle Sam's Signal Corps keep their faithful vigil.

In lonely hamlets on the top of solitary mountains, their cabins buried in snowdrifts, these men in khaki watch in the white silence over the slender wires of communication reaching from Valdez to the interior, and thence to the farthest confines of the territory, ending above Nome, in the great white wastes of the subarctic. From Maine, New York, Texas, Missouri, Nebraska and other states recruits come to the service. There has not yet been the first instance recorded of a man failing to perform the task allotted to him.

Seventeen Stations There.

Seventeen stations are maintained by the corps out of Valdez, each completely outfitted. The Pacific-Alaska cable, after leaving Seattle, first reaches the coast at Valdez. Here messages are transferred from the cable and sent out over the land lines.

To reach his station, or post of duty, many of the Signal Corps men have to walk hundreds of miles. Then when the winter blasts hurl out over the white wastes,, begins the Signal Corps man's vigil. Copper wires that link the great territory together and carry the news of the world, pass from Valdez through deep forests, tundra and morass, over lofty hill and through beautiful prairies to Fairbanks, down the Tanana River to Fort Gibbons, down the Yukon to St. Michael and thence to Nome.

Daily trails must be broken to other stations, lines repaired, trees removed from the vicinity of the wires. The Signal Corps man must risk his life time and again for the careless or unfortunate travelers. Some of his deeds have come to light.

Mercury 54 Below for 17 Days.

Among them was a rescue of 1908 when the Delta district between Valdez and Fairbanks was visited by one of the worst blizzards in the history of the country. For 17 days the mercury stood at 54 below, and gales hurled continuously the fine snow in blinding masses through the air. One could scarcely face the elements.

A party of prospectors and miners on its way from Valdez to Fairbanks was caught in the storm. Unable to reach a roadhouse, the travelers sought shelter in the lee of some timber. On the morning of the second day one man succeeded in reaching the cabin of a Signal Corps man.

With the soldier he returned to the stranded party. Several men were frozen to death. Seven trips to and from his station the soldier made, rescuing all the survivors, including two women.

Later several of the men rescued died of exposure, and when the summer sun pierced the drifts of the trail 13 bodies were found.

ican to carry a soldier-like appearance and to swing arms, walk in the center of the sidewalk and avoid lamp posts, but not to carry a cane. Swedish drill, swimming and dancing were advised for recreation. "When playing dominotes," Nicholas added, "I use my nose to feel, although this has the tendency to give one the appearance of a chronic sufferer from indigestion or a slave to the bottle."

Deceives 99 Per Cent of People.

Telling of his amusing experience in traveling, Nicholas wrote, "I take considerable satisfaction in the fact that I am able to deceive 99 per cent of the people I meet."

"I am wearing a pair of artificial hands which are quite useful," Nichols went on. "They are made of aluminum, and I can wear them all day without the least fatigue or discomfort. They are of French manufacture and so made that, however tender the stumps may be, it does not interfere with the wearer's comfort. The movement of the hands is obtained by a shoulder movement. The hands in appearance are perfectly natural; in fact, the public would not think there was anything the matter with me. I once addressed a meeting without any of the audience knowing I was wearing artificial hands."

Nicholas concluded by saying that depression had been a frequent visitor to him and that he found thinking of himself was dangerous.

OLD BOOKS FILL CELLARS OF CONSTANTINOPLE

Antiquarians and Historians Expect to Find Valuable Works There.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 17.—Antiquarians and historians are now to have for the first time since the Turks took possession of Constantinople the opportunity for making a thorough investigation of the literary treasures stored away in the great libraries there.

The contents of the bookshelves of the St. Sophia and Palace libraries are known, but in the cellars under the Palace library there are many manuscripts in Arabic, Greek, Latin and Eastern languages. These manuscripts are in hopeless confusion and no person with special aptitude for research work has been permitted to examine them in recent years. About 30 years ago a German dragoman obtained permission from the Sultan to spend a week in those cellars. In that time he was able to make only a very superficial examination of the manuscripts, but his search, short as it was, revealed many books in Greek and Arabic of great value. Among the discoveries he reported were the lost books of Livy, the great Roman historian.

The Byzantine Libraries.

Among celebrated British scholars who are planning to go to Constantinople to delve among the long-hidden manuscripts is Sir Edwin Pears, the historian, who has spent many years in Constantinople. Sir Edwin told the Associated Press correspondent that at least six months would be required for the investigation. He does not think the libraries have been damaged by the Turks, who, he says, are utterly indifferent to their value. His only fear is that the manscripts will be found in a sad state as a result of neglect.

The fine libraries of the Byzantine Empire were taken by the Turks in 1453. The greatest number of books are deposited, not in St. Sophia's, as popularly believed, but in the Imperial Palace about a quarter of a mile from the church. Under Turkish rule these libraries were added to from time to time, the most notable acquisition resulting from the defeat by the Turks of the King of Hungary, whose collection of books was brought to Constantinople and placed either in St. Sophia or the Palace, library.

Manuscript in Cellars.

"The shelves of the Palace library," said Sir Edwin, "have been constantly picked over and the most important manuscripts probably have been stolen or destroyed. At present, what is shown to visitors is a room about 30 feet long and 15 wide, nicely fitted up with glass cases containing books with well-polished bindings. But there is not a book displayed which an archeologist would consider worth having. The cellars, however, contain hundreds of manuscripts which have never yet been satisfactorily examined.

"The library in St. Sophia's also contains many unclassified works and it may be that they include manuscripts of importance."

The greatest finds of manuscripts made in the vicinity of Constantinople during the last half century were not in the Palace or St. Sophia libraries, but in local libraries belonging to the Greek church. One of these, which Sir Edwin terms the most important theological find of the century, was a book containing the teachings of the Twelve Apostles, a document frequently quoted in the early centuries of Christian literature. The last half of the text had been copied and preserved, but the complete copy was lost until about 40 years ago.

Valuable Discovery.

"At that time," Sir Edwin said, "the grand old scholar, Bishop Briennius of Nicomedia, the modern Ismid, one of the few Greek scholars who not only knows Greek well, but is an authority on epistles of St. Clement.

"In the library of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Constantinople he came across a small volume entitled simply 'Saint Clement." It contained not only the epistles of St. Clement, but the teachings of the Twelve Apostles, lost since about 1050. Some authorities date the book as early as 70, some as late as 120.

"Another book of equal value was discovered in the library of St. Sophia in about 1875, called 'The Manuscripts of Critobolus.' This is the only record we possess containing an account from the Greek side of the siege of Constantinople. It was the first to take advantage of this find in my writings of the siege. The book unearthed by Critobolus was a life of Mahommed. It revealed how the Greeks turned Romans to save their skins."

Library at Mount Athos.

Another library which Sir Edwin plans to explore is at Mount Athos, a peninsula devoted to the Greek church since 1100. It is situated between Constantinople and Saloniki. About 15 years ago a Greek made some interesting discoveries there. Sir Edwin visited it shortly after the discovery of the teachings of the Apostles, and learned from the librarian that none of the books were properly classified.

Mt. Athos escaped molestation by the Turks. The only time the library was violated was in 1824, when a large number of manuscripts were cut up for haversacks for Turkish soldiers.

Monks only live there, nothing feminine being allowed on the place, not even hens, cows or mares.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

With the fingers! No pain at all! Drop a little "Freezone" on a sore, tender corn or a callus. Instantly that corn or callus stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without pain, soreness or irritation. Yes, magic!

Try it!—a few cents buys a tiny bottle of Freezone at any drug store. Sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and painful callus from one's feet. Corns and calluses lift away without even a twinge of pain. Why wait? No humbug!

What Color of a Tune Do You Like?

Perhaps you don't realize there are pink pieces of music, blue melodies, red sonatas: and rainbow symphonies. Those who know best about music say so.

You see color crops out everywhere. For instance, when Goodrich brought forth Black Tread rubber, the color caught; and soon a lot of tires were singing the black song in treads.

Of course quality, not color, makes Goodrich treads outwear others.

The distinctive coloring of Silvertown Cord Tires, and their graceful modeling make them much sought by motorists to dress smart cars.

But Goodrich would make them ugly as an old shoe, if ugliness would add another mile to their durability.

WHY FILIPINOS ASK AMERICA TO FREE THEM NOW

established. It is a government entirely of Filipinos. There are only two white men in it. And these Filipinos, as legislators and administrators, have done such things as this: They have established, at a cost of $50,000,000, a universal system of primary and secondary education, which will reach every child in the islands. They have established lawful peace and order. For three years of the war it was the Filipinos who kept the American flag flying in the islands, every white soldier having been withdrawn. They have laid all the old racial-religious bogies and Mohammedan legislators sit beside Christian ones to make laws for the islands.

Peonage System Broken.

"They have broken down the old peonage system where it existed and passed effective laws for the protection of labor. They have established financial conditions and created a solid and wealthy Philippine National Bank.

"In brief, we have complied with the Jones law. We have a stable government. We have done the share which you yourselves prescribed for us. So when you say to us, 'Why should you ask for independence now?' we have a right to answer with another question, 'Why should you ask us to wait any longer?'

"Another reason," he went on, "why this seems to us a proper time to ask our independence is the ending the war and the conference in Paris. When we ask you to set us free we merely ask you to be consistent. If any country ever stood definitely and indisputably for any principle, the United States stood definitely in this war for the principle of national freedom and self-determination. It was through your enunciation of this principle that Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia and all the other nations were set free and formed. How, then, can you consistently deny the same right to us, particularly when we have willingly served a long and carefully watched apprenticeship in democratic self-rule—while these other formerly submerged nationalities must start from the very bottom as learners?

"Because we need independence as you would need it if you did not already have it, because it would be of direct and practical advantage to us both at home and abroad, because we are fit for it, because you promised it to us as soon as we were fit, and because this war was fought and won to establish the right of every people to live its own national life so long as it respected the life and liberties of other nations," Quezon ended, "we Filipinos ask you now for independence."

They Do Not Fear Japan.

"But," I asked him, "how about Japan?"

"We do not fear Japan," he said. "One country seeks to seize another either for its own economic or its own strategic benefit. There is no reason to believe that Japan looks on the Philippines as an economic prize. They have no record of success in tropical colonization, or of any great eagerness to attempt it. For example, among our many millions of population there are only 4000 Japanese today, though no ban is set up against them by immigration laws and they are as free to come in as any other people. Japan's economic destiny lies on the mainland of Asia and in her world trade. As for the second motive—Japan is better off strategically now, with Formosa, Korea and Manchuria ringed compactly about her, than she could be with a Philippine outpost, and her soldiers are statesmen enough to know it.

"Furthermore," added Quezon, his jaw setting a trifle, "the only way in which Japan could ever take possession of the Philippines would be by killing every Filipino. Remember that the generation of Filipinos who will be the chief governing race we ask you to make free now will be American-made boys from the public schools you yourselves established. Remember we have the same love and faith for democracy that you yourselves have, and the same ardor for race and country. Remember, too, that, unlike their other neighbors, we have no natural basis of assimilation with the Japanese. We are far apart in race, we being Malays and they Mongols. We are far apart in tongue. They are pagans, we are Christians and Mohammedans. Furthermore, through long centuries of Spanish rule had perhaps predisposed us to look up to a white man for leadership and dominance, nothing has ever given us that attitude toward a yellow man. Leaving out all other considerations, Japan could never take the Philippines from the free Filipino nations save at a price in treasure and blood far beyond their worth. And Japan knows that."

High Prices to View French Soldiers.

PARIS, March 24.—There is already brisk bidding for windows to view th etriumphal entry of the French troops into the city through the famous Arc de Triomphe. One or two big balconies are said to have been let to syndicates for $10,000.

eat more macaroni made of wheat a most appetizing food

THERE are now no food restrictions on wheat. Eat as much of it as you like. In the face of a huge surplus, the real need now is to increase consumption.

Food experts say that the really finest of all wheat foods is macaroni. Because it is rich in gluten, strong in nutritive value,—a builder of flesh, blood and bone.

A very choice delicacy, too. Any housewife can bake all manner of things with macaroni, and make them so tempting and tasteful that you marvel at their daintiness.

Macaroni with cheese,—or with tomatoes,—or with mushrooms;—savory, flavory combinations. Neither too heavy nor too light. Yet very satisfying and sustaining.

So "tasty", indeed, that it never cloys or sates the appetite. The real lover of macaroni never tires of it. It is as staple as bread and butter. You can eat it every meal!

Why burden the system with heavy foods? Why eat hot meats in summer? You will feel better, work better, and play better,—if you eat more macaroni.

Eat it during Lent,—and you will find new charms in abstinence,—new culinary triumphs. Give macaroni to your children. They thrive on it! And the cost is so little!

Macaroni Croquettes
One half lb. Macaroni, 1 cup thick white sauce, 1 cup bread crumbs, 2 eggs, 4 teaspoons fat, 1 cup tomato sauce, (or meat gravy). Add 1 beaten egg to white sauce, mix with Macaroni and cool on platter. Shape into croquettes, roll in crumbs and beaten egg. Fry in deep fat hot enough to brown well in 40 seconds. Drain, and serve with tomato sauce.

Directions for Boiling
Use two quarts water, two teaspoons salt, one half lb. of Macaroni. Let water come to boiling point,—add Macaroni and boil vigorously 12 or 15 minutes—until tender. Macaroni must always be boiled as directed before use in any combination.

Macaroni and Sweetbreads
One half lb. Macaroni, 1 lb. sweetbreads, 1 onion, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, few grains of pepper. Cover sweetbreads with cold water, add chopped onion and 1 teaspoon salt. Let stand 15 minutes, cook slowly until tender. Remove from broth, chop fine, and take off tissue. Put in upper part of double boiler with Macaroni, butter, parsley, salt, pepper and previous sweetbread broth. Cook over boiling water 20 minutes.

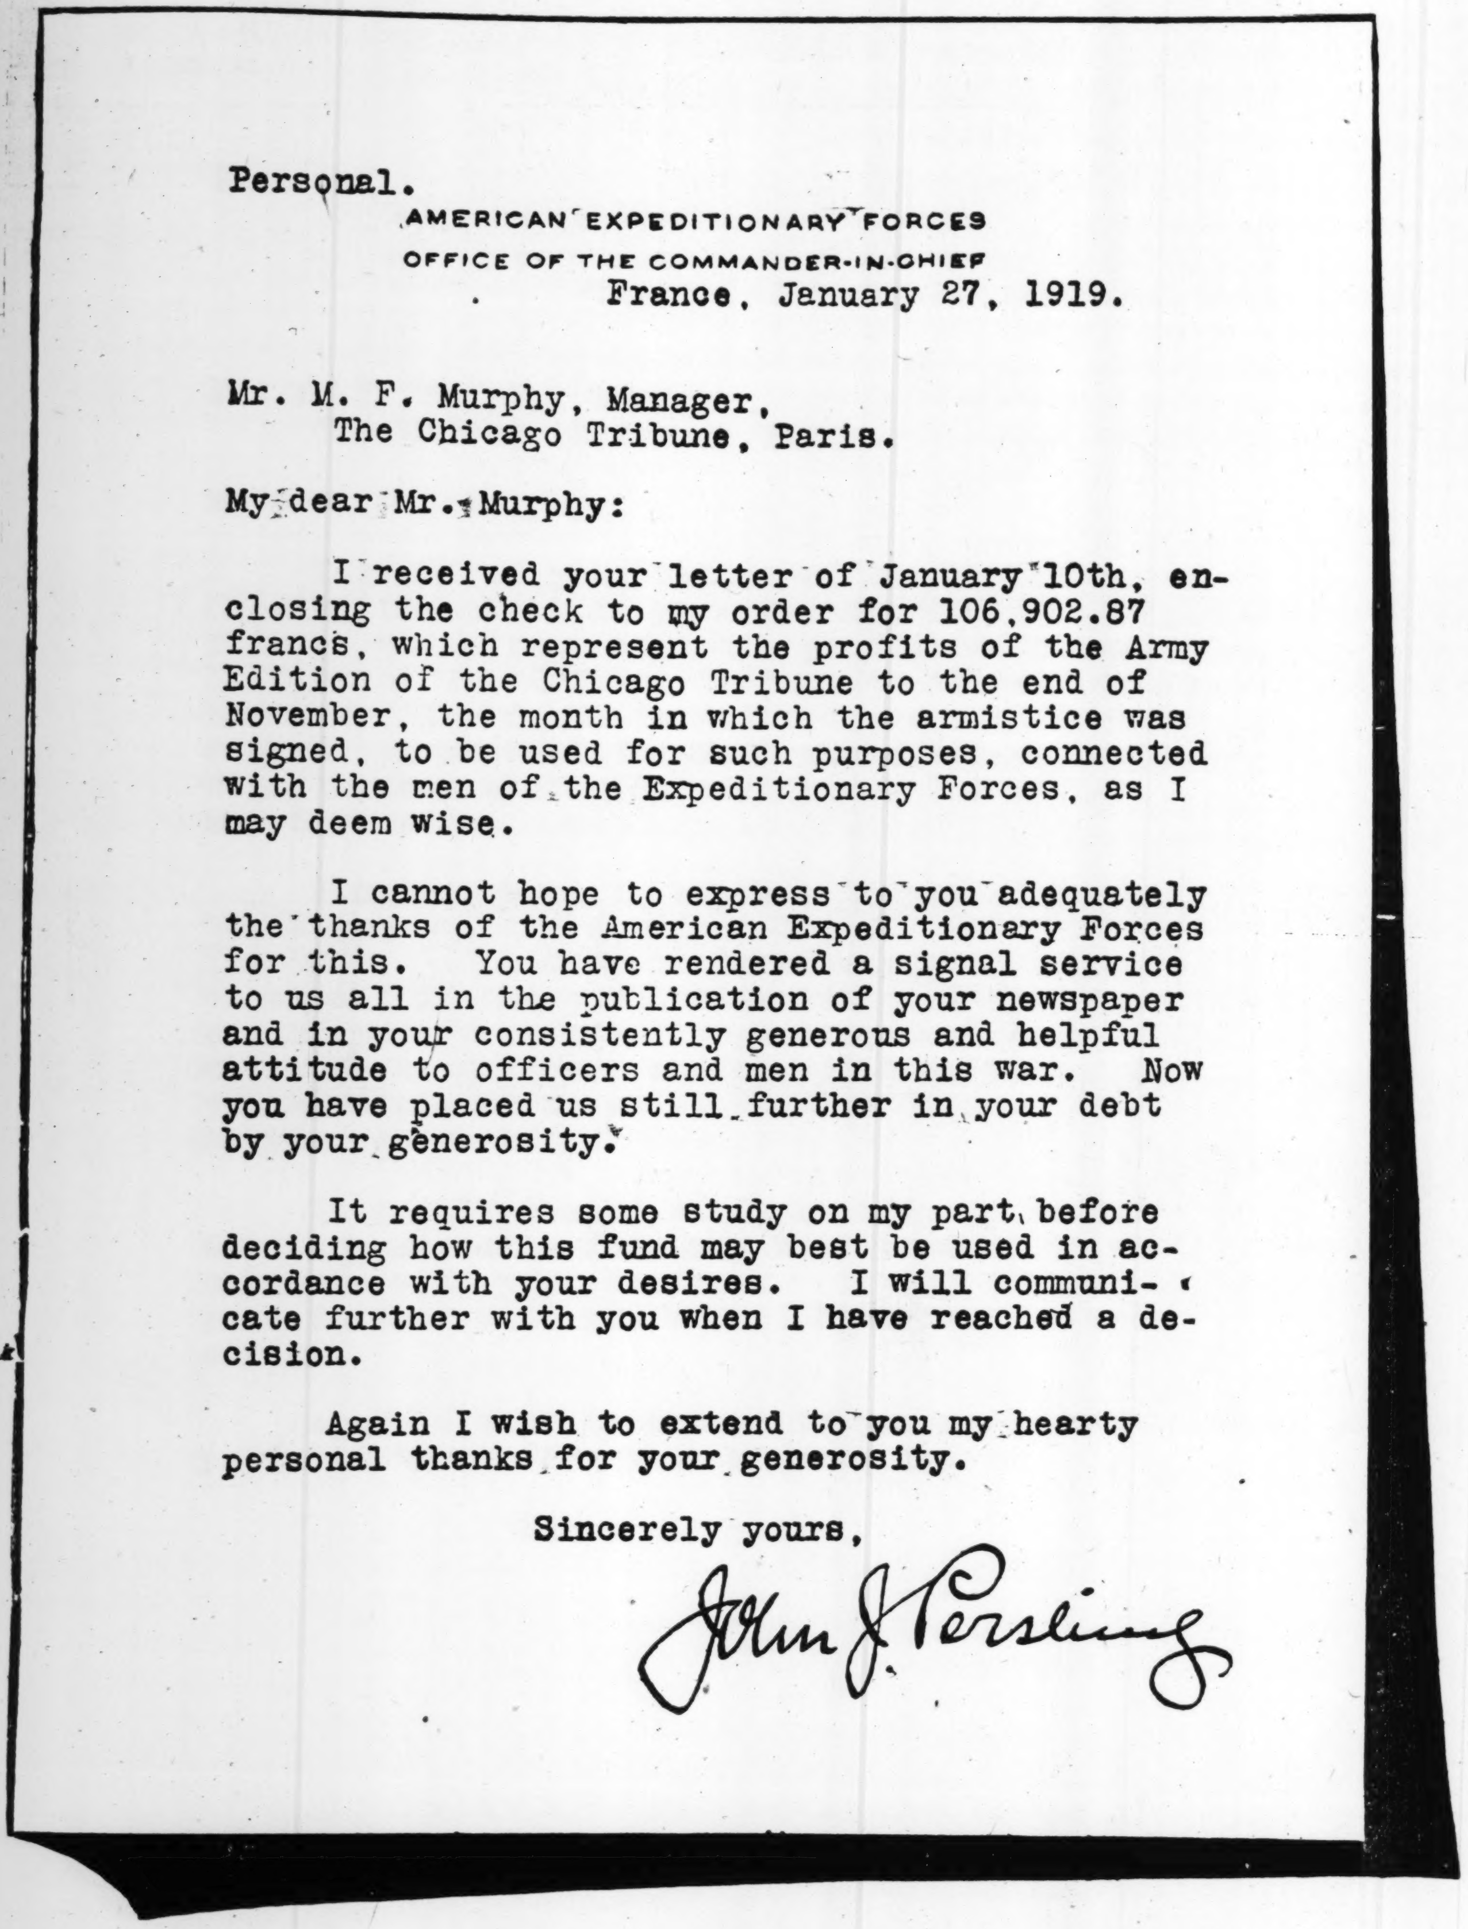
A Letter from Pershing



Personal.

AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF
France, January 27, 1919.

Mr. M. F. Murphy, Manager,
The Chicago Tribune, Paris.

My dear Mr. Murphy:

I received your letter of January 10th, enclosing the check to my order for 106,902.87 francs, which represent the profits of the Army Edition of the Chicago Tribune to the end of November, the month in which the armistice was signed, to be used for such purposes, connected with the men of the Expeditionary Forces, as I may deem wise.

I cannot hope to express to you adequately the thanks of the American Expeditionary Forces for this. You have rendered a signal service to us all in the publication of your newspaper and in your consistently generous and helpful attitude to officers and men in this war. Now you have placed us still further in your debt by your generosity.

It requires some study on my part before deciding how this fund may best be used in accordance with your desires. I will communicate further with you when I have reached a decision.

Again I wish to extend to you my hearty personal thanks for your generosity.

Sincerely yours,

John J. Pershing

WHEN Uncle Sam went to war The Chicago Tribune was (and still is) the only American newspaper that established a special daily European edition for the benefit of the A. E. F. and other Americans in France. Not only that, but it was the only paper of any allied nation that performed such a service for its fighting men.

For eighteen months The Army Edition of The Chicago Tribune has strengthened the morale of the American soldiers in trench and camp by supplying them every day (often by aeroplane) with world news, with American news, with cartoons, wit and gossip.

Carried on for many months at heavy loss, its swelling popularity with the rapidly increasing army eventually produced profits. Upon the signing of the armistice The Army Edition turned over to General John J. Pershing as the entire profits of the paper from the time of its inception up to the last day of November, 1918, a check for 106,902 francs. This money is to be devoted to any army funds the commander in chief may direct. General Pershing's letter of appreciation is reproduced on this page.

The Long Arm of "The W. G. N."

The Army Edition of The Chicago Tribune stands distinct from any other English language publication in Europe. The Stars and Stripes is a weekly giving the gossip of the A. E. F. to the A. E. F. Other continental daily newspapers are printed in English in France, but The Army Edition of The Chicago Tribune is the one characteristically American Daily newspaper printed in France.

Only Paper in Europe with These Features:

Cartoons by John T. McCutcheon, Carey Orr, Frank King, Sidney Smith, Claire Briggs.

Humorous stories by Ring Lardner and column of wit by B. L. T.

FLOYD GIBBONS
FREDERICK SMITH
FRAZIER HUNT
PARKE BROWN

Daily services of these Tribune special correspondents scattered throughout Europe:

HENRY HYDE
M. F. MURPHY
RICHARD HENRY LITTLE CONSTANCE DREXEL
HENRY WALES
LADISLAV CZAPSKI
SPEARMAN LEWIS

Full reports of two European news services—The Radio and Havas agencies.

Daily cable reports from The Chicago Tribune, from Robert Burns Peattie, staff correspondent in New York, and from Arthur Sears Henning, staff correspondent in Washington.

What Pershing's Letter Means to Advertisers

Successful advertising depends not only on copy and circulation and proper merchandising, but also on responsiveness of readers—and responsiveness depends largely upon the attitude of readers toward the medium used.

The Chicago Tribune produces results far out of proportion to Chicago Tribune circulation. The greatest reason for this is the feeling of confidence, of respect, of pride, which Chicago Tribune subscribers have for their newspaper—their conviction that it is the world's greatest newspaper, or, as they call it, "The W. G. N."

High editorial policy, strict censorship of advertising, and a record of sensational achievements such as that of which the above letter marks the climax—all these contribute to the prestige and power of advertising in The Chicago Tribune—of your advertising in The Chicago Tribune.

A Real Newspaper

The Army Edition of The Chicago Tribune is a real newspaper. It has, therefore, secured a remarkable circulation not only among soldiers of the expeditionary forces, but among the business men of Europe—business men who are looking toward America.

Now that the war is over, the name is to be changed to The Paris Edition of The Chicago Tribune, under which title it will continue in Europe its service to Americans and to America.

European exporters, importers and bankers are reading The Paris Edition of The Chicago Tribune as one of the chief sources of authentic, up-to-date information concerning the United States. Like The Chicago Tribune, itself, it is not only a great newspaper, but a splendid advertising medium.

Dominating the Richest Territory in the World, Chicago Tribune Advertising Has an Unequaled Record of Achievement—Use It!

THIN PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

How It Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

"Take plain bitro-phosphate," is the advice of physicians to thin, delicate, nervous people who lack strength, energy and nerve force, and there seems to be ample proof of the efficacy of this preparation to warrant the recommendation. Moreover, if we judge from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros.' Drug Co. and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., in St. Louis, and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Miss Josephine Davis, reporting her own experience with BITRO PHOSPHATE, says: "It is remarkable what it did for me. After a few days I began to regain my strength, felt full of life, was able to sleep soundly and all my little troubles seemed to disappear. I gained twelve pounds in four weeks."

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties. It should not be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.—ADV.

Drive the Liquor Habit From Your Home

Can Be Done Secretly

Physicians and druggists unhesitatingly recommend Tescum Powders for the liquor habit in any form. They quickly destroy the craving and make whisky and other alcoholic beverages repugnant. Druggists will tell you Tescum is selling better than any other remedy for the liquor habit. There is a reason for this. It is because it gives better satisfaction. One physician says: "I can stand in the door of my home and throw a stone into a neighbor's yard to whom I gave Tescum powders for drunkenness, and he was completely cured. Have also cured a large number of other patients." A druggist reports: "Tescum is having an enormous sale. It gives excellent satisfaction." A lady recently wrote: "I have used Tescum on my husband secretly and he has not taken a drink in three months." Another lady says: "I only wish I had known of Tescum before." Here is another who has tried it: "After taking two boxes of Tescum I did not crave liquor." Another writes: "I don't think it expensive at all. Just think of the thousands of dollars he has spent for whisky. The few dollars I spent for Tescum has been worth thousands." Here is an extract from another letter: "I sent a box of Tescum to my friend, Mrs. C. M., for her to try on her husband. Hope she will be as successful as I have been, for it's wonderful. I will never tell my husband what cured him." And so on it goes, one enthusiastic report after another. If you have a relative or friend who drinks just try it for a few weeks and note the marvelous change. They will soon complain that drink does not taste the same, and in a short time they will stop altogether and never know the reason why.

NOTE—A leading druggist, when shown the above article, said: "Yes, Tescum is a very remarkable remedy for the drink habit. It is harmless, wonderfully effective and is having an enormous sale. I advise everyone who wishes to destroy the liquor habit to give it a trial." You take no risk with Tescum, as it is sold in this city under a steel-bound money-refund guarantee by all druggists, including Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley and Wolff-Wilson.—ADV.

PART SALONIKI FRONT HAD IN ALLIED VICTORY EXPLAINED

establishing submarine bases which would have menaced the vital cargoes of the Eastern Mediterranean. If the Germans could have had a chance, they would have sent submarines overland, in parts, and assembled them at points on the Greek coast. As it was, they made trouble in the Aegean.

"In the winter of 1916-17 our fleet had the task of transporting the new Greek army, reorganized by Premier Venizelos, from the islands, Crete especially, to Saloniki. The Germans were particularly desirous of interfering, but we were happily able to get the Greek troops landed without the loss of a man. This was in addition to our transport of our own troops and supplies, and regular sea patrol duty.

"One of my experiences, in the period of uncertainty in Greece, was in connection with the allied flanking movement against a possible German movement toward Athens. I was sent, in a torpedo boat, to find a suitable landing place for the allied forces. We landed on soil held by Royalist troops.

"We said we wished to learn about railway facilities to Athens. That was hardly the whole truth. The officer who met us said, 'I am for the King, and against Venizelos, but we Greeks have no quarrel with Great Britain or France.'

Saloniki's White Tower.

"I was the only allied officer stationed in the White Tower of Saloniki. The Tower, where the allied signal service was installed, was occupied by a number of British soldiers in charge of the signal system, and a body of Greek police. Outside, a French contingent was encamped. It was a happy family indeed.

"When it rained, the French took refuge in the tower. The Greeks protested. There were two sentries outside the tower, one Greek, one English. The dispute was brought to me. We had no rights in the matter. We weren't in the right in being there at all. So I felt that I had to smooth things over, and I persuaded the French not to insist on occupying the tower.

"Gen. Serrail, the French commander, had an eye to the theatrical. When he found that his relations with the Greek authorities were not satisfactory, he declared martial law on the chief holiday, the King's name-day. The Cathedral of Saloniki, where the great celebration was to be held and the public buildings, were occupied by the French, Serbian and British troops. The people were out in their best clothes, but they could only promenade, as there was no celebration.

A Plea for Greece.

"I hope that, in the peace settlement, the vital seacoast interests of Greece may have full consideration. Greece is not in a position to be a great land power, and is probably not strong enough to hold Constantinople. But Greece should have more of the Aegean coast.

"It ought to be possible to satisfy all the Balkan nations, even Bulgaria, which felt, perhaps reasonably, that she was shut out of her proper share of the fruits of the Balkan war. Constantinople and the straits should be internationalized, and Albania seems to require a protectorate, obviously that of Italy.

"The part of my war experiences which I prize most was my opportunity for knowing Venizelos, the man who pulled the demoralized nation together, created the new Greek army, and inspired it to fight so magnificently.

GOMPERS SAYS U. S. EMPLOYERS MUST BE JUST TO LABORERS

concept, as a united body against the presentation of thought and ideas, no one knows with what we may have to contend later.

The workers of America made many sacrifices during the war. Many of our employes and financiers reaped enormous profits out of the war. There are some lessons which this war has taught. There are some advantages which the workers have gained, and these must not be sacrificed upon the altar of greed and gain.

Against Lowering Living Standards.

The standards of life of the American working people must not be lowered. Labor cannot live decently on a wage less than it now receives without bringing down the standard of living. Wages must not be reduced. In many instances they must be increased to enable the wage earner to live in health and comfort. Hours of work must not be lengthened, but shortened. The workers of our country must be given leisure and opportunity for the improvement of mind and body and spirit.

Our American Bourbons must understand that the day of absolutism in industry as in politics is at an end. Having defeated political autocracy abroad, the workers will not consent to have industrial autocracy enthroned at home. We insist that a better time shall come into the work and the lives of the working people and of all the people of our country.

We hope to bring about a better day and a better time, to see to it that this republic of ours shall grow industrially, agriculturally, commercially, financially, spiritually, humanely.

Readjustment and reconstruction confront all nations. Labor faces these problems calmly and confidently, ready to give service for the good of all our people and our republic; firm in the conviction that good will, justice, freedom and democracy will finally prevail throughout the world.

Famo Kills Seborrhea

It Stops the Dandruff Disease and Grows New Hair

Science knows now that Seborrhea causes falling hair and finally, baldness.

Seborrhea is the bacillus of dandruff.

Famo actually kills this germ that kills the hair.

The formula of Famo came from one of Detroit's largest laboratories, after two years of constant research.

It worked scores of authenticated cures of Seborrhea, before it was even given a name.

If you have dandruff, you have Seborrhea.

Famo dissolves the dandruff. It penetrates the glands of the scalp that feed the hair.

It grows hair by making and keeping the scalp and hair healthy.

Seborrhea is a disease as deadly to hair as is Pyorrhea to the teeth.

And unless you use Famo to kill the Seborrhea germ, your hair is making a losing fight.

Everything about Famo is better.

Everything in it is helpful to the hair — helpful toward a healthy scalp, toward the growth of beautifully glossy, luxuriant hair.

Famo contains not a trace of alcohol, which dries out the natural oil of the hair.

Famo actually postpones the coming of gray hair by keeping the scalp healthy.

Thousands of hair shops testify to the extent of the scourge of Seborrhea.

This appalling sacrifice can be stopped tomorrow by Famo.

Try a bottle today. The first treatment will dissolve the dandruff. And you will be amazed at the improvement in your hair after a few applications.

The dollar bottle is a quarter to a third larger, and lasts that much longer.

Begin to use it regularly this very night.

Get Famo at any toilet goods counter. In $1 and 35 cent sizes. Applications at the better barber shops.

Seborrhea is the medical name for a morbidly increased flow from the sebaceous glands of the scalp. The seborrhea excretion forms in scales or flakes and is commonly known as dandruff.

Not An Age for Weaklings— Nation Demands Men of Blood and Iron

Physician says Iron is Absolutely Essential to Great Development of Physical and Mental Power

How Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—Helps Put Renewed Strength and Energy Into the Veins of the Weak, Run-down, Infirm and Aged Often Increases Their Strength in Two Weeks' Time.

It Is the Iron-Blooded Men Who Master the Nerve Racking Jobs—
While the Hand of Fate Ruthlessly Pushes Aside The Weaklings Whose Blood Is Starving for Want of Iron

This is not an age for weaklings—war-time methods of living have raised the physical standards of the nations. So many modern men and women have more iron in their blood today as a result of eating coarse foods and living in the open that their vigorous health and untiring energy are in sharp contrast to the weak, run-down condition of those whose blood is literally starving for want of iron. To possess the power, energy and endurance that win we must keep the blood rich in strength-giving iron and unless sufficient iron is obtained from our foods it must be supplied in some form which is easily absorbed and assimilated by the system. For this purpose physicians below explain why they prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which by enriching the blood and creating thousands of new red blood cells often quickly transform the flabby flesh, toneless tissues and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a glow of health. It increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances.

In commenting upon the probability of building up a stronger race of people by increasing the supply of iron in their blood, Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon, Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey, says:

"Just as lack of proper foods for its soldiers saps the strength of a nation, so does want of sufficient iron in the blood of men and women reduce their power and make them an easy prey to the thousands of disease germs constantly around us and always ready to attack the constitutions of the weak and run-down. It is not the quantity of food you eat which makes you strong, but the amount which is assimilated and taken up by the blood.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. Refined foods and modern methods of cooking have robbed us of much of the iron which Nature intended we should receive, and there is no doubt in my mind that the coarse foods of wartime, with their greater percentage of strength-giving iron, have materially aided in building up a stronger race of people. But unless this iron is obtained from our food it must be supplied in some form that is easily assimilated if we want to possess power, energy and endurance. For supplying this deficiency and increasing the red blood corpuscles, I know of nothing more effective than organic iron—Nuxated Iron. From a careful examination of the formula and my own tests of Nuxated Iron. I feel convinced that it is a preparation which any physician can take himself or prescribe for his patients with the utmost confidence of obtaining highly beneficial and satisfactory results. The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually as a tonic, strength and blood-builder is in itself an evidence of tremendous public confidence, and I am convinced that if others would take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run down it would help make a nation of stronger, healthier men and women."

In commenting on the relation of strong nerves and physical endurance in the attainment of success and power, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands are held back in life for want of sufficient iron in the blood. A weak body means a weakened brain, weak nerve force means weakened will power, and like the race horse beaten by a nose, many a capable man or woman falls just short of winning because they don't back up their mentality with the physical strength and energy which come from having plenty of iron in the blood. That irritable twitch, that fit of despondency, that dizzy, fearful feeling—these are the sort of signals nature gives to tired, listless folks when the blood is clamoring for strength-giving iron—more iron to restore the health by enriching the blood and creating thousands of new red blood cells.

"In my opinion, the greatest curse to the health and strength of American people of today is the alarming deficiency of iron in their blood. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the blood that life-sustaining oxygen enters the body. Without iron there is no strength, vitality and endurance to combat obstacles or withstand severe strains. Lack of sufficient iron in the blood has ruined many a man's nerves and utterly robbed him of that virile force and stamina which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

"Therefore, I strongly advise those who feel the need of a strength and blood builder to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package."

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had, in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, recommended above, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Store Co. and all other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

GIRLS

No One Will Know You Use Face Powder

If you use derwillo, the very latest thing in powders. It's impossible to detect it and it gives the skin that rosy, peach-like appearance and baby softness everybody raves about. You put it on in the morning and it stays there all day. No touching up to keep your nose from shining. Perspiration does not affect it and it will not rub off on clothing. It instantly beautifies the complexion, puts color in your cheeks, and is a wonderful tonic for the skin; prevents blackheads, coarse pores, hides freckles, tan, sun spots and other blemishes on the face, neck, hands and arms. Rough, chapped skin quickly disappears and leaves you with a complexion of youth, which will attract attention anywhere. Apply derwillo before going to theater or parties and just note the favorable comments of your friends. It feels so good on your face that you will never be without it, and you will forever discard the old forms of face powder. It contains no rice powder, which clogs the pores or injurious chemicals, such as bismuth or pearl white, so often found in many high-grade powders. Its principal ingredient is used by the leading skin specialists in the treatment of many skin diseases, as it is a genuine tonic to the skin, is absolutely harmless and will not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Here is a fair offer: Get a package from your druggist today, use it for a week or two, and if you are not satisfied ask him for your money back and he will gladly give it to you. If it were not something out of the ordinary, do you suppose we could afford to make you such an offer? If you really want a beautiful complexion, here is your chance to have one without any expense if it fails. Ask for derwillo and accept nothing else, then you will not be disappointed.

NOTE—When asked about derwillo one of our leading druggists said, "It is truly a wonderful beautifier, away ahead of anything we have ever sold, and those who use it are wild over it. It is giving such excellent satisfaction that we gladly refund the money to every dissatisfied customer." Derwillo is sold under an iron-clad money back guarantee in this city by all druggists, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros and Enderle.—ADVERTISEMENT.

THE EASIEST WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—ADV.

Woman at Head of Fargo Police: to Enforce Laws

MRS. F. H. WILDER.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FARGO, N. D., April 19.—North Dakota's first woman city officeholder, Mrs. F. H. Wilder, Police Commissioner of Fargo, is determined upon making Fargo a "clean city."

Mrs. Wilder, elected this week by the city commission to the task of directing the city's police force, will carry into effect in that work principles for which she says she has long been contending as a State officer of the North Dakota Women's Christian Temperance Union, and other organizations of similar nature.

"Nothing radical, but we will insist that the State and the city laws shall be enforced," says Mrs. Wilder, whose choice as Police Commissioner was unanimous at the hands of her four male fellow-commissioners. One of their number had originally been slated for the police position, but when the fact became known Mrs. Wilder's friends began to petition for Mrs. Wilder's appointment.

Fargo is governed by a city commission of five members, and the commissioners themselves distribute the assignments. Mrs. Wilder was elected with a plurality of only seven votes over her closest competitor in a five-cornered race, in which two commissioners were selected. It was the first time in the history of the city that women were permitted to be candidates for city office, and the first time that women were privileged to vote for city officials.

Mrs. Wilder, as Police Commissioner, has the power of appointing all members of the city police staff.

Mrs. Wilder was State treasurer of the North Dakota W. C. T. U. for several years and before that was an editor of the union's official newspaper, the White Ribbon. She has been an officer in the State Grand Lodge of the Eastern Star, and she has been an officer in the North Dakota Votes for Women League.

"I am just feeling my way," said Mrs. Wilder. "I am determined, however, on the principle of absolute enforcement of the laws, and I feel confident that in that program I will have the whole-hearted support of the citizens."

Mrs. Wilder's husband, Frank H. Wilder, is the secretary of an insurance company.

OMSK REGIME WOULD LET PEOPLE VOTE ON GOVERNMENT

Its Object Simply to Restore Order, Says Official, As Message to America.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMSK, Siberia, April 10 (delayed)—"What I would like to say to my friends in America," said Acting Foreign Minister Sukine today, "is that we are not engaged in refounding an empire or otherwise stifling Russian aspirations for liberty. Our task is merely restoring order until the people can have a chance to express themselves through the ballot. When they have emerged from the trials of the revolution, they will be educated in the sacred right of universal suffrage. We shall bring the present struggle to a successful end.

"Parenthetically, there is a distinction between guarding the railways and fighting the Bolsheviki. In the last three months only our own men have been on the battle line in Russia, this fact giving us national unity and patriotism. Under these circumstances, what we want is only that America shall understand the conditions brought about by Bolshevism and then manifest its sympathy with the elements here struggling for order. Until America speaks clearly, her attitude will be misinterpreted."

Sukine puts the case mildly. America's enemies in Siberia take every chance to show that she is unsympathetic. The immense distance from Vladivostok to Omsk helps to obscure the facts. More Americans should come to Omsk and become acquainted with the real Russians.

SIR OLIVER LODGE RETIRES

LONDON, March 18.—Sir Oliver Lodge, the British scientist who 10 years ago startled the world with his assertion that communication could be established with the dead, has announced his resignation as principal of Birmingham University.

"I intend," he says, "to devote the remainder of my life to the problem of the ether of space in both its physical and psychical relations. In the region of conjoint physicas and psychology there is much work to be done."

In a book recently published by Sir Oliver he wrote of the existence of his dead son in the spirit world and of long conversations between them.

PASTOR MEDAL WINNER AS MILITARY LEADER

LIEUT-COL. WILLIAM EVERSON.

FIGHTING PARSON RETURNING TO FLOCK

Lieut.-Col. W. G. Everson of Cincinnati Won Italian War Cross at Battle of Tagliamento.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, April 18.—Lieutenant-Colonel William G. Everson of Cincinnati, to whom was awarded the Italian war cross for conspicuous leadership and gallantry in Italy, and who carries official letters of commendation from the Italian high military command and other letters from Generals, brigade and corps leaders of the Italian units with which he fought, will soon become again the Rev. Mr. Everson, pastor of the Baptist Church at Norwood, O., a suburb of Cincinnati.

Lieutenant-Colonel Everson is said to be the only clergyman who became a line officer in the United States Army, and he soon will return to his flock in Norwood. His resignation was refused, and he received a letter from each member of his congregation on his arrival in New York on Tuesday, telling him of the welcome that awaited him and that his salary as pastor had been raised.

Cincinnati's fighting parson had another reason for desiring to hasten home—he hadn't yet seen his 11-months-old daughter.

Family Awaits Him.

Mrs. Everson was asked at her home in Norwood, where she and the baby and older boy have awaited the soldier-father's return, what act won for her husband the war cross of Italy.

"I don't know," she smiled. "Doctor Ever—I mean, Col. Everson—never wrote about that. He never tells of anything he does; he just writes about his wonderful men." And in New York, when reporters questioned the fighting minister, he dclined to discuss the war cross.

It is known, however, that Lieutenant-Colonel Everson won the Italian War Cross for conspicuous leadership and gallantry at the battle of Tagliamento, near Cadroipo, Italy, where, on Nov. 3, his command, notwithstanding the murderous machine-gun fire of the Austrians, captured the town.

Lieutenant-Colonel Everson is one of the most interesting figures among the officers who have just returned from the Italian front with men of the 332d Infantry. He was in command of 1400 huskies on the return trip aboard the Canopic. "Quite a flock," he laughed. His men eagerly told of the bravery of their leatook place at Fiume, that made the der.

They recited one incident which Rev. Mr. Everson famous among even among the Italians. The Jugo-Slavs had retired from the town, but left the American flag flying over the city hall. An Italian General officer ordered the Italian flag placed above the American flag. Lieutenant-Colonel Everson protested, and, when his protest was not heeded, he personally ordered the flags on a basis of equality. And his orders were obeyed.

Long Military Service.

Col. Everson has seen 16 years of military service. He fought in the Spanish-American war as a Major, and served many years as a Captain in the Indiana National Guard. When America entered the war, the Rev. Mr. Everson wanted to do his share. He was told that he could be of more use on the "line" than as a chaplain—so he became a line officer and instructor at Fort Benjamin Harrison. His popularity with his men and his military knowledge, which he said his pulpit experience made more valuable won him promotion to a Major and then Lieutenant-Colonel.

He says he hopes there won't be any more wars, and that he can continue to preach in the fine $100,000 church which he built in Norwood.

FORMER ST. LOUISAN IS INDIANAPOLIS DEALER

Men who began with the motor car business in St. Louis will remember a then active figure, Al. C. Webb, head of the Webb Motor Fire Apparatus of St. Louis. Webb some years ago removed to Indianapolis, still in the automobile business and when the war began, he was made Captain in the army and put in charge of motor truck production in the motor car factories of Indianapolis. He is said to have made a wonderful record in this work for the Government.

Webb has just been mustered out of the army with honors and has organized the A. C. Webb Motor Car Company in Indianapolis. He, on Friday, closed the contract with the Moon Motor Car Company of St. Louis as Indianapolis-distributor for the Moon lines. His specification was for 400 of the Victory Post-War Models.

TO PROHIBIT SUNDAY SALES

A dinner given by the Garage Owners' Association at the Western Rowing Club Tuesday was well attended and a number of applications were received. President H. P. Riefling presided. Mr. Hunt of the J. D. Street Co. made an interesting talk on oils and lubrication.

A resolution was passed instructing the legal adviser, Rudoplh Schneider, to frame a bill to be submitted to the Board of Aldermen, prohibiting the sale of all automobile accessories and supplies on Sunday. The bill will be similar to the law which affects the meat markets and grocery stores of the city.

WORKING IN THREE SHIFTS

S. W. Ramsey of the Southwest Nash Motor Car Company, St. Louis distributor of Nash cars and trucks reports that all his dealers are inquiring if they may double and in some cases triple their monthly allotment of Nash passenger cars. He reports that the factory is unable to increase his allotment due to inability to increase their production and the is therefore distributing all cars received on a pro rata basis as fast as they are received. The factory is at present working on three shifts of eight hours each.

WAR USE REVELATION OF TRUCK EFFICIENCY

F. M. Webb, manager of the truck sales department of the Southwest Nash Motor Car Co., states that 90 per cent of Nash passenger car dealers are now handling Nash trucks and report that business is exceptionally good in that line. Commenting upon this, he says:

"The enormous production of Nash trucks sold to the Government amounting to 12,502 finished trucks and reported to be the biggest order for trucks given to any factory, has resulted in a wonderful revelation to the prospective purchaser of farm trucks as to ability and efficiency of the Nash truck construction.

"One reason that the Nash gained such prominence was due in a measure to the M. & S. locking differential, which makes it impossible for one drive wheel to spin while the other remains motionless."

Mr. Webb has just returned from the factory and says that they are swinging into normal production very rapidly on both passenger cars and trucks. The factory has increased its working force by 1000 men more than have ever been employed before, and is at present oversold 20 per cent in the truck department.

DEALERS ELECT OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association Monday P. H. Brockman of the De Luxe Automobile Co. was elected president; H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., vice president, and W. S. Roberts of the J. I. Case T. M. Co., treasurer. The directors elected were John Boe, St. Louis Motor Car Co.; H. G. Hurd, Buick retail distributor; C. E. Lightfoot, General Motors Truck Co.; J. T. Salisbury, More Automobile Co.; Joseph A. Schlecht, Mound City Auto Co., and George Weber, Weber Implement and Auto Co.

The association authorized a subscription of $2500 for Victory Bonds and a handsome silver service was presented to the retiring president, Joseph A. Schlecht, on behalf of the association, by Secretary Robert E. Lee.

ENLARGE OVERLAND SERVICE FACILITIES

Following the decision of the Overland Automobile Co. to completely reorganize their service department, E. W. Martin, the service manager, visited several of the larger Overland distributers to get the benefit of their experience. He is now putting into effect many of the features that he found.

It is the intention to devote the entire building at Twenty-third and Locust to Overland service. There are over 3500 Overlands in use in St. Louis and at present time an average of a hundred cars a day pass through the hands of the service department.

The first floor will be used for the adjusters and testers. A feature here is an estimator who tells the exact cost of each job before it goes to the shop. Spare parts and accessories will have the second floor. A general overhauling shop is located on the third floor. Here the big repair jobs will be taken care of, while quick repairs and smaller replacements will be done on the fourth floor.

The paint shop and top and upholstering department will take up all of the sixth floor. The paint shop, which is very complete, can handle thirty-five cars at one time.

A comfortable rest room with telephones, magazines and newspapers has been fitted out on the first floor for the convenience of owners who wish to wait for a few moments while some minor adjustment is being made.

Regular inspection is urged of all Overland owners. To impress this on the minds of the owners, two service men are out all the time looking up those who have not had their car inspected recently, either inspecting the car at the man's home or arranging for it to be brought to the service station.

MOTOR TRADE TO HELP REDUCE MOTOR MISHAPS

At an informal meeting of the Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis at the Marquette Hotel Friday at noon, presided over by John F. Shuford, Carl L. Smith, secretary of the local Safety Council told of automobile and industrial accidents in St. Louis and the reduction in the latter and pledged the support of those present for greater automobile safety in St. Louis. P. H. Brockman the new president of the Automobile Dealers' Association promised cooperation of the Association with the Accessory Trade Association. C. E. Lightfoot of the General Motors Truck Co. appealed for the Victory Loan and Harry G. Moock of the National Automobile Dealers' Association recommended a protest against House Bill 685 which removes one of the two license plates from automobiles.

NEW DISTRIBUTER FOR GRANT AND NATIONAL

One of the most interesting changes along the "Row" recently, is that resulting from the incorporation of the Southern Motor Co., whose salesroom is at 3019 Locust street. This company was formed to take over the Grant Six Agency formerly handled by the Barcus Automobile Co., and has also contracted for the National Motor Cars as explained in another item in this issue.

The new company is starting a very aggressive campaign on both Grant and National cars, and emphasizes in its advertising especial attention to the new type of guaranteed service and guaranteed mileage, and the fact that cars can be easily purchased on the "Pay-as-you-ride" plan.

H. P. Federspiel, until recently President of the Cole Motor Sales Co. of Denver, and Cole distributer at Salt Lake City, is the General Manager of the new company, and is by his eleven years' of experience in the automobile field a strong convert to the belief that the only way to market any car profitably is to put 100-per-cent effort in the matter of satisfactory service always to the owners of the cars he sells.

The Southern Motor Co. will carry a complete line of Grant passenger cars, Grant trucks and the National passenger cars in both six and twelve cylinder models. The quarters at 3019 Locust street are for sales and service work, reserve stock of cars being carried in a privately controlled warehouse.

During the coming week displays will be made of the latest models of both open and closed car types of both the National and Grant lines.

This company is also distributer for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois for both National and Grant.

DAYLIGHT SPOILS BATTERI

"Last year many motorists experienced trouble with their storage batteries, due to the extra hour of daylight," says William E. Moerschell of the Moerschell Electric Co., distributors for the U. S. L. batteries. "The long hours in the evening allow the car to be driven a great deal without using the lights. In this way the battery is always charging and little current being taken out. The result is an overcharged battery and oftentimes a ruined one.

"To avoid this every motor car owner should have his battery inspected regularly. This condition can then be detected and the lights allowed to burn a little extra to remedy the fault. We are registering every U. S. L. user and urging that they have their batteries inspected every few weeks."

J. E. Costlow, supervisor of the Liberty Motor Car Co., spent last week with the Briscoe Motor Sales Co., St. Louis distributors of Liberty cars.

PACKARD TRUCKS AS GOOD-WILL BUILDERS

Establish Confidence in Delivery Safeguard Hauling Contracts
Lower Transportation Costs

ONE of our most successful merchants says that before buying new fixtures or equipment he asks himself: "What will our customers think about it?"

Nothing earns money on the customers' good opinion quicker than delivery equipment.

This is just as true of a coal yard as it is of a department store. As true for the hauling contractor as the local express company.

What people think of the Packard Truck is based upon how they have been served by it.

Packard Trucks have served better because they were sold to serve.

If a merchant wanted just a truck he rarely got a Packard. If he wanted a truck transportation job done right, permanently and at the lowest cost—you were practically certain to see some Packards running around with his sign on them.

And so the public have come to believe that Packard and good service go together.

Naturally, some business men will praise the idea of buying trucks on a transportation basis but will try to beat the Packard method.

It cannot be done.

Nobody has a patent on the plan, but trying to carry it out with the ordinary motor truck, only serves to show up the truck.

To make it work—to make your truck transportation costs a definite, predeterminate figure, low enough to meet all competition—you must take equally good engineering design, equal stamina, equal long life with the Packard Truck.

Everybody knows the Packard reputation. You've heard about the many Packard Trucks now running that have travelled more than one hundred thousand miles.

Which will a business man do? Pay $3,000 for 50,000 miles—or pay $4,000 for 100,000?

Invest an extra thousand dollars to insure minimum transportation cost—or pay out that thousand in repair bills that were not in his original estimate?

Anybody can recite the theory of cutting down transportation costs. The Packard Freight Transportation Department can give actual facts and figures: Their services are available to any business man—by telephone, mail, or at the local Packard showroom.

A HOT SPOT Chalmers gets the might out of gas

And puts it into action

—on an "impossible" hill

—on the boulevard where a ten yard spurt puts you ahead of a less responsive car —on a country turnpike when supper is waiting.

On countless other occasions when "a little extra" is asked and "a little extra" is given the great Hot Spot engine supplies what you ask.

Hot Spot "cracks" the prevailing low grade gas into a very fine vapor and Ram's-horn then completes a task not a whit less important.

Ram's-horn gently and quickly "feeds" each cylinder of the six by the short 14-inch route to each and gives the same fresh, "powdered" gas to every cylinder alike.

Unless you're driving the new Chalmers some of your cylinders are often getting a rich gas and some a lean gas.

That makes your engine run "choppy" on occasions.

A Hot Spot Chalmers runs like silk feels, and you experience a pride in your new Chalmers that is difficult to describe.

One ride generally convinces the hard-headed individual; and once a man is won to Chalmers ownership he'll swear he has one of the few great cars of the world.

JORDAN BROUGHAM IS FINE WOMAN'S CAR

One of the standard Jordan models popular with the women is the Brougham. It is a comparatively new car, having been brought out toward the end of the 1918 summer season, and will be continued during 1919.

The thing that makes the Brougham so well liked by the women is the feeling of luxury and comfort one gets in it. It just seems to go with an afternoon gown. A woman can drive it and look perfectly comfortable. It is just the thing for afternoon calls, bridges, shopping and driving in the park.

In the Jordan Brougham, the worst of a woman's troubles are eliminated at the start by a chassis of such mechanical excellence that she can feel perfectly safe from the annoyance and embarrasment of a breakdown. The interior workmanship is in keeping with the purpose of the car—upholstery of fine worsteds and paneling and moldings in beautiful Circassian walnut. There is a dome light and individual reading lamps.

The driving position has been studied with the woman especially kept in mind. The steering is made so flexible that the car will turn in almost any road. Doors are broad and easy to enter. Five persons can sit comfortably in the full width rear seat and two individual front seats.

VELIE WINS PRIZE ON POPULAR APPLIANCE

Before a crowd of 15,000 people attending the Elks Automobile Style Show in New Orleans, the Velie six was awarded the first prize over 40 entries by popular acclaim of the entire assemblage. The judges were: Charles Barrett, French Consul-General; T. S. Carlisle, Consul-General of Great Britain; Bruno Zuculin, Consul-General of Italy, and Bruce Campbell, grand exalted ruler of the Elks, which organization sponsored the show as a part of the festivities dedicating a new $800,000 clubhouse.

The judges' decision was based on the cheering applause of the crowd as the various cars passed the grand stand review. The expressed approval of the crowd was deafening as the Velie was displayed in various maneuvers by Mrs. Lawrence Williams.

Not only was the first award given the Velie Sport Model in the roadster class, but later the Velie won over contestants in all classes and was given the Grand Prize and golden ribbon and unbounded enthusiasm of the multitude.

A FAMILY ECONOMY.

Increasing costs of transportation are bringing a large number of people to the realization that a motor car for the family is an economical proposition. The local dealer for Dort motor cars, the Kardell Motor Car Co., points out the fact that in reality a car in any household is a utility and pleasure, whose costs are very modest in both instances.

"Per mile a motor car may cost a little more to operate than street car or train fare would be in making the same journey," says H. F. Fahrenkrog. "But the pleasure obtained at this cost for a mile of motoring is so cheap in comparison to the joy of it that it is perfectly fair to charge a small part of the pure transportation rides to the amusement page in the family ledger. In doing this the costs of maintaining and operating an automobile are in competition with both transportation prices and pleasure expenditures."

THE NATIONAL IN WAR.

In order that there may be recorded a complete and exact history of the war time activities of National cars, there has been issued by the National factory a booklet entitled, "National in War Time," which sets forth the many war tasks performed by National, the most prominent of which is the service rendered by the 200 National sedans which were on continuous active duty with the American Army in France.

In addition to the Nationals sent abroad, both army and navy purchased and used large quantities of National 12-cylinder touring cars in this country. Other than their own cars, the National factory built and delivered to the Government for use in the army 2000 two-ton ammunition trucks.

The National is locally handled by the Weber Implement & Auto Co.

PLAN CANADIAN PLANT

The Paige Detroit Motor Car Co. has under serious consideration the establishment of Canadian plants for the assembly of Paige cars and trucks. R. D. McCain, one of the traveling representatives of the Paige company, is now in Canada, and one of the purposes of Mr. McCain's trip is to survey the situation and gather data bearing upon such a move on the part of his company.

WILLS QUITS FORD CO.

C. Harold Wills has severed with the Ford Motor Co. and Henry Ford, business relations which cover a period of nearly 18 years. Mr. Wills' association with Henry Ford, beginning March 20, 1901, antedates the organization of the Ford Motor Co. by two years. In fact, Mr. Wills was the first associate Mr. Ford selected in his original venture as an independent motor car manufacturer.

While unprepared as yet to make any definite public statement of his plans, Mr. Wills announces that he is going into a manufacturing business somewhat similar to the one to which he has given nearly two decades of his extraordinarily successful and brilliant career. He expects to open temporary offices in the Book Building and is not affiliated with any other company or organization.

It is generally conceded that C. Harold Wills is responsible for two vastly important factors in the amazing success of the Ford Motor Co. The first of these factors is the designing of the Ford car. Mr. Wills has had charge of the designing and the manufacture of every automobile that the Ford Motor Co. has produced since its organization June 16, 1903.

The second important factor in Ford success is the work Mr. Wills has done in designing, organizing and developing the huge manufacturing equipment and facilities which have made it possible for the Ford Motor Co. to produce nearly a million automobiles a year.

Showing the World What 600,000 Owners Know

A few days ago a stock Model 90 Overland touring car again proved its stamina by smashing completely the world's non-stop high gear record. The official records prove it to be one of the greatest reliability records ever made by any car. The distance covered was 129 miles better than the best previous showing.

This test was made in Oklahoma. It was not staged on boulevards. The daily average was over 600 miles through the severest weather, and over every kind of road from country highways to crowded city streets. The distance was equal to a trip from New York to Los Angeles, and back to Oklahoma City.

The car was sealed in high gear and the shift lever was removed. Not once was there the slightest mechanical trouble, the least hesitation, or the faintest break in the smooth, even action of the Overland motor.

At the end of seven days and seven nights of gruelling test the Overland Model 90 finished in as perfect running condition as when it started, and this standard car is an exact duplicate of the Model 90 we will be glad to show you.

This test does not make the car any better, it merely proves in a dramatic way what owners already know about this wonderful car.

AUTO NOTES and GOSSIP.

The Peerless Starter Sales Agency which will market the Peerless Starter for Ford cars in the St. Louis district has opened sales rooms at 1000 Olive street.

At an informal meeting of the Accessory Trade of St. Louis at the Marquette Hotel Friday, Arthur C. Morey, head of the local Safety Council, and P. H. Brockman, the new president of the Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, were the speakers.

The Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. will soon make an announcement of the greatest interest to the automobile public of St. Louis and contiguous territory. R. C. Frampton will not intimate the nature of the announcement but says that its importance will be such as to create interest among all owners of automobiles.

A. S. Frampton, vice president and treasurer of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributor of the Hudson and Essex cars, spent the week in St. Louis at the company's office to look into business conditions. He expresses himself as very well pleased at the vast improvements in business outlook for 1919.

R. C. Frampton expresses his high appreciation of the honor bestowed upon him in nominating him for the office of president of such an organization as the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, as he has only been located in St. Louis less than two years. He assures the president-elect and the new board of directors of his enthusiastic co-operation.

Mark Kasan, who has just been discharged from the 314th Engineers Corps, A. E. F., has opened an auto repair shop at 3323 Easton avenue under the name of Page Easton Auto Repair Co. He saw active service in France and was honorably discharged at the base hospital in Anniston, Ala.

Leigh Whetton, treasurer of the Holthaus Saddlery and Auto Supply Co., spent last week at the factory of the Miller Rubber Co. The Holthaus company is the St. Louis distributor of Miller Rubber Co. products.

C. W. Edwards of the Edwards Sales Co., manufacturers of the Johnson Lock, has just returned from a visit to the factory at Chicago. He states that they are now manufacturing 400 Johnson locks per day as against 300 locks per month turned out before the armistice was signed. He also states that the company is now behind orders 3500 locks, but hopes the be in a position to take care of the trade within 60 to 90 days.

F. H. Rengers, general sales manager of the Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, has just closed distributors' contracts for the Moon victory model and other Moon productions at Dayton, O., Pittsburg, Pa., Wheeling, W. Va., Cincinnati, O., Atlanta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash.

GREAT WESTERN TIRE CO. OPENS ST. LOUIS BRANCH

The Great Western Tire Corporation, St. Louis branch of a large retail tire distributing corporation in New York, opened its store at 2811 Locust street last week, with E. G. Hefter of New York in charge. The parent corporation operates a chain of more than 100 stores from coast to coast. The company is stated to have arrangements with 18 tire factories to take their surplus stock, including slightly blemished tires, discontinued styles and odd sizes, classified as seconds.

Hefter has arranged a free air line and store-door service. The company will also have the exclusive agency in St. Louis for the Keystone and National Speedway tires.

SHOCK STRIP ON TIRES.

Increased mileage and greater tire economy afforded by the absorbing shock strip has made this remarkable development of Racine Rubber Co. chemists the season's real boon to car owners.

Motorists realize that one of the gravest ills from which automobile tires suffer is the separation of the tread from the tire carcass. That is just the danger the absorbing shock strip eliminates. And it does this effectively and undeniably by uniting the tough rubber of the tread to the rubberized cord carcass of the tire.

This absorbing shock strip is an extra strip of specially compressed rubber, which welds the cord carcass and rubber tread into a firm, wear-resisting and inseparable whole. The rubber is of graduated resiliency, and thus it neutralizes and absorbs the shocks of the road.

TESTS BATTERY CELLS

The new inspection service for electric car owners has just been inaugurated by the Exide Service Station at 3408 Lindell avenue. Although a good many inspections have been made in the state, there has been no systematic method of keeping track of the exact condition of the battery equipment in electric cars in the past, and it was with this in mind that the Exide started this new system.

Arrangements have been completed whereby one cell of the battery can be quickly removed for inspection of the plates and this cell can then be quickly sealed up and put back into condition. A full test of the gravity of all the cells will also be made and the entire service will be rendered in about 15 minutes, so that a user can have this made readily while he waits at the service station, or, if he prefers, the car can be left for the day, as there is plenty of room at the new service station for cars to be parked.

It is contemplated that users will be notified three months after the last inspection that another inspection should be made. In this way the user will know every three months the exact condition of his battery. A charge of $1 will be made for each inspection to cover its actual cost. This will include a complete written report covering each inspection.

Performance

"You'll Know When You Sit at the Wheel"

THE new series Stearns-Knight represents what we believe to be the utmost in motor car construction, combining the Knight sleeve-valve motor at its best with the long recognized sturdiness of Stearns chassis design.

These cars embody few radical changes, but they do include many betterments and refinements in detail of construction and general body line.

In the making, each car is a separate unit. They are built in limited quantities — to satisfy discriminating buyers. Quantity production has not been permitted to replace quality manufacture.

All mechanical units are created and built in the Stearns factory and according to Stearns standards. Each unit is built and tested for the particular car of which it becomes a part. Thus long life and unusual performance are assured.

Arrange now to see this car and know its merits.

TRAFFIC TRUCK DEALERS' CONVENTION IN MAY

May 9 and 10 is the time chosen by the Traffic Truck organization to have a large number of successful automobile dealers come to St. Louis to "see and believe." Traffic Trucks are now a nationally and internationally known product. This St. Louis manufacturing firm has enjoyed a truly astonishing success, and has added a new idea to the motor truck industry. New dealers are signing up every day. The Traffic organization is already extensive, but with the move into the greatly enlarged plant at 5200 North Second street manufacturing facilities have been increased to permit additions to the dealer body. Fifty Traffic trucks a day will be the production.

The idea of the convention is to bring from 500 to 1000 of the keenest dealers in America to St. Louis to see what the company is doing, to observe the sound construction of the Traffic Truck and to watch it perform.

The program for the entertainment of the Traffic guests is not definitely determined as yet, but it is understood that things will be kept moving.

This convention is a significant thing for St. Louis. It is a large plan, but it is also a sure proof of the prosperity and success of the company undertaking it. The Traffic convention, May 9 and 10, will work another achievement in the company's campaign to become the world's greatest manufacturers of motor trucks.

NEW MITCHELL SIX WINS QUICK SUCCESS

The new Mitchell six recently announced by the Mitchel Motors Co., Incorporated, of Racine, Wis., is meeting with instant and most gratifying favor wherever it is shown, according to John Boe of the St. Louis Motor Car Co.

"There was no question in our minds at the factory that after 18 months of patient development work we had a car that would command favorable attention," states Vice President R. C. Reuschaw; "but it certainly is comforting to see the way the public took hold of it as soon as it was announced.

"To say the new Victory model was the sensation of the national shows does not overstate the case. Few new models were shown and none which was new in so many ways as the new Mitchell six, so it was only natural that considerable interest was aroused.

"Nor was idle curiosity the motive behind this interest, as the tremendous business booked at the shows attests. The big plant at Racine will be kept running at top speed for months to take care of it."

AIR-COOLED CAR IS GETTING MUCH ATTENTION

The aeroplane and the war has been responsible for many marked changes and improvements in air-cooled motors. The English engineers perfected an air-cooled power plant which was considered one of the most efficient, based on the amount of horsepower developed in proportion to its weight.

This was the statement of Arthur Holmes, president of the Holmes Motor Car Co., which is producing the Holmes improved air-cooled car. He spent last Wednesday with F. W. Wolffe of the Franklin Auto and Supply Co., which has recently taken the Holmes franchise for this territory.

"The eyes of dozens of manufacturers and designers are now turning toward air-cooled motors. Nearly every new day brings the report of another motor car manufacturer who is experimenting with this type of power plant. Its lightness, simplicity and efficiency are constantly winning it new friends," said Holmes in discussing the future of the air-cooled car.

NEW STEARNS MODELS.

The F. B. Stearns Co. has announced that their new series of Stearns-Knight cars will soon be ready for delivery. Great interest in these cars is being shown because of the experience gained by Stearns in building Rolls-Royce aviation motors during the war, according to James E. Newell of the Newell Motor Car Co.

Although unchanged in principle, the new cars are certain to reflect various refinements resulting from the exchange of ideas with British engineers. Perhaps no motor concern in the world has a greater reputation for careful building than Rolls-Royce of England. Their cars established an international standard, and thousands of their aviation motors were used by the victorious airmen on the western front.

Stearns, as the American manufacturers of these famous aviation motors, had the benefit of comprehensive study and close insight into the practices and methods of the English builders. Such experience is of vital importance to buyers of after-war motor cars. It should result in a still better motor, if possible.

WILLYS SHARES PROFITS.

The Willys-Overland Co. has approved two sections of the profit-sharing plan under which it proposes to operate. The sections were completed by the factory committee of ten.

Profits to be shared with the employes will be distributed five times annually: In April, for January February and March; in July for April, May and June; in October for July, August and September; in December for October and November.

The other section requires that an employe, to become a profit sharer, must have been in continuous service. Absence from work because of sickness, injury or on consent of employer, does not affect his continuity of service. Absence, however, without report or satisfactory excuse, automatically removes the employe from the continuous service record. Overland men still in the military service will be conisdered as still in continuous service if they make prompt application for re-employment after their discharge from military service.

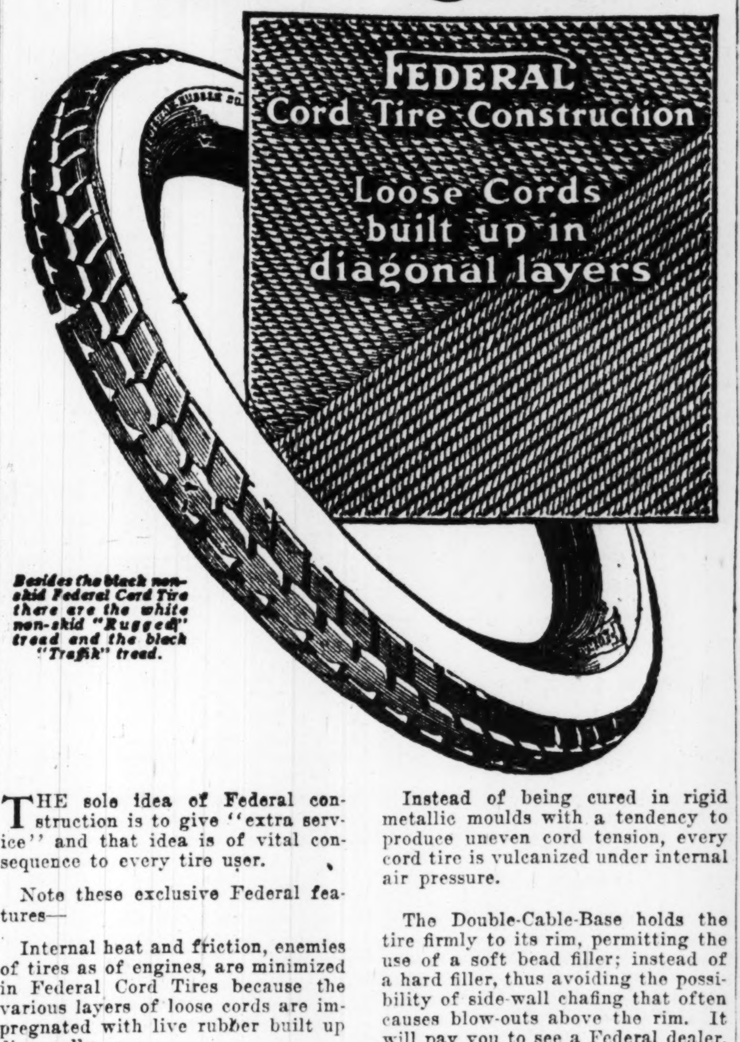
FEDERAL
DOUBLE CABLE BASE CORD TIRES



FEDERAL
Cord Tire Construction
Loose Cords built up in diagonal layers

Besides the black non-skid Federal Cord Tire there are the white non-skid "Rugged" tread and the black "Trafik" tread.

THE sole idea of Federal construction is to give "extra service" and that idea is of vital consequence to every tire user.

Note these exclusive Federal features—

Internal heat and friction, enemies of tires as of engines, are minimized in Federal Cord Tires because the various layers of loose cords are impregnated with live rubber built up diagonally.

Instead of being cured in rigid metallic moulds with a tendency to produce uneven cord tension, every cord tire is vulcanized under internal air pressure.

The Double-Cable-Base holds the tire firmly to its rim, permitting the use of a soft bead filler; instead of a hard filler, thus avoiding the possibility of side-wall chafing that often causes blow-outs above the rim. It will pay you to see a Federal dealer.

Why an Air-Cooled Automobile?

Most everyone realizes the advantages both in Summer and Winter of an air-cooled car. But, of course, there are other things than air-cooling that make a car satisfactory.

It should be the size you need and it should look, as well as be worth the investment. You can judge the on this basis—then ask a Holmes owner about other things such as gasoline, economy and tire mileage.

MAXWELL MAKES NEW 24-HOUR RECORD RUN

Following a defi that was marked for its boldness and supreme confidence in the car, a 1919 Maxwell has shattered one of the most coveted records of the automobile world. The details of the latest achievement of this consistent winner have just been received by the Weber Implement & Automobile Co. local Maxwell dealer.

In the latter part of March this year, H. L. Arnold, Maxwell distributor at Los Angeles, notified the public at large that "the Maxwell will break the world's nonstop motor sealed in high-gear, 24-hour, city record."

"I consider it a wonderful tribute of confidence in the car," commented George Weber, "that the Los Angeles distributor should come out with an advance announcement of such positive assurance and daring reliability. It is more than passing interest that he did not say the Maxwell may break" or "will attempt to break," but in large bold type sweepingly asserted "the Maxwell will break the world's record."

"Seven days later the news was flashed all over the United States that the Maxwell, again demonstrating its repeated claims of endurance and superior workmanship, had after a gruelling seven days' test romped away with the first competitive honors of 1919, made by a standard touring car.

"With the motor sealed in high gear and after driving for seven days through the thickly congested streets of Los Angeles for seven consecutive days the closing 36 hours of the phenomenal record were driven in the fiercest storm of the winter season.

"The total of 4241 miles was made as follows: First day, 419 miles; second, 263; third, 639; fourth, 734; fifth, 563, sixth, 503; seventh, 730 miles. The outstanding feature of the Maxwell "sealed in high" record is the tromendous test on the clutch, transmission, drive shaft axles and differential, in so successfully surviving the tremendous strain of starting and stopping, its load of three men, extra gasoline, oil and supplies for the passengers, driving relentlessly day and night, sunshine and storm and stopping a thousand times—the car but not the motor—on the busiest streets of Los Angeles."

BRISCOE TRUCK MAKES REMARKABLE RECORD

Production at the Briscoe plants at Jackson, Mich., is rapidly approaching the pre-war basis. Fifty cars a day have been turned out for the last couple of weeks, and it is confidently expected this number will be boosted to 75 per day during the month of April, says Frank Bishop of the Briscoe Motor Sales Co., St. Louis distributer.

One of the first of the new one-ton trucks to be produced at the Briscoe factories at Jackson, Mich., started overland and by boat last week for Toronto, Canada. A wire received from Harry Pilgrim of the Canadian Brisco Co., who was in charge of the truck, stated that he had progressed 296 miles over almost impassable roads without help of any kind, and that at Chatam, Canada, the performance of the truck was considered so remarkable that he accepted orders for two machines from business men who did not think any truck could negotiate such roads.

POPULAR IN EUROPE.

In spite of Europe's antipathy for monarchs, one regent, at least, can boast of growing popularity, judging by the report records of Ajax Rubber Co., inc., New York. But, let us hasten to add, that this monarch is an American product—the Ajax Road King tire.

Since the signing of the armistice, on Nov. 11, foreign demand for the Ajax Road King has become tremendous. The Ajax report department literally has been flooded with correspondence from overseas firms and indviduals. It is significant, too, that in almost every case inquirers have referred to the special feature of the Road King, know as "Ajax Shoulders of Strength."

This is taken to indicate an interest on the part of foreigners in American advertising, for Ajax Shoulders of Strength have been forcefully featured in all Ajax newspapers, magazines and other advertising for the past two years. While "Shoulders of Strength" are a part of every Ajax tire, they have been most emphatically talked of in connection with the Ajax Road King.

WESTERN ROADS GREAT.

Motor car dealers throughout the West are experiencing the same big demand for automobiles that has put the St. Louis dealers behind in making deliveries, according to E. A. Hatfield, president of the Mississippi Valley Motor Car Co., who returned last week from a month's trip to California.

On his way home Hatfield visited several of the Oakalnd distributers and the same report of big business was universal. A large part of the time was spent touring Southern California, where the roads are equal to the boulevards of St. Louis.

As an illustration of how good roads bring a desire for even better roads, California, with its wonderful system of highways, is now preparing to vote a $40,000,000 bond issue for road construction.

PRAISES THE PATERSON

The Rottersmann Automobile and Truck Co. has issued invitations to all Paterson car owners to call and inspect its enlarged quarters. Among the many that have called was the Rev. Father Stevens, 1919 South Seventh street, who owns a 1917 Paterson car which he has driven many thousand miles. He stated that in his opinion many Paterson cars will be sold in St. Louis, now that they are represented here, as he knows from his own experience in driving his car of the wonderful qualities of the Paterson. After inspecting the enlarged quarters and the new parts and service departments, he complimented the Rottersman company upon their model institution.

ALKALI IN SOAP BAD FOR THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

LABOR CAUSE OF ANXIETY IN BRITAIN

Uncertainty of Attitude Disturbs Industrial and Commercial Interests.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Thursday, April 17.—Britain exhibits in many directions anxiety for her industrial and commercial future. This anxiety, however, is probably not so profound as it sometimes seems. In all likelihood it would disappear entirely but for the uncertainty in the attitude of labor. Will British labor resist revolutionary agitators and settle down? Will it or will it not use the industrial power to further its political ideas by force? Will it throw over its old prejudice in favor of a restricted output?

These are the questions that disturb British manufacturers and employers more than does the rivalry, formidable as it is, of America and other nations. Edward Manville, member of Parliament, president of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom and a member of the firm of consulting engineers that electrified the London, Brighton & South Coast Railway, said today:

"We all recognize that the workers must be put in a better way of life. They must have a larger share of the fruits of industry and commerce. Their fundamental importance to the nation must receive every practicable recognition, political, social and economic. Higher standards of wages and shorter hours the employers are only too willing to grant, but even employers cannot perform miracles; they cannot distribute wealth that industry does not produce.

"The productive costs must fall at least in proportion to the increase in rates of wages and the decrease in hours worked. If this does not happen, our export trade, if it escapes destruction, will be so greatly reduced that we cannot support the demands of labor here. Trades unionism has a great duty and a great opportunity in this connection. It can make its members acquainted with the absolute need of sweeping away restrictions on the output. It can teach them that employers have no inexhaustible reservoir of wealth upon which to draw but must create it.

Fears No Competition.

"Britain's resourcefulness has been shown throughout her history and particularly during the great war. United she fears no competition. Even united she does not expect or desire to overwhelm her rivals; she expects and desires only to meet their competition with a reasonable degree of success. Two considerations govern the matter of imports. Consumers want articles not now made in sufficient quantities in this country. On the other hand, our manufacturers want aid in getting back to their normal level of civil production. We need and probably will get anti-dumping legislation. Imperial preference suits all of us engaged in industry and commerce here. The key industries we are bound to protect, and the resources of the empire in raw materials we must conserve for the benefit first of the empire and secondly of the allies. This policy suits our dominions and colonies, we understand, as well as ourselves.

"For many years our association has been urging on the Government the establishment of a Ministry of Commerce. Industrial and commercial requirements are not satisfied by the board of trade because it is too busy with other functions. We see with satisfaction that the board of trade is being relieved of many of these functions in order that it may uphold the commerce of the country."

One finds among British manufacturers and business men everywhere the feeling that co-operation between Britain and America should be assiduously cultivated. Immense mutual advantage is believed to lie in this direction.

Commercial Relations.

It is realized that neither Britain nor America can gain prosperity from nations impoverished—that manufacturers and traders, however skillful and enterprising, cannot extract wealth from bankrupts. Therefore, since this country is America's best customer and America is Britain's best customer, it is held to be self-evident that each should do its best so to arrange British and American commercial relations as to aid the prosperity of both.

Ambassador Davis addressing the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, said: "I have no fear that within any time which can now be foreseen the world's production will outrun its needs and I should not like to believe that there is any man in your nation or in my own whose energy is not quickened and whose faculties are not stimulated by fair, open and honest competition or that there is anyone so steep in folly as to believe that his only method of advancement is through the misfortune of his competitor."

First Bolshevik Paper in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 19.—The first Bolshevik newspaper in France has appeared, under the name "Le Titre Censure" (The Title Censored), as the title originally proposed "Le Bolshevik" had been prohibited. The newspaper is a weekly, and is edited by Georges Anquetil, who, in an editorial, proclaims himself a Bolshevik doctrinaire. The editor says he will undertake a defense of Bolshevism. He denounces the condition of human society.

LOAN CAMPAIGN TO BE OPENED HERE THIS AFTERNOON

Praise Service Will Be Held at Foot of Art Hill in Forest Park, With Gen. Wood as Chief Speaker.

SPECTACLE PUT OFF; CHURCHMEN OBJECTED

Formal Sale of Victory Notes Will Begin Tomorrow—First Subscription of $100,000 Received.

and last of the United States Government's drives for financing the war, will be opened here this afternoon with a praise service at the foot of Art Hill, in Forest Park. Major-General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., will be the principal speaker, and all St. Louisans, whether attending the meeting or not, have been requested to wear the national colors, the red, white and blue, in some form.

Plans for a spectacular demonstration by tanks, artillery and airplanes, which had been announced as an attraction for this afternoon, have been postponed until a later day, probably next Saturday. A line of trenches, north of the lagoon, had been prepared, and had been protected with a barbed wire entanglement. The big guns of the coast artillery exhibit and the tanks, camouflaged, will be in the park this afternoon, but will not be in active use, as had been planned. An airplane flight is expected to take place. The coast guns are to be taken away tonight, but smaller artillery will be used in the tank demonstration, whenever it is held.

Church Federation Responsible.

The change in the program, it was learned last night, was made at the request of the Church Federation of St. Louis, which held that the tank and trench sham battle, with the firing of heavy artillery and machine guns, would not be suitable on Sunday. The Rev. A. H. Armstrong, executive secretary of the Church Federation, was asked last night by a Post-Dispatch reporter whether the protest was authorized by the federation as a body, or by the other officers. He said he did not wish to answer the question.

Herbert S. Gardner, director of publicity, said the change had been made to avoid possible criticism. He said the plan had been for a demonstration, after the speaking, which would show what the soldiers went through to obtain victory, but it was found that the event was generally regarded as a sham battle, and that it was likely to divert attention from the praise service, so it was decided to postpone it.

The big artillery pieces will form a semi-circle in front of the platform, at the foot of the hill, where the speaking will take place. The tanks will be in view from the paths leading to the scene of the speaking, but will be partly hidden by the camouflaging process, which will not hide them wholly from view on their own level, but would be expected to conceal them from aircraft.

Band Concert at 2 P. M.

A band concert will begin at 2 p. m. and will continue until 3, when the praise service will begin with the singing of "America." Bishop Tuttle will pronounce the invocation and J. C. Van Riper, chairman of the city campaign, will introduce the speakers, who will be William R. Compton, Federal director of war loans for the Eighth District; the Rev. D. C. McLeod, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, and Gen. Wood.

The audience will be asked to repeat the following pledge, which can be memorized, or clipped out and read:

> I believe it is my duty, as a loyal and patriotic American, to support my Government in paying the debts necessarily incurred to win the war. Therefore, I do hereby pledge my word to do all in my power to aid the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, that the services made by American chivalry shall not have been in vain.

The program will be completed with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the benediction by the Rev. Father John Spencer.

A section has been reserved for men in uniform, from all branches of the service, and a special place will be provided for the wounded.

First Business Day Tomorrow.

The first business day of the campaign will be marked by the blowing of factory and locomotive whistles at 9 a. m. tomorrow. This will last 20 minutes, and will be followed by the firing of bombs at every fire engine house in the city. Bands, including a detachment of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band, and the Jefferson Barracks Band of 40 pieces, will parade in the downtown streets.

The whistles and bombs will be the President Appeals to the Country to Support the Victory Loan

By the Associated Press.

THE text of President Wilson's message today, asking for support for the Victory Loan, follows:

"For two anxious years the American people have striven to fulfill the task of saving our civilization. By the exertion of unmeasured power they have quickly won the victory without which they would have remained in the field until the last resource had been exhausted. Bringing to the contest a strength of spirit made doubly strong by the righteousness of their cause, they devoted themselves unswervingly to the prosecution of their undertaking in the full knowledge that no conquest lay in their path excepting the conquest of right.

"Today the world stands freed from the threat of militarism which has so long weighed upon the spirit and the labor of peaceful nations.

"But as yet we stand only at the threshold of happier times. To enter we must fulfill to the utmost the engagements we have made. The Victory Liberty loan is the indispensable means. Two years ago we pledged our lives and fortunes to the cause for which we have fought. Sixty thousand of our strongest sons have redeemed for us that pledge of blood. To redeem in full faith the promise of this sacrifice we now must give this new evidence of our purpose."

'ARGONNE FOREST' IN NEW YORK SQUARE FOR LOAN CAMPAIGN

Famous American Fighting Sector Reproduced in Miniature—Gov. Smith to Buy First Note.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Elaborate preparations for opening the Victory Loan campaign were completed here tonight, with the announcement that actual note selling would begin shortly after Sunday midnight at the "Argonne Forest," in Times Square, a miniature reproduction of the famous American fighting sector, where Gov. Smith, after making an address, will purchase the first Victory note.

Brigadier-General Cole of the Twenty-sixth (New England) Division and other notables will speak. Seventy-six booths at the same time will be opened in prominent hotels and at other points of public assemblage for the sale of the notes. On Monday there will be a parade and celebration at "Victory Way," at Park Avenue Plaza, where "Pershing's own band" will play.

WHILE POLICE LOOK FOR SLAYER HE LOOKS FOR JAIL

Finding "Nobody Home" at Police Headquarters, He Looks Up the Turnkey.

While police and other officers were looking in Livingston, Ill., and vicinity for Charles Kowala, who killed Peter Sagen in a fight, Kowala was in jail at Edwardsville. The officers in Edwardsville did not know it.

After shooting Sagen, Kowala, who is a Constable, fled across the country to Edwardsville. He appeared at police headquarters at 5 o'clock in the morning to give himself up, "but there was no one at home." They had all gone to bed and the day shift had not arrived. A night watchman and some persons waiting for the early car were sitting around.

Finding no one to surrender to, Sagen asked to be directed to the jail, and it was pointed out to him. At the jail he informed the turnkey that he had killed a man and "guessed they had better lock him up," and he was accommodated.

BRLLLANT EASTER FASHION PAGEANT EXPECTED TODAY

Late Season, Mild Weather and Rejoicing That War Is Over to Have Their Effect.

With an unusually late Easter, in an unusually mild spring, wartime economies in clothing have been abandoned or greatly relaxed. All this is believed to mean that the Easter fashion display, both at church-going hours this morning and at Forest Park this afternoon, will be brilliant.

The "dress-up" movement has helped to remind men of the part they are to take in the foot and automobile costume display, but the women's frocks and hats will be the chief attraction. Moving pictures of the parade will be made at various points, for use in advertising the city, with the municipal fund to be appropriated this year for the purpose.

The Victory Loan inspirational meeting in Forest Park will be an objective for a part of the afternoon parade. A large number of visitors, particularly children, is expected at the Zoo, where Steve, the young hippopotamus, is on view for the first time.

The fact that is is the first Easter Sunday since the deaths of more than 70,000 American soldiers in France gives the day a religious significance which will be dwelt upon, this morning, in many churches.

ROBBED CEMETERY CARETAKER IDENTIFIES 2 HELD BY POLICE

Auto With Inverted License Number Traced to Saloonkeeper, in Whose Place Nine Are Arrested.

Robbers who took $700 from David Koeller Sr., 57 years old, 4212 Labadie avenue, Friday afternoon, in the office of St. Peter's Cemetery, Hamburger avenue and Hunt road, of which he was caretaker, avoided detection at the scene of the robbery by turning the license number of an automobile upside down. Passers could not read it, but the police telephoned to Wellston that they were looking for a car with inverted license and when the car passed through, it was slowed up by traffic and the number read.

The automobile was found to be that of George Lang, 2636 Franklin avenue, and the police arrested nine persons there. Koeller identified two of the nine as the men who held him up. They gave their names as Edward Ridgley and Tony Costello. The automobile was found in a garage at 2127 Lucas avenue, about half a block from Lang's saloon. Lang said he did not know that it had been taken from the garage. Ridgley and Costello are held at Clayton without bond.

"ROOSEVELT ROAD," CHICAGO TO ST. LOUIS, DECIDED UPON

Plan of Memorial Association Contemplates Expenditure of Minimum of $250,000.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 19.—A Roosevelt road, its Chicago terminus at a monument and portrait statue of the former President on the lake front, the route by way of Aurora, Starved Rock, Peoria and through picturesque localities of Illinois to St. Louis, was decided upon today by the Roosevelt Memorial Association of Chicago.

The plan contemplates a minimum expenditure of $250,000, which it is expected will be greatly enlarged.

FIRST U-BOAT REACHES U. S.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The German submarine U-111, the first German undersea craft to be brought to this country, slipped into New York harbor tonight with the imperial German naval standard flying beneath the Stars and Stripes.

The U-boat was taken to the navy yard and will be exhibited to stimulate interest in the Victory Loan.

The U-111, one of a fleet of five such boats now on their way to New York, was making good speed when she passed through the Narrows, running well out of the water. She left Plymouth on April 7, carrying four officers and 34 men. She is a large vessel, with guns mounted fore and aft. The other submarines are expected within a day or two.

OMSK GOVERNMENT RECOGNIZED AS THE DE FACTO POWER

Decision of Britain, France, Italy and U. S. to Treat Regime as Government of Non-Bolshevik Russia.

NUMBER OF OTHER PLANS DISCARDED

Sending of Allied Force to Southern and Northern Russia and Siberia One of the Proposals Rejected.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Decision of the Governments of Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States to accord recognition to the Omsk Government as the de factor Government of all non-Bolshevik Russia was reached after several other plans had been discarded, it was learned today from official sources. Among the proposals rejected were the sending of large allied forces into Southern and Northern Russia and Siberia and the recognition of regional Government controlled by Russians opposing the Bolshevik.

Plans for sending armies into Russia were disapproved with little discussion, it was said, but the proposal to recognize the regional Governments was rejected only after vigorous protests had been lodged with the peace conference delegates by every faction of loyal Russians.

This plan included recognition of the Omsk Government, that of Denikine, the Government of the North at Archangel and the establishment of a number of small Cossack leaders on the Don, at Orenburg and in the Urals.

When this matter was presented to the Russian representatives in Paris and London they instantly objected on the ground that a united front must be presented against the Bolsheviki in the East. The Russians also expressed a fear that recognition of regional Governments would eventually lead to the recognition of the Bolsheviki who control a large area in Western and Central Russia.

Since he has been at Paris, President Wilson, it was learned today, has been kept advised of conditions in Siberia through agents sent to Omsk. These agents penetrated into European Russia as far as the Siberian forces controlled the situation and were understood to have reported that the people freed from the menace of the Bolshevik terrorists were firm in their opposition to Bolshevism. Representatives of the allied Governments sent into Siberia were said to have made similar reports.

Other agents were dispatched to Southern and Northern Russia and officials said their reports contained valuable information not only regarding the attitude of the Russian people but also as to economic conditions.

GARFIELD DEFIED BY HEAD OF MINERS IN PITTSBURG DISTRICT

Fuel Administrator's Threat to Cancel Wage Increase if Strikers Stay Out Called "Cowardly."

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Kan., April 19.—H. A. Garfield, Federal Fuel Administrator, today in a message to Alexander Howat, president of District No. 14, United Mine Workers, threatened to revoke the provision of the agreement between the coal miners and the coal operators of November, 1917, which gave the miners an increase of $1.40 a day, unless Howat should order the striking miners of the Central Coal and Coke Co. to return to work, and Howat meet with the labor bureau and submit the grievances of the miners.

Howat in answer wired to Garfield that he rejected "with contempt the cowardly proposition submitted." The miners, Howat wired, are prepared to fight to the last ditch against the automatic penalty clause which he denounces as "infamous."

FORCES WAY ON BOAT WITH TANK

West Front Veteran Then Defies San Francisco Ferrymen—He Wins.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—Denied the right to take his battle tank on a bay ferryboat today because he lacked the necessary $20 passage, Sergt. E. H. Henderson, west front tank veteran, closed up the juggernaut and with the announcement that 'orders are orders" ran on the boat in spite of the crew's opposition, Liberty Loan headquarters here reported.

Ordered off the boat, Sergt. Henderson again closed up the tank and defied the crew to put him off. The crew surrendered and the boat cleared for Oakland. Sergt. Henderson had been ordered to report with the tank for a Victory Liberty Loan sham battle in Berkeley at 10 o'clock.

WHEN AND WHERE ST. LOUIS ARMY UNITS WILL LAND

138th Infantry Is Due at Newport News April 29—Twelfth Engineers Dock April 26.

BASE HOSPITAL 21 AT NEW YORK TODAY

128th Artillery Due Tomorrow—110th Ammunition Train Today—110th Supply Train April 28.

The following apparent facts concerning the sailing from France and the arrival in the United States of St. Louis units of the American Expeditionary Forces were established yesterday through Associated Press dispatches, and those of Post-Dispatch staff correspondents in New York and Washington, together with cable and telegrams to Mayor Kiel and Adjutant-General Clark in Jefferson City:

The 138th Infantry sailed on April 17 from St. Nazaire, France, aboard the transport Aeolus for Newport News. The date of the regiment's expected arrival is given by the Associated Press as April 29. The Aeolus is booked in War Department records as a 10-day boat, but has commonly required more time, her last trip having consumed 15 days. A 10-day trip would bring the regiment into Newport News on April 27. A 15-day trip would make the date May 2. This is the first word of the sailing of the 138th.

Hospital Unit Today.

Hospital Unit No. 21, except nurses who sailed on the Mobile later, are on the Graf Waldersee, which was scheduled to dock in New York today at 9 a. m. The Mobile is due to arrive tomorrow.

The 128th Field Artillery except one battery is scheduled to arrive tomorrow in Boston, aboard the Vedic.

The remaining battery of the 128th—E Battery—is aboard the Zeppelin with the 129th Field Artillery of Kansas City and according to radio dispatches received by the War Department in Washington yesterday, will arrive in New York today.

The 110th Ammunition Train is aboard the Great Northern, which according to further radio messages, also will arrive in New York today.

The 110th Motor Supply Train is scheduled to land at Newport News on April 28.

The Twelfth Engineers, according to a message from the War Department yesterday, will land in New York on April 26.

Message From "Comfort."

The sailing date of the 138th was set as April 16, one day earlier than the date announced by the War Department, in a cablegram signed "Comfort" received yesterday by Mayor Kiel. "Comfort" undoubtedly is Maj. Norman B. Comfort of the 138th.

A cablegram to the War Department stated that the field officers and staff of the regiment, together with the headquarters company, the medical detachment, the supply company and Companies A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L and M, are aboard the Aeolus. This constitutes the entire regiment.

It also was stated that Camp Taylor, near Louisville, Ky., will receive 30 officers and 1373 men and the remainder will be divided as follows: Camp Grant, 11 officers and 176 men; Camp Sherman, 8 officers and 521 men; Camp Funston, 13 officers and 314 men; Camp Bowie, 140 men; Camp Dodge, 3 officers and 355 men; Camp Travis, 85 men; Camp Upton, 3 officers and 46 men; Camp Gordon, 14 men; Camp Dix, 5 officers and 15 men; Camp Pike, 1 officer and 12 men; Camp Custer, 2 officers and 16 men; scattered, 10 officers and 52 men.

It previously had been announced by the War Department that the regiment as a whole will be permitted to parade in St. Louis. For that reason, it is expected that it will be sent to St. Louis intact before being split up for demobilization. It is probable that the 30 officers and 1373 men assigned to Camp Taylor are the St. Louis officers and men in the regiment.

The Aeolus is of 10,350 deadweight tons, with a carrying capacity of 3454 men. Twenty-five thousand officers and men of the Thirty-fifth Division have sailed for home, including those aboard the Aeolus.

Hospital Unit No. 21, which apparently is the first St. Louis unit to reach the United States, left St. Louis May 16, 1917, and arrived in France June 10. It was recruited in St. Louis. During most of the war it was stationed at Roeun, France, and its services and those of its personnel have been the frequent subject of commendation by British and American commanders.

Meanwhile, committees appointed

NON-STOP FLIGHT FROM CHICAGO TO NEW YORK MADE BY ARMY AVIATOR

Capt. E. F. White Travels 727 Miles in Reported Time of Six Hours and Fifty Minutes—English Flier Falls Into Sea.

By the Associated Press.

MINEOLA, N. Y., April 19.—Flying at an average speed of 106.38 miles an hour for 6 hours and 50 minutes, Capt. E. F. White, an army aviator, completed the first non-stop flight between Chicago and New York, at 5:40 o'clock this afternoon, landing at Hazelhurst Field.

The distance covered was 727 miles. Most of the flight, Capt. White said, was made at an altitude of 12,000 feet.

Capt. White, who was accompanied by his mechanician, said that the trip was without incident. He will remain at Hazelhurst Field for a few days and then will fly to Washington. He said he would not attempt a non-stop flight back to Chicago.

Capt. White said that the flying conditions he encountered were almost perfect. Rains within the last 48 hours had cleared the atmosphere so that for a great part of the trip he was able to discard his compass and steer by eye, although more than two miles above the earth. No severe winds were encountered and those that were met were in the flyer's favor and served only to increase his speed.

Capt. White shaved 10 minutes off the time he had estimated as necessary for the trip and found upon landing that he still had enough of his 194 gallons of gas left to have flown a considerable distance farther.

Col. Archie Miller, commander of the camp, hurried out to meet him, warmly congratulating him on the nonstop record he had established. Capt. White was escorted to the officers' club at the camp, where he "washed up" and did justice to a large dinner.

Then doffing his fur-lined flying clothes and climbing into regulation uniform, he motored to New York.

Motor Worked "Beautifully"

Captain White's praise of his machine was limitless. His motor worked "beautifully", he said, and though he had covered a distance equivalent to a third of the milage confronting trans-Atlantic fliers his machine showed no signs of faltering.

H. M. Shafer, a civilian who made the trip as mechanician, also was loud in his praise of plane and motor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Scarcely had Capt. White's successful non-stop flight from Chicago to Mineola been finished, when the Executive Committee of the Aero Club of America awarded him the club's medal of merit, "in appreciation of his marvelous demonstration of the practicability of using airplanes for fast transportation."

The presentation will be made at Atlantic City, May 4, during the second pan-American aeronautical convention.

Flies to New York on Oyster Stew and Crackers.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Capt. White in his flight to New York went the limit in saving weight. According to Charles Dickinson, president of the Aero Club of Illinois, who was Capt. White's host from the time the flyer arrived from Dayton yesterday until he took the air today, said that Capt. White ate only an oyster stew and a few crackers in that time, and started with practically an empty stomach.

Capt. White flew to Chicago yesterday unheralded, and, without taking anyone into his confidence except Charles Dickinson, president of the Aero Club of Illinois, spent the night here and this morning went to Ashburn Field for the start. Dickinson telegraphed the Aero Club of America to meet the Captain. Without even consulting the weather bureau or any further ado, the aviator got into his biplane and took off at 9:50 a. m.

Englishman Falls Into Irish Sea on Ocean Flight.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 19.—The first attempt at a transatlantic aerial flight westward came to grief last night in its first stage. Maj. J. C. P. Wood, and Capt. C. C. Wylie, his navigator, had almost reached the Irish coast off Holyhead in a flight from East Church for Limerick, when engine trouble brought the "Shamrock" nose foremost into the sea, three miles from Holyhead. Both men were rescued, while Lancaster Parker, flying in an escorting machine, had a narrow escape on landing his plane smashing against a shore wall.

A destroyer towed the "Shamrock" nearly ashore, according to the commander, who was then compelled to abandon her, and she was washed on to the beach.

"Both officers are more concerned about their machines than themselves," said the destroyer's commander, "but it was impossible for me to bring the biplane into the harbor."

Maj. Wood has sent the following message to the Weekly Dispatch:

"I was obliged to descend 12 miles from land. I am still a competitor and hope to be ready to start early in May."

The Dispatch says that Maj. Wood's airplane, the "Shamrock" is packed on a freight car on a siding at Holyhead and probably will be sent to East Church tomorrow.

Maj. Wood, on being rescued, is quoted as saying: "The Atlantic flight is pipped."

Capt. C. C. Wylie, navigator, said: "When descent was inevitable, we entered the water quietly and undamaged, both climbed under the carriage, to prevent the machine from turning over, and lit cigarettes. Two rowboats took us ashore half an hour after our descent."

Another Aviator Said to Have Landed Safely.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 19.—It was reported in London this morning that Lancaster Parker, an aviator who flew from East Church yesterday soon after Maj. Wood left and who had not been heard from overnight, has landed safely.

Maj. J. C. P. Wood left East Church, England, at 3:15 o'clock Friday afternoon. During the evening he was reported to have passed Sheerness on the Thames, a short distance from East Church, and then was lost for several hours.

Lancaster Parker, another aviator left East Church soon after Maj. Wood.

Raynham Hopes to Get Away Today in Ocean Flight.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 19.—Capt. Frederick P. Raynham, British aviator, competing with Harry G. Hawker, Australian, for the $50,000 prize offered by the London Daily Mail for the first flyer to cross the Atlantic, announced today that he would make every effort to "hop off" tomorrow, as he laid a wager that he would be in England Easter Monday.

Cross winds reported in the Atlantic were said to be filled with storm-breeding possibilities.

In the matter of a "jump off," odds are in favor of Raynham, for whereas snow and rain have made a bog about Hawker's flying field on Mount Pearl Plateau, the road in front of Raynham's hangar from which he intends to take off has not been affected.

FEEDERS ON STRIKE AT FARM WHERE THERE ARE 2000 HOGS

Veterinarian Left Alone on Job Gets a Little Help, but Is Greatly in Need of More.

Two thousand hungry hogs hoped heartily last night that the strike of the feeders at the Mascoutah (Ill.) hog farm would end. The feeders yesterday struck for more pay, declaring they fain would not live on the husks that the swine did eat.

This left a lone veterinarian on the job. He labored manfuly, but discovered that one veterinarian, be he ever so scientific, could not adequately feed 2000 shoats. A call for discharged soldiers was sent to East St. Louis, but A. H. Curtis, a labor leader, in charge of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines' Club, said it looked like a strike-breaking job to him, and nobody wanted the jobs, anyhow.

A little help was obtained from the Belleville hog farm last night, but it was not adequate, and the suffering swine gruntingly supplicated the prodigals' return. They are fed on corn and on garbage shipped in cars from St. Louis.

Are you going to the Theater or Movies tonight? If so, see Page 11, Part 2.

LABOR TO VOTE ON STRIKES IN BEHALF OF MOONEY

San Francisco Labor Men Preparing to Send Out 4,000,000 ballots to Workers.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—Four million ballots on the question of three successive nation-wide strikes in behalf of Thomas J. Mooney and his co-defendants will be sent union members throughout the country in the next few days, Edward D. Nolan, secretary of the International Workers' Defense League, announced here today. The votes will be canvassed in Chicago beginning June 1, Nolan said.

The ballot proposes a five-day strike beginning July 4

IRISH DELEGATES SEE HOUSE

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 19.—The three delegates sent by the Irish Societies in the United States to place Ireland's case before the peace conference—former Governor Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, Frank P. Walsh and Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia—called on E. M. House of the American peace delegation this morning and handed him the papers relating to their requests on the Irish question.

ITALIAN CLAIMS UNSETTLED AFTER 4-HOUR EFFORT BY COUNCIL OF FOUR

Discussion Will Be Continued Today; Orlando and Sonnino Maintain Position Regarding Fiume Is Unalterable; Wilson Attitude Said to Be Unchanged.

REPORT ON ENEMY CAPACITY TO PAY

German Delegates to Be Sent Home Immediately if They Do Not Sign the Peace Terms Offered to Them, Says Paris Paper.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 19.—After a conference lasting more than four hours, which was attended by both Premier Orlando and Foreign Minister Sonnino of Italy, the Council of Four today failed to reach an agreement on the Adriatic questions. The council adjourned to meet tomorrow morning for a continuance of the discussion.

When the council met it was with the intention of devoting its entire time to consideration of the Italian claims and with the expectation that a settlement might be reached. The Italians maintain their position regarding possession of Fiume is unalterable. The British and French Premiers, it is understood, are inclined toward some sort of a compromise on the question. It is said that President Wilson's attitude opposing the Italian aspirations is unchanged.

The fact that Baron Sonnino helped to present the Italian case to the council is regarded as significant, because the Foreign Minister is an extremist advocate of Italy's utmost claims. It was Baron Sonnino who signed the Treaty of London, and he now holds Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau to the pledges made in the treaty.

The solution of the Fiume problem, considered today, the Temps says, would give Italy that part of the city of Fiume lying on the right bank of the River Recina and the main part of the port. Jugo-Slavia would receive the suburb of Susak with that part of the port on the left bank of the river. The newspaper says that the fate of the Dalmatian coast is still undecided.

Reparations and Damages.

An official statement says that the Commission on Reparations and Damages today unanimously adopted the second subcommittee's second report dealing with the financial capacity of enemy states and their means of payment and reparation.

The report is directed particularly to the question of restitution to be made by Germany to the allied and associated Powers in connection with, for instance, ships, machinery, rolling stock, plants and livestock.

President Wilson had a long conference with Premier Clemenceau at the War Office this afternoon. Immediately after the President's departure Premier Clemenceau received Marshal Foch.

The Council of Five, composed of the Foreign Ministers and Secretaries of State of Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States and Baron Makino of the Japanese delegation, considered the question of revising the treaty of 1839 concerning the neutrality of Belgium at its meeting today. The question of food relief for Esthonia and Courland also was taken up.

No Long Wait on German.

The text of the preliminary peace treaty will be transmitted to the press Friday or Saturday of next week, April 25 or 26, the Petit Parisien says.

The Echo de Paris declares that in case Germany refuses to sign the preliminary peace a special train will immediately be put at the disposal of the enemy delegates for their return to Germany and the allies will take military and naval measures to enforce their terms.

The German delegates to the peace congress are coming to France by way of Spa, Belgium, to which point they will travel in their own conveyances, says the Petit Journal. At Spa, however, a special train provided by the French authorities will await them and their journey thence will be made under military. At Versailles a military delegation will receive them and conduct them to their lodgings. The German representatives will be treated courteously, but will be regarded as enemies as long as the peace treaty remains unsigned. They will not be allowed to go about as they please nor will newspaper men be permit-

ITALY AND JAPAN STAND FAST ON THEIR CLAIMS

Former Presents What in Effect Is Ultimatum as to Fiume and Latter Follows Like Course as to China.

PARIS JUBILANT OVER REPORTED ALLIANCE

American Mission Refuses to Discuss Subject of Defensive Arrangement by Britain, France and U. S.

By Herbert Bayard Swope,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, Friday, April 18.—Italy presented what was in effect an ultimatum in regard to Fiume at this morning's session of the Council of Four. The present attitude follows the lines previously indicated in dispatches to the Post-Dispatch except that Italy will not withdraw from the conference but will ask that the question be settled by the signatories to the London pact. It should be understood that the treaty of London does not give Fiume to Italy, for at the time the document was made it was not thought likely that the enemy would completely collapse.

The treaty provided that none should make a peace that all did not approve. It is on that engagement that Italy purposes to stand. She is seemingly bent on having Fiume, or a separate peace.

A hard nut to crack is the plebiscite taken in Fiume, which showed an overwhelming desire of the people to be united to the mother country. In official quarters it was said today that if the hybrid plan tried at Danzig be attempted the first thing the Fiume authorities will do will be to vote for absorption by Italy, declare the proceeding effective and adjourn.

It should be remembered that Fiume is held by the Italians. Italian delegates in Paris say without reserve that no Government could survive which ordered the evacuation of the town.

Japan and China.

Italy's course will be followed by Japan in dealing with the Chinese situation. These two matters are disturbing the serenity of the peace atmosphere, which already had been fired rather than quieted by Premier Lloyd George's speech.

Second thought concerning that speech confirms first impressions that he used many words to say nothing on points of greatest interest and most intimate concern to the British and allied peoples. His attack upon Lord Northcliffe, his former chief supporter, is viewed as a clever method of avoiding the main issue, since it was not Northcliffe's policies, but those of the Premier that were in review.

Secrecy continues to rule the proceedings of the Council and, unless an eleventh hour change of plan shall occur, the terms of the treaty will not be finally made known to the delegates until they shall have been delivered to the Germans.

It is probable that the details may be communicated to the different missions privately but no opportunity is to be afforded for protest or change. This program is evoking bitter protest among the smaller nations, but there is nothing to show that their feelings are to be heeded.

A sop will be thrown to objectors by a two days' session of the plenary session next week, at which the league of nations will be considered, together with reports from the commissions on waterways, responsibilities, economics and reparations. The last two of these documents will be emasculated and will not contain terms that will be written into the treaty.

While it is certain that a "block" peace will not be made, as has been promised when the council was smarting under public censure and sought excuse for delay by making their labors seem larger than they were, other details of the final program are quite unsettled. Instead of having all the belligerents here at the same time, as was announced by the council, the allies of Germany will not be summoned for at least two weeks after the Germans shall have been called. It appears now as if even the German delegates will not get the terms until several days after the time originally set, probably April 28, instead of April 25.

Beyond that plans are still in the air. It is obvious that the Germans must be given time in which to unravel the terms that have been three months in making. Paris expects two points to stick the Germans, one the size of the army, which at 100,000 is believed even by the allied commanders to be too small, and the other Saar and Danzig.

Feeding of Russia.

Announcement that the council had adopted the Hoover plan for feeding Russia, that act being cloaked under a letter from Nansen because it was thought wise to have the inspiration come seemingly from a neutral source, is viewed as an advance over the do-nothing policy heretofore followed.

Anti-Bolshevik Russians, such as Bakhmetoff, formerly Ambassador to Washington, fear the plan can redound only to the benefit of the Lenine regime, since distribution must be made through the Moscow Government.

Diplomatic and political methods having failed, the conference is now seeking economic means to force order upon Russia, food being the lever the council expects to use to force cessation of hostilities. Hoover's suggestion went to President Wilson last week.

Discussion wages apace over the reports, partially confirmed, of the undertaking of President Wilson and Premier George with Premier Clemenceau concerning the defense of France against future German aggression. The reports have naturally come to the attention of the American delegates. It is definitely believed that the President has committed himself to some plan whereby France will be given priority in American help in case there should be any evasion or violation of the treaty by the enemy state.

Report of Alliance.

Paris is jubilant over the report of a defensive alliance by Great Britain and America with France.

The American mission absolutely declines to talk on the subject, saying that any statement must come from Premier Clemenceau. Nothing of the agreement appears in treaty form, but the President seems to have promised to lay the matter before the Senate, requesting a special pledge for the support of France in case of attack by Germany. Some fear that such a course would abrogate the function of the league of nations.

Tentative plans are in progress for the return of the President by May 20, but probably the sailing will be deferred, as it seems unlikely the program will be far enough advanced to permit departure by that date.

In any event he will probably call a special session of Congress for some date between May 16 and June 1, sending a message by cable if unable to be present personally.

President Wilson wishes the matter of mandatories under the league of nations to be postponed until the first meeting of the league in the fall, but the British desire answers to several questions before that time, which, however, will not relate to mandatories that America may be asked to assume.

The Japanese declare their purpose to insist that their claims be settled as soon as the Italian matter shall be out of the way.

Today sees the end of commercial censorship over neutrals, the British having yielded to strong American representations. Evidently this does not include press censorship, which is still in working order. Lord Robert Cecil is understood to be bringing with him to Paris on his return tomorrow an agreement by the British War Cabinet for the abandonment of the neutral blockade and for the lifting of the blacklist. Great Britain held out to the last in these matters and yields only with reluctance.

Wilson and Irish Question.

Private information is that President Wilson is to have a serious discussion with the British Premier over the Irish question. It is said he promised as much to Frank Walsh and Michael Ryan, when they saw him. The demand of these men is for home rule without the exclusion of Ulster.

America is to make another protest against the absorption of the 15 German cables by Great Britain. Practically the lines have been given to Great Britain, thus adding control of world communication to the monopolies the empire already enjoys, although the fact does not appear on the face of the terms that have been proposed concerning the cables. American naval advisers strongly oppose the present plan and have urged that it be reconsidered.

Premier Hughes of Australia is cynical regarding American friendship for Japan, repeating that the pretense of friendship was used, as he had said previously, to cloak American opposition to the racial equality amendment.

CONQUERORS DECREE THAT WAR'S VICTORS SHALL GET FULL JUSTICE FROM ENEMY

Further Details of the Reparation Terms Agreed on at Paris Given by Post-Dispatch Correspondent.

By James M. Tuohy,

(Copyright, 1919, by Press Publishing Co., New York World.)

PARIS, April 19.—The recommendations made by the sub-commission on reparation, the text of which treaty was cabled to the Post-Dispatch but suppressed by the British censor, were of a thoroughly exhaustive character covering every conceivable species of war damage. As has already been stated in dispatches to the Post-Dispatch, these damages are arranged under six categories, of which further details are now available.

The sub-commission has proceeded on the general principle that no claim can be framed so as to involve payment twice over, either to the same or to different persons, for the same injury; that where an injury is caused under enemy responsibility, the damage will include all natural and necessary consequences of such acts; that cases must be capable of being verified with reasonable certainty, by some kinds of proof; that statistical computation may be applied in default of direct evidence, subject to verification; that the cost of reparation of things injured, whether movable or immovable, cannot apply to the provision of more expensive substitutes.

As to the methods of fixing the value of damage, there will be determined by the allied and associated states, each having regard to its own cases. Damage will be valued on the basis of replacing every person, having the right to reparation, in the same position as he would have been if he had not suffered damage resulting from the state of war; valuations shall be expressed in such currency as each interested power may consider it proper to adopt, each stating the rate of exchange upon which its calculations are based.

Any increase of value arising from a rise in prices may be taken into account, cost of construction, replacement or repair will be arrived at by repaying, at the corresponding pre-war cost, an appropriate co-efficient, calculated for each category of property in accordance with the market price at the date of conclusion of peace-materials, labor and all other factors being considered.

With 6 Per Cent Interest.

Damage resulting from losses of seizures of sums of money, including forced subscriptions or assets of any kind expressed in cash, damage incurred for the relief of the populations of invalid territories or of interned civilians, are to be taken with interest at 6 per cent from the date of the damage to the conclusion of peace.

The right is fully reserved to regulate the payment for these damages in any manner determined upon, as well as to decide questions as to reciprocal claims or debts arising from pre-war contracts between subjects of the enemy and the allied and associated states.

Damage from loss on securities is valued on the basis of their average price on the Bourse, during the first six months of 1914, or, in case the securities were issued after July 1, 1914, on the basis of their issue price, provided that such price be not lower than average price for the first quarter of 1919. There shall be added the value of coupons, of interest or income in arrears up to the conclusion of peace, if the securities had remained in the owner's possession.

Damage resulting from the deprivation of the exercise of proprietary right is valued on the basis of the average net receipts or income from such property for the whole period of deprivation, down to a reasonable time after the conclusion of peace, that may be necessary to secure the cessation of such deprivations. The same principle is applied to damage arising from the deprivation of the exercise of occupation, which will be decided on the basis of the average wages or salaries computed on the average of the net wages for the three years preceding.

Industrial Property.

Damages to industrial property, through the enemy's knowledge of special manufacturing processes, and commercial damage resulting from the enemy's knowledge of books, correspondence, etc., is to be valued in accordance with special rules agreed upon between the allied and associated Powers.

Damage to a state includes the extraordinary expenditure that state has been obliged to bear in consequence of invasion or occupation, in so far as such expenses have not been included in other claims.

Great Britain did not accept this category. The loss resulting from theft of stamps and articles subject to state monopolies, or from their removal or sale at prices lower than those established by the law; loss from failure to collect taxes, etc., due to the state in occupied territory or due to the enemy operation, must be paid, in so far as collection has not been balanced by any reduction in charges and in so far as material for taxation, which a state could recover such losses, has been created anew by the admission of individual claims.

America reserved its opinion regarding this category on the question of principle, while Great Britain, Japan and Portugal declined to accept the definition of loss incurred by allowances to refugees and to all persons wholly, or partly, deprived of their right to work, as well as all expenditures incurred by a state or any authorized person for food, transport or for the relief of the populations of invaded territories; expenditures incurred for pensions, allowances and bonuses of every kind to military victims of war, or persons claiming under them; expenses for prisoners of war injured in life or death by acts of cruelty or violence committed or ordered by the enemy; the cost of assistance by a state to prisoners of war and allowances to the family of mobilized persons, all expenditures or charges resulting from the state of war imposed upon the associated Powers and the expenses of the maintenance of enemy prisoners of war and those interned, if the damages incurred by persons include the destruction, deterioration or depreciation of immovable property on land or sea, belonging to private persons or public persons other than the state.

This destruction, deterioration or depreciation may be the result either of war or invasion, by bombardment, by the action of enemy troops, including billeting, by inundations, by submarine mines or deterioration following the use by the enemy of means, such as felling trees or injuring them; by requisition or explosion.

Objects of Damage.

The objects of damage may include all types of public utilities and works of all kinds, private structures, including public or municipal buildings not owned by the state, buildings, monuments and articles properly in allied or enemy countries damaged by any act, relating to seizures, requisitions and liquidation of sequestrated property.

As to private movable property, every form of theft or confiscation relating to houses, machinery, tools, etc., wells, livestock, crops, manufactures, patents, trademarks and documents, merchant vessels and fishing boats, are provided for.

Under the third category are included damage or loss on shares and securities; the requisition of labor; expenditures, in any form, incurred by any public authority fulfilling obligations for food supply, transport or the relief of the populations of invaded or occupied territories. of special processes of manufacture and by the discovery of business books or correspondence, losses incurred by competition set up through disclosure of such documents, etc., and loss incurred by any person by the deprivation of his books, are included.

The category dealing with financial exactions provides for all losses incurred by taxes, war contributions, fines, cash levies of all descriptions, thefts of currency, forced subscriptions and falsification or alteration or depreciation of enemy bany notes ormonetary instruments of any kind.

The sixth category deals with damage to civilians acts of war, or persons claiming under them, such as wife or husband, or-phansor descendants of parents as the result of cruelties or mal-treatment committed or ordered by the enemy, or of persons shot or died from maltreatment, damage to persons exposed by the nemy to the fire of the allied troops, or those disabled owing to forced labor; damage resulting from all acts injurious to health or to capacity for work, "or to honor." This category includes, of course, damage incurred by interned civilians arising from any injury to life, health or capacity to work and further to victoms of explosions while working in enemy war factories.

3 OFFICERS DEFEND COURTMARTIAL SYSTEM

American Bar Hearing to Be Concluded This Week—Ansell Speaks for Revision of Rules.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Hearings on the war-time administration of military justice probably will be concluded next week, Chairman Gregory of the committee of the American Bar Association announced today. Major-General Clarence Edwards, who commanded the Twenty-sixth (New England National Guard) Division; Col. Sedgewick Rice, commandant of the army disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth; Lieutenant-Colonel Samuel T. Ansell, former Acting Judge Advocate-General, and Col. John Wigmore are still to appear.

Col. Ansell will present his views Monday afternoon. His position as the leading opponent of the existing judicial system of the army was recognized by the committee in Chairman Gregory's announcement that the officer had been invited to call any persons he might desire to be heard.

Lawyers to Testify.

Three lawyers who either are or were officers of the army during the war gave their views today, one, Maj. George J. Denis of Los Angeles, Cal., having been for a considerable time Judge Advocate of the advance section, service of supply, in France, with jurisdiction over the legal proceedings affecting about 235,000 men.

The others were L. R. Hoover, formerly a Captain of the line in the National Army, but practicing law in New York City, and Maj. R. A. Stone, also a temporary officer of the line, but in civil life a member of a St. Paul law firm.

None of the officers indicated any sympathy with the proposal to vest final jurisdiction over army disciplinary action through courtmartial in the Judge Advocate-General or any appellate court agency in his office. Majors Stone and Denis vigorously opposed such a course and defended the existing legal system.

System Is Defended.

"There is nothing the matter with the courtmartial system," said Maj. Denis.

Maj. Denis told of the sudden increase in absence without leave cases in the fighting divisions immediately following the signing of the armistice. None of these was treated as desertion, he said, a special courtmartial being organized to deal with them, insuring a maximum of six months' imprisonment and six months' fine.

Camp Merritt, Hoboken, the main embarkation camp during the war, dealt with nearly 10,000 cases of absence without leave between April 1 last year and the signing of the armistice, Maj. R. A. Stone said. Practically he said, these men were all deserters, avoiding service at the front, and, he added, that a great deal of "maudlin sentiment" was now being expressed for men severly dealt with by military courts for this offense.

Harshest Sentences After Armistice Was Signed, Ansell Says.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 19.—Lieutenant-Colonel S. T. Ansell, whose criticisms of the military courtmartial system involved him in a controversy with high officials in the War Department, in an address here today discussed the military code, which, he said, had been described by some as "archaic" un-American, oppressive and a system of organized injustice.

"It is announced that a Judge Advocate has recently been dispatched to Europe to investigate the European systems of military justice, a field which I covered one year ago and made a report which was never read. Some of the very harshest punishments were awarded after the armistice was signed. But it has been said that all these sentences were reviewed in the office of the Judge Advocate-General. I surely should know all about that. There was not one in 20 that was reviewed and it must be understood that even if we did review, we had no authority to cut down or nullify or set aside the sentence of a courtmartial, however unjust it was. This old system ought to be changed at once."

5 TONS MORE OF USED COTHING WANTED FOR ALLIED REFUGEES

More Than 50,000 Pounds Collected to Date—City Has Gone Over Top in Two Other Quotas.

St. Louis is expected to go over the top this week in the Red Cross campaign for 60,000 pounds of used clothing for refugees in allied countries. To date more than 50,000 pounds of clothing have been collected at the various centers throughout St. Louis, St. Louis County and East St. Louis.

According to local Red Cross officials the clothing collection campaign, which will be brought to a close at the end of the current week, has been the most successful of any held. St. Louis went over its quota in two previous clothing campaigns.

J. C. Henniges, chairman of the drive, yesterday declared that the drive has been aided materially by members of the Junior Red Cross and various women's organizations. During the past week an entire truck load of clothes was brought to the main collection center at Thirteenth and Olive streets, by pupils of the Polish school. These children contributed another truck load of clothing the first week of the campaign. In all, it is estimated that their contributions amounted to 3000 pounds.

Mrs. W. E. Mitchell of the Buckingham Hotel last week sent in a large packing box filled with new clothing for children. Dresses, stockings and underclothing for girls from 6 to 12 years old, were sent in in dozen lots.

Several merchants in various sections of the city have contributed boxes loaded with new clothing for men, women and children, while many others have cleaned their store shelves of slightly damaged stock and sent the articles in.

THEY ARE PRUSSIANS EVEN WHEN UNDER BOLSHEVISM

German Court Under New Rule Quickly Decides How to Handle Young Offenders.

BERLIN.—Apparently a change from militarism to Bolshevism does not change the nature of a Prussian, as instanced in this story told by the Nord-Bayerische Zeitung:

A case recalling the most sinister days of Prussian militarism is reported from Wolfenbuttel.

The Bolshevist tribunal of that town had sentenced three young men to death for concealing firearms in their homes. After sentence had been passed it was discovered that the condemned were only 18 years old, an age at which, according to law, the capital sentence cannot be carried out, but must be transmuted into one of hard labor.

The circumstances having been brought to the notice of Dr. Frankl, the Court Auditor, the latter simply changed the age of 18, as stated in the written judgment, to 21, remarking: "There, now we may quietly hang them." The court approved this maneuver, and the three youths were there and then executed.

GREGORY RETURNS, BELIEVES TREATY WILL BE SATISFACTORY

Says There Were Many Difficulties, but Conferees Settled Them as Gentlemen.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Thomas W. Gregory, former attorney general, who accompanied President Wilson to France as an unofficial adviser on matters connected with the peace conference, returned here today as a passenger on the transport Von Steuben.

Speaking of the conference and the terms of the forthcoming treaty, Gregory said he returned entirely satisfied, and that in his opinion the agreements arrived at would be satisfactory to the majority of the people of the United States.

"There were numerous difficulties and differences of opinion confronting the delegates," he said, "but they were met and settled by the conferees as gentlemen. While no country, of course, obtained all it wanted, I believe the provisions will be generally accepted."

Gregory said a part of his work had to do with a special mission for the War Department. He said he had been looking into the possible return home of the bodies of American troops who died abroad.

WOUNDED SOLDIER FINDS A FORTUNE AWAITING HIM

While He Was Serving Abroad, Some One Struck Oil on Farm That Cost $2 an Acre.

JUNCTION CITY, Kan.—Unfitted by wounds to follow his pre-war pursuit of farming, Curtis Boyle, a soldier in two armies, returned from France to find that during his absence an oil well has been drilled on his farm near Peabody, Kan., yielding 600 barrels a day. Boyle purchased the land several years ago for $2 an acre.

The soldier oil magnate, who is now in the Fort Riley reconstruction hospital, suffered 28 bullet and shrapnel wounds during his military service, in addition to being gassed and burned by liquid fire. He enlisted in the Third Canadian infantry late in 1914 and was transferred to the American forces last year, serving with the Thirty-fifth and Seventy-seventh Divisions.

Boyle has silver plates in his arm, leg and collar bone, and is minus his ribs and lung on the right side. His legitimate quota of wound stripes runs from wrist to shoulder.

REPORT OF FRESH FIGHTING

Rumanians Said to Have Attacked Hungarians.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, April 19.—Rumanian forces have attacked Hungarian troops, according to a dispatch from Budapest, which fails to tell where the engagement occurred.

The Rumanians, says the message, "suffered tremendous losses."

ARMED INTERVENTION IN ARMENIA IS URGED

Head of American Relief Committee Cables of "Unparalleled Condition of Horror."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Allied or American military intervention in Turkish Armenia, to insure restoration of their home lands of thousands of refugees suffering the tortures of hunger and sickness, was urged, without waiting for formal action by the peace conference creating an Armenian mandatory, in a cablegram from Dr. J. H. T. Main, Commissioner in the Caucasus for the American Committee for Armenia and Syrian Relief made public by the committee here tonight.

More than 330,000 Armenians, hundreds of whom were dying every day of starvation, typhus and cholera, Dr. Mann stated, were concentrated along the boundary between Russia and Turkish Armenia, unable to proceed to their homes in the latter region because the allied force there was insufficient to cope with the Turks, Kurds and Tartars, who had taken possession of the territory and proposed to hold it by military might. This concentration, he added, with lack of food and clothing following a winter of exile in the Caucasus and beyond, had produced "a condition of horror unparalleled among the atrocities of the war."

One-seventh of the refugees were dying every month, the commissioner declared, predicting sucess for the Turks' efficient policy of extermination by starvation" unless relief was given.

According to Dr. Main, who is president of Grinnell College in Iowa, the situation requires "a considerable number of troops" to be used as a policing force, supplied by a mandatory power. He said that many Armenian soldiers would be available for such service.

"Cannot Christian civilization do something to restore and heal?" asked the commissioner, concluding his appeal. "Should our Government delay in reaching out a helping hand to these suffering people. The question of political expediency ought to be forgotten in the presence of this world catastrophe. These people look to America. Our Government is under moral obligations to respond."

PARIS BANDITS VERY BOLD

Their Raids on Flats Are Like Those of Movie Films.

PARIS.—Paris bandits are rivaling movie writers in providing sensations. In broad daylight a burglar entered a flat adjoining the Folies Bergere music hall, in the center of the city, and attempted to strangle a servant girl while his accomplice was singing patriotic songs in the courtyard to distract the attention of the neighbors. The girl ran to a window and screamed. The burglar fled.

The crime is reminiscent of the famous case when the Magistrate Fualdes was assassinated at Rodez in 1817 while the accomplice of the murdered played the barrel organ.

ted to interview them, on pain of being charged with communicating with the enemy.

Official Invitation Not Yet Received by Germans.

NATIONS LEAGUE OR EQUIVALENT OF WORLD SUICIDE, SAYS TAFT

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 19.—Something "equivalent to world suicide," and that within 10 or 20 years, will be the result, unless the league of nations plans is adopted, declared former President Taft in an address in Convention Hall here tonight.

"If we do have such another war," declared the speaker, "it will be as much worse than the war just closing as this war was worse than its predecessors. In 10 years or 20 years, with the inevitable competition in armament which will follow in the absence of a league of nations, there will be a repetition of the conditions which led to this war, and the increased destructiveness of the next war, which the United States would certainly be drawn into as it was into this, will bring about something equivalent to world suicide."

FOCH SAYS RHINE MUST BE HELD AGAINST ENEMY MENACE

Declares Germans as Fighting People Will Never Change and Talks of Future War.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 19.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail in Paris sends an interview he had with Marshal Foch in which the Marshal is quoted as declaring that "our peace must be a peace of victors and not of vanquished."

"We must stay on the Rhine," Marshal Foch said. "Pray impress that on your countrymen. It is our only safety and their only safety. We must double-lock the door.

"Remember those 70,000,000 Germans will always be a menace to us. They are an envious and warlike people. Their characteristics are not changed. Fifty years hence they will be what they are today. Do not trust the appearances of the moment."

Marshal Foch then discussed with the correspondent the possibilities of another war. Asserting that what saved the allies at the beginning of the present war was Russia, he asked on whose side Rusisa would be in the next war, with us or with the Germans?"

The Marshal then argued that only on the Rhine itself would it be possible to arrest the Germans in the event of another attack He talked long and earnestly about the Rhine and said that some people would object that it would take too many troops to hold the river.

"But it will not take so many as it would to hold a political frontier, for the Rhine may be crossed only at certain points, whereas a new political frontier to France can be broken anywhere," he said.

"The next time, remember, the Germans will make no mistake," said Marshal Foch. "They will break through into Northern France and seize the channel ports as a base of operations against England. They failed the last time because they did not believe England would come in and when they found she was coming in it was too late to change their plan.

"You think the Germans will have na arms for another attack! Ho! Ho! How do you know? By the time you found out they had got them it would be too late."

BOLSHEVIKI DRIVEN BACK 12 MILES BY MURMANSK FORCE

LONDON, April 19.—In a successful attack Thursday by Russian troops attached to the allied forces operating on the Murmansk railway south of Kem, the allied forces gained complete control of Lake Vigosero and the main road north to the White Sea, according to an official statement from the British War Office today. The Bolsheviki were driven 12 miles southward.

DANIELS HOPES TO GET OUR ARMY HOME SOON

Secretary of the Navy Talks to Soldiers Forming Part of Army of Occupation.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, Friday, April 18.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, speaking to the men of the Second Division of the American Army of Occupation this afternoon, told his audience that he hoped the army would be taken home as soon as possible.

"As captain of the ferry boats which brought the American army to Europe," he said, "I wish to say that I have under my command 70,000 American boys who also are clamoring to return to their homes. I have told those sailor boys they would get home but that first they must help get back to the United Staes the boys who fought in France and Belgium."

The Secretary's reference to the soldiers' return home was answered with cheers, and shouts of "how soon" were heard. When asked for the dates when the men would be taken back to America, the Secretary smiled but did not answer.

This morning during the review of the division, the Belgian Order of the Crown was conferred on Capt. Gaines Moseley and the Order of Leopold on Capt. Robert Balke. Both are officers in the Marine Corps. Thirty-three Distinguished Service Crosses and 65 French War Crosses were presented officers and men of the division. On the reviewing stand with Secretary Daniels were Mrs. Daniels, Major-General Joseph T. Dickman, commander of the Third Army; Major-General John A. Le Jeune, commander of the Second Division; Brigadier-General John L. Hines, commander of the Third Corps, and naval and army officers who are acompanying the Secretary on his trip.

BODIES OF NAVAL AND MARINE DEAD ABROAD MAY BE RETURNED

Surgeon-General of Navy Seeking to Learn Wishes of Next of Kin as to Resting Place.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The body of every commissioned officer and enlisted man of the Navy and Marine Corps who lost his life in the war and was buried ashore in Europe will be brought home if his next of kin so desires.

Rear Admiral Braisted, Surgeon-General of the Navy, is corresponding with the next of kin of every man who gave his life to his country while on duty abroad.

It is possible that the bodies of a few Marines have not been identified, but the number would be small, and Surgeon-General Braisted has perfected plans for returning all bodies to this country unless the next of kin prefer to have them cared for in England and France.

The next of kin of every man is now being asked whether the body is to be returned to this country. If so, the Navy Department wishes to know whether relations desire burial in an American national cemetery and whether they will attend the ceremony. If the body is to be sent to the home of the deceased heroes, the exact name and address of the person to whom consignment is made should be sent to Surgeon-General Braisted.

All expenses incident to the preparation of the bodies and the transportation to such points as may be designated by the next of kin are borne by the Government. Bodies will be encased in the Navy standard shipping casks.

After a body has been delivered at the point designated, the Navy Department is forbidden by law to defray any further expenses incident to the funeral and burial. All officers and men are entitled to burial in the National Cemetery near Washington, and when interment is made there relatives are put to no expense.

COURTMARTIALED U. S. AVIATOR HELPS TO EXAMINE WITNESSES

Capt. Chamberlain to Call Mayor of City Where He Is Supposed to Have Landed After Famous Flight.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 19.—Capt. E. G. Chamberlain of San Antonio, Tex., took a hand today in examining witnesses in his trial before a courtmartial in connection with his reported aerial exploits last summer on the British front. The defendant, by questions, took Maj. Gilchrist, U. S. A., over the route followed by the witness and Lieutenant-Commander Frederick H. Allen of the American air forces and Capt. Chamberlain, last December, while investigating the unofficial flight of the defendant.

Maj. Gilchrist testified that the party visited two spots in the vicinity of St. Jenne, where Chamberlain was supposed to have landed. The first place visited, Maj. Gilchrist said Chamberlain had declared unlike the spot where he had landed from his famous flight over the German lines. Chamberlain, however, immediately recognized the second spot as the one where he had alighted, the witness continued, and the topography of the country tallied exactly with the description that Chamberlain had made to the witness before leaving Paris.

The defense announced that it would call as witnesses the Mayor of St. Jenne and his daughter, who are reported to have told one of the witnesses for the defense that an American airman had landed in the vicinity of the village on last July 28.

NAVY DECLINES INVITATION

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The navy will follow the course of the War Department and decline the invitation of the Aero Club of America to participate in the Pulitzer trophy contests, to be held in Atlantic City.

This announcement was made today in a letter to Senator Fletcher of Florida from Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, who said that after conferences with War Department officials it had been decided that it would be "impracticable and inadvisable" for the navy to participate.

No Referendum on Prohibition.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 19.—Petitions were being put in circulation through this section today asking a referendum election in 1920 on the resolution adopted by the 1919 Legislature ratifying national prohibition. Attorney-General John D. Arbuckle recently gave an opinion that the resolution was not subject to a referendum.

BIG GUNS TO BE ON VIEW TODAY AT FOREST PARK

Artillery That Paraded Down Town Yesterday Will Be Shown on Flat Cars and at Foot of Art Hill.

FIRST OF ITS KIND TO BE SEEN HERE

Outfit Includes Five Rifles and All the Various Appurtenances of Its Branch of the Service.

Most of the artillery which arrived here yesterday, and which was on exhibition and parade downtown yesterday afternoon, will be shown at the foot of Art Hill in Forest Park today. It was sent here to stimulate interest in the Victory Loan campaign, and is the first of its kind seen in St. Louis.

The outfit includes a motor cycle-drawn pigeon cage, and 20 pigeons to carry information from the front to the big guns behind giving the enemy's position. There are two 155-millimeter rifles that can bombard enemy lines of communication and blow up his ammunition dumps at a distance of 13 miles, and there is a trench mortar to drop huge bombs on his dugouts. A British 8-inch howitzer would plump high explosives over on him. The rifles will be shown on flat cars at Skinker road, as they were too heavy for the park roads.

The 36-inch searchlight would discover the enemy's raiding airplanes, and the three-inch "archie," or anti-aircraft gun, would bring them down. The searchlight's power is made by a power station that is carried in a large truck, and is operated by a gas engine.

Machine Shop at Hand.

The machine shop is at hand to repair anything that goes wrong, and communication may be maintained by the fully equipped radio station which is carried. A motor ambulance is ready to carry off anybody who might be wounded. A sturdy American touring car carried officers from one gun position to another.

There is a 10-ton tractor and three five-ton baby tractors to pull the guns into position, and to move them forward when the enemy retreats. There is no place for a horse in the outfit.

All this is operated and commanded by 13 officers and 112 enlisted men.

Curious crowds, who had been reading for five years about big guns, "archies" and the like, until they felt they really were old acquaintances, went to Twelfth street yesterday to meet them personally for the first time.

One of the 155-millimeter rifles is mounted on a self-propelled tractor. The gun is French, but the tractor is American, and had just been perfected at about the time the armistice was signed. The French had tried out a similar design, which had proved defective, so we fixed it up and made it run. This gun is mounted on a rather high platform, which is inclosed by a railing, making the entire device somewhat suggestive of a battleship.

Only one Uncamouflaged Piece.

On Twelfth street yesterday, the gun was trained upward at a sharp angle, and the breech block thrown open, so that the spectators could look through the barrel, and inspect the spiral rifling inside that gave the shells their "twist." This is the only piece in the group that is not camouflaged, it having been sent here from one of the camps. The rest of the equipment has been in France.

The remaining big rifle is mounted on a heavy steel carriage, and is drawn by the 10-ton tractor. When its massive steel parts are seen, it is difficult to speculate on how many horses would be necessary to move it up any sort of a hill—yet it was one of the smaller of the heavy artillery pieces.

The "archie" is much smaller. It is mounted on a truck, revolves on a circular track, and has a complicated mechanism for lowering or elevating the barrel, so that it can be trained at any angle. tI is capable of shooting three miles high.

It would be hard to imagine a gun simpler than the trench mortar. It is a thin steel tube, 240 millimeters in diameter (about 9.5 inches), whose purpose is to throw a heavy bomb. Its maximum range is 1200 yards. It is not the force of the projectile, but its explosion after it gets there, that does the damage. The mortar is mounted on an ordinary gun carriage.

The howitzer is a sort of a compromise between the rifles and the mortar. It is much heavier and shoots farther than the mortar, but is not half as long, and has not near the range of the rifles. It was very effective in bombarding trenches preparing the way for infantry attacks.

Searchlight in Operation.

Of all the exhibits, none is more curious in appearance than the searchlight. It is mounted on a large truck, which bears a mechanism for raising the searchlight somewhat like the towers on the emergency wagons, by which broken trolley wires are repaired. However, in this instance, the parts are all structural steel and the light can be moved about quickly at any angle desired.

It was turned on last night at Twelfth street, and its brilliant beams lighted up objects at considerable distances. When it was turned on the walls of nearby buildings, a spectator remarked that he "almost could see through the wall."

The large crowd that collected to watch it was addressed by Lieut. Purnell E. Bingham, an officer of the contingent, in behalf of the Victory Loan. Bingman went to France as a chaplain, and came back an officer of the line. He has the Crois de Guerre for gallantry in action.

Rear Admiral Sims to Speak Thursday Night at Coliseum

REAR ADMIRAL WILLIAM S. SIMS, commander of the American naval forces in European waters during the entire period of hostilities, will speak at a Victory Loan mass meeting at the Coliseum Thursday night. The doors will be opened at 7:30 p. m. and admission will be free. E. B. Pryor, president of the State National Bank, will preside.

Rear Admiral Sims made one of the most notable short speechs of the war when, on his arrival at Queenstown, he was asked by the British commander when his ships would be ready for service.

"We can start at once," Sims replied, and his words have gone into history beside the four words of Gen. Pershing at the tomb of a great Frenchman: "Lafayette, we are here."

When he was commander of the Minnesota, in 1910, Sims said, in a speech at a Guildhall dinner in London, that if Great Britain were to be attacked by an external enemy, the United States would spend its last dollar and the last drop of American blood in defense of England. He was bitterly criticised for this remark, but retained his rank, and was promoted in due time.

Mrs. Sims was formerly Miss Anne E. Hitchcock, daughter of the late Ethan Allen Hitchcock of St. Louis, who was Secretary of the Interior in President McKinley's Cabinet. They have two sons and three daughters. The family resides in Newport, R. I.

signal for the sales organization of 4000 man and women, to begin the effort to sell $51,342,650 of Victory notes, the city's quota. Let's Make it Three Straight," is the motto of the workers here and elsewhere in the Eighth (St. Louis) Federal Reserve District, which was the first to raise its quota in the Third and Fourth Liberty Loan campaigns. The district quota is $195,000,000.

To guard against possible attack by robbers, policemen will accompany salesmen and saleswomen who go from ward and district headquarters to the division headquarters with money collected on subscriptions.

The men's sales organization is recruited from the bond and insurance salesmen, and from mercantile houses, including both the Washington avenue wholesale firms and those represented in the Associated Retailers. A large force of speakers has also been recruited, and will begin work tomorrow evening, making talks thereafter in factories, theaters and other meeting places.

The industrial honor flag, to be awarded to business concerns in recognition of their support of the loan campaign, will be awarded more sparingly than heretofore, it is announced. A special committee has been appointed, in charge of these awards, and it will consider not only the proportion of a firm's employes who bought Victory Notes, but the amount subscribed by the concern, according to its size and importance. The flag displays a large blue V on a white field, surrounded by a red border.

First Purchase Here $100,000.

The first local $100,000 subscription reached the Victory Loan organization yesterday, from the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. Sigmund Baer, secretary and treasurer of the firm, in signing the subscription, wrote:

"Not only do we look upon this as an obligation which we must share in paying the nation's debt incurred by the war, but also as an opportunity for a good and safe investment."

The division chairman to whom this subscription is credited is Severin Schulte, who thus takes a long lead in his list of subscriptions, to appear officially in the list to be compiled tomorrow night.

Men in military service, about to be discharged, and soldiers recently discharged are expected to respond in large numbers to the appeal that they put $50 of their $60 war bonus, paid upon discharge, into the purchase of a Victory Note. Those still in service can make payments until their discharge, and take the balance from their bonus after discharge. Those discharged during the loan campaign, on request, will receive their bonus in the form of a $50 Victory Note and a $10 check.

Dr. Alfred Herinck, Mayor of Louvain, Belgium, will speak at a Victory Loan meeting in the St. Louis University auditorium, Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard, Wednesday night. He will tell of the deeds of the German army in Louvain, the university city which was looted of more than one-third its portable property, with the wanton destruction of the university's great library, the deliberate burning of more than one-tenth of the houses, and the slaughter of more than 200 noncombatants, including women and children.

Served as Mayor.

Dr. Herincx was professor of law in the university, and served as Mayor from the beginning to the end of the German occupation. He is now attached to the Belgian Legation at Washington.

The Women's Committee of the loan organization met yesterday at the Hotel Statler, and a telegram from Mrs. William G. McAdoo, wife of the former Secretary of the Treasury, and daughter of President Wilson, was read. It was:

"The women of the United States felt, a year ago, that no money price was too high to pay for the winning of a victorious peace. The Government is now asking us to help raise the $4,500,000,000 subscription that totals the Victory Loan. Can we do less than our best to pay the price of peace?"

Mrs. William T. Donovan, State chairman of the Women's Committee, read the telegram at the meeting, which was addressed by Mrs. Theodore Benoist, Mrs. John H. Holliday, J. C. Van Riper and Lee Meriwether. Mrs. J. P. Higgins, vice chairman of the Women's Committee for the city, presided.

WHEN AND WHERE ST. LOUIS ARMY UNITS WILL LAND

by the Mayor and auxiliary committees of the returning units are rushing ahead plans in St. Louis for the soldiers' reception.

Stands in Twelfth Street.

Director of Public Welfare Schmoll, who is chairman of the plan and scope sub-committee of the Mayor's committee, said yesterday that the erecting of stands in Twelfth street seating 10,000 persons would begin tomorrow and that workmen would keep at the job night and day until it was finished.

Plans for the court of honor in Twelfth street will be completed tomorrow and the erection will start Tuesday, according to Chairman Edward Hidden of the Mayor's committee. A monumental shaft is the architectural center of this plan.

Welcoming committees, who expect to meet the various units at seaboard, are holding themselves in readiness to depart upon the receipt of definite information on arrivals.

St. Louis Committee.

The St. Louis committee to welcome the Thirty-fifth Division, composed of Mrs. Harold Haill, Mrs. W. C. Pretorious, Mrs. J. W. Reinholdt, Mrs. J. D. Marshall, will be accompanied by a member of the Mayor's committee and of the Chamber of Commerce. They will be joined by Adjutant-General Clark and his staff, possibly Gov. Gardner and a committee of 10 representing the Missouri Legislature. Col. A. C. Adams and Capt. Vance Thralls, representing the Adjutant-General, and Representative Razovsky already are in Hoboken awaiting the troops. Lawrence Boogher of St. Louis also is in the East watching for Missouri men returning.

A telegram from him yesterday stated that the 128th Field Artillery would be demobilized either at Camp Funston, Kan., or Camp Taylor, Ky.

Telegrams from Adjutant-General Kerr in Washington yesterday stated that the Twelfth Engineers and the 110th Motor Supply Train would be permitted to stop in St. Louis for a parade. Both will be demobilized at Camp Funston.

The telegram stated that the Twelfth Engineer, 43 officers and 1257 men, would reach the United States on April 26.

Plans Are Announced.

Accordingly, Jacob von Maur, chairman of the committee to welcome the regiment, gave out his plans. There will be a parade, a formal welcome in the Twelfth street court of honor, with speeches and perhaps dancing, a reception to be followed by a banquet at the Coliseum. Each officer and man will be presented with a bronze medal of special design and there will be a public presentation of silk colors for the regiment, provided by the relatives' auxiliary. The War Department has been requested to permit the regiment to stop 12 hours.

A special welcoming committee for the Twelfth, composed of United States Senator Spencer, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, Lieutenant-Colonel F. J. Jonah, formerly of the regiment; John Hunter, chief naval constructing engineer, now in New York, and Clarkson Potter, formerly a Captain in the Home Guards, will meet the regiment.

Miss V. A. L. Jones, representing the Relatives' Auxiliary of the 35th Division, stated last night that notice had been sent through news articles to the various reconstruction hospitals that wounded men of St. Louis units are invited to participate in the parade of their military organizations in this city. The State has privided a fund to pay the traveling expenses. The Mayor's committee is making special arrangements to care for them with an automobile section in the parade.

Stands for Relatives.

That all relatives of the men returning might have every chance of seeing the review, the grandstand seats will be held primarily for them. To make sure that they are provided for, a system of registration will be started Tuesday. A downtown registration headquarters will be opened at a place to be announced tomorrow.

All relatives will be asked to call during the week to register, showing their relation to the man in the service and receive tickets of admission to the grandstand.

Present arrangements contemplate separate celebrations for each unit and separate tickets will be issued for each.

Lieut. William H. Leahy and Capt. W. J. McMahon will be in charge of the registration bureau.

25,000 MEN OF 35TH HAD SAILED UP TO THURSDAY

Debarkation at Three Ports in U. S. Will Cover Period of About Eleven Days.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 19.—After a year in France, the Thirty-Fifth Division will soon all be home. Up to Thursday, the filing date of the latest cablegrams received by the War Department announcing the sailing of transports, approximately 25,000 men of the division had embarked for three ports—New York, Newport News and Boston.

The 128th Field Artillery as already reported, is due to arrive at Boston on the Vedic Monday and will be sent to Camp Devens for the disinfecting process, which all returning troops must undergo. Thence the men will go to various camps near their homes, with Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., getting the majority.

Latest of the units announced as having sailed is the 138th Infantry, which left St. Nazaire on the Aeolus last Thursday. Not until late this afternoon was the War Department able to announce its departure. Cablegrams to the Department on the movements of troops from abroad are sent after sailing, and usually after being received they are held several hours for decoding. Private messages get through faster. The Aeolus will bring 86 officers and 3118 men of the 138th to Newport News, the port at which Major-General Wright and advance detachments of the division are due to arrive tomorrow on the DeKalb. The regiment will be scattered among a dozen camps.

About 1400 officers and men will be demobilized at Camp Taylor, while Camp Sherman, Dodge and Funsten will get the bulk of the remainder. Though the Aeolus took 15 days on her last journey to this country, the War Department navigation branch said last night that the boat was due April 29. This allows 12 days for the trip. The Aeolus has been steadily engaged in taking troops across and bringing them back. She is described by an officer who crossed in her to France as a commodious vessel making 12 knots an hour in convoy, coming back her speed will be considerably greater.

With the exception of the 110th Trench Mortar Battery, all the larger units of the Thirty-fifth Division have figured in the troop movement cablegrams of the last 10 days. Though it was one of the earliest units designated for return, this battery is still listed at the War Department as merely "on priority." Dating from the arrival at New York today of the Von Steuben with the 110th Engineers, the debarkation of the Thirty-fifth Division in this country will be spread over a period of 11 days. Three vessels are due tomorrow and others of the 13 carrying the division will arrive at intervals of a day or so. The 138th is on the thirteenth transport to sail, though the latest to depart. The regiment will, if the Aeolus lives up to promise, beat the 140th Infantry into port by a day. The Nansemond, with the 140th, is due on the 30th. If it arrives on time the War Department, for all practical purposes, will have lived up to its promise to get the Thirty-fifth Division back to this country in April.

Here is the full list of the 13 transports, with the date on which each is due to arrive, and the port:

Von Steuben, arrived at New York today.

Zeppelin, due at New York tomorrow.

De Kalb, due at Newport News tomorrow.

Great Northern, due at New York tomorrow.

Vedic, Boston, Monday.

Mobile, New York, Monday.

Manchuria, New York, Thursday.

Matsonia, New York, Friday.

Antegone, Newport News, Saturday.

PLEDGES COMING IN ON VICTORY LOAN

Predictions of Success Reach Washington; Hope Average Investor Will Subscribe.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—New evidence of America's purpose to redeem in full the pledges made on entering the war was asked of the nation today by President Wilson, who urged full subscription of the $4,500,000,000 Victory Liberty Loan note issue. Sixty thousand men who gave their lives in France have redeemed the covenant of blood made two years ago, the President said, but the pledge of treasure remains yet to be fulfilled.

"Today the world stands freed from the threat of militarism," the President cabled from Paris, "but as yet we stand only at the threshold of happier times. To enter, we must fulfill to the utmost the engagements we have made."

With the formal opening of the campaign still nearly two days away, subscription pledges began to pour in to the Treasury today, along with predictions of success perhaps even more optimistic than those accompanying the four previous bond issues. Enthusiastic reports from banks caused some anxiety to officials, who hope that the new issue will be propularly subscribed, instead of being taken by financial institutions, as that would result in tying up credit.

Lewis B. Franklin, director of the War Loan Organization, said today that, as an incentive to the average investor, all subscriptions of $10,000 and less would be accepted in full and that any oversubscription of the issue would be deducted from the larger purchases. He explained that this was expected to create an immediate demand for the notes, which are regarded as highly desirable investments because of the liberal interest rate and tax exemptions. In this way it is expected that the price will be kept well up after the campaign closes.

To raise the entire amount of the loan it will be necessary for the country to subscribe at the rate of $250,000,000 each day.

A feature of the opening of the loan Monday will be the testing of the new wireless telephonic apparatus by which a man flying in an airplane above the city will deliver an address to a throng on the Treasury steps through use of a sound amplifier set up on the ground. Admiral Sims will be a speaker on this occation, and Billie Burke, the actress, will sell bonds from the Treasury steps.

Sunday Affairs Up to Communities.

The Sunday observance issue raised by protest of churches and ministers in a number of cities against flying circuses and exhibition of moving pictures in connection with the Victory Loan was met by the Treasury in a decision to leave the question to each community affected. Frank R. Wilson, director of loan publicity, telegraphed the loan chairman of each community where the flying circuses of aviators are scheduled to appear on Sunday, saying it was Secretary Glass' belief that the date should be abandoned, but that the trains bearing the airplanes and crews would be run on schedule and the exhibitions would be held if all interests of a community agreed.

Self-interest constitutes the principal reason why the public should subscribe generously to the Victory loan, said the Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly bulletin.

"If the obligations already taken by the banks are not liquidated," said the bulletin, commenting on the billions of treasury certificates of indebtedness already absorbed by the banks, "the community at large will suffer from a continued inflation of banking credit and from the high prices that are consequent upon this condition of affairs. Only one remedy for the situation now existing can be applied—that, namely, of subscribing freely for the Government obligations when offered and of paying for them out of the proceeds of saving, either already accumulated or to be accumulated from time to time.

Urgency Greater Than in War.

"Indeed, the urgency for adherance to this policy is greater now than it was during the war, inasmuch as at that time there was strict oversight and control on the part of the Government over production, distribution and, in a measure, consumption, while at present that oversight has naturally and properly been greatly relaxed or, in many branches of business, entirely abolished.

"The responsibility of saving and conserving resources thus remains with those who are the recipients of current incomes, either from investments or from salaries and wages, in perhaps a higher degree than was previously true."

Even while the loan campaign is under way, the war savings organization throughout the country intends to keep up its work, although not in direct competition with loan workers. The slogan of the thrift campaign this year, it was announced today, will be "save first, spend afterward."

"On the average," said a statement from the War Savings headquarters here, "four families of every five in the United States now have the proud record of being purchasers of Government securities in denominations of $50 or more. The fifth family, in probably a majority of instances, holds some Government security or war savings stamps. Deposits in banks also have notably increased."

Cape Girardeau County Over the Top for Loan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., April 19.—Cape Girardeau County reports over the top for the Victory Loan, its quota of $684,750 being subscribed by the fifteen banks of the county.

CITY PAYROLL ACCOUNT SHOWS STEADY GROWTH

Increases $2,049,020 in 6 Years, While Outlay on Public Works Shrinks, Comparison Reveals.

A comparison of expenditures from the municipal revenue fund for salaries and public work reveals that in 1912-13 $2,969,804.16 was expended for public work, the city payroll being only $5,599,698.74, while in the last fiscal year, when $1,710,517.38 less than in 1912-13 was expended for police work, the payroll had increased to $7,648,719.45—a $2,049,020.72 increase in six years.

The budget, which has been approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and is pending before the Board of Aldermen for approval, for the fiscal year 1919-20, only carries an allotment of $551,890.38 for public work and special purposes. However, the amount estimated for salaries, not including a probably increase of $550,000 for the police, is $7,889,289, or $240,569.54 more than last year.

For the fiscal year 1916-17 $1,181,488.50 was expended for public work, and the appropriation for salaries was $6,893,349.66. In 1917-18 the public work expense was $938,595.39 and the salary account $7,228,203.83.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that a fair comparison could not be made of the salary account as compared to the public work appropriation in the municipal revenue fund, because under the new charter a considerable portion of construction over which city employes have supervision is paid by special tax bills assessed against the property benefited, which would not show as an expenditure from the municipal revenue fund.

Prior to the adoption of the new charter, in August, 1914, which provided that the prevailing scale of wages should be paid all city employes, many of the city's mechanics were not receiving the union scale. This provision of the charter has increased the payroll considerably, due to the large increases paid to skilled labor during the war period.

A war bonus bill, made necessary by the increased cost of living, passed in October, increased the payroll $250,000 last year, and, as it is continued in the budget for the current fiscal year, will increase the expenditures for salaries $500,000 this year.

CITY MAY LOWER TAX RATE FOR FIRST TIME

Levy Not Fixed Because of Bill in Legislature to Assess Property at Full Value.

Comptroller Nolte said last night that the city administration had not submitted a tax rate bill with its budget bill to the Board of Aldermen Friday because of a possibility that there might be a lowering of the tax rate from $2.35 on the $100 valuation to $2.30.

Hesitancy in submitting the tax rate bill, he declared, was caused by the passage of a bill in the State House of Representatives Friday, assessing all Missouri property on a 100 per cent basis. If the bill becomes a law by passing the State Senate and is signed by the Governor, state boards of equalization will have to assess property at 100 per cent of its value, which in turn will reduce the state rate of taxation from 15 to 10 cents on the $100. This would affect St. Louis by cutting five cents from its rate. The city has reached the limit it can assess for purely municipal purposes, $1.27 on the $100 valuation.

If the new assessment bill becomes law, St. Louisans will enjoy for the first time the experience of witnessing a tax rate decrease. It is not thought the new law will result in any radical changes in assessment on an upward scale in St. Louis, as Comptroller Nolte declares much of St. Louis' property is now assessed on a $100 basis and has been so for some time.

COUNTRY IS READY AND SUCCESS OF LOAN ASSURED, SAYS GLASS

Secretary of Treasury Addresses Bankers, Manufacturers and Workers at Cleveland.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 19.—Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, in an address tonight to Cleveland bankers, manufacturers and Fourth Federal Reserve District Loan Workers, opened the Victory Loan campaign in this district by saying that the entire country is ready and the success of the last Liberty Loan is assured.

"The work of our boys must be backed up, and the way to do it is to put the financial shoulder to the wheel and put over this loan," he said. "A world is to be rebuilt. Should we pause and debate as to who should rebuild it? No! The enterprise should be started right away with the whirr of mills and the din of a thousand essential industries.

"The American people should supplement the patriotism of war by the patriotism of peace. The foremost obligation is the duty of guarding jealously the honor of the nation."

110TH ENGINEERS OF 35TH DIVISION AND GEN. BERRY RETURN

High Praise for Missouri and Kansas Guard Troops Given by Their Artillery Commander.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The transport Von Stuben, with Brigadier-General Lucien E. Berry in command of the troops on board, including the Sixtieth Field Artillery, brigade headquarters and the whole of the 110th Engineers of the Thirty-fifth Division, docked at Hoboken at 11 o'clock today. The Von Steuben, which was the famous sea raider Kron Prinz Wilhelm and was interned on this side of the Atlantic before she was commandeered as a naval transport, came up the bay with the general headquarters band of the A. E. F., 101 strong, sending waves of martial melody to all shores of New York Bay to announce the coming of the vanguard of the Thirty-fifth Division.

Her trip across the ocean had been rough and nearly all of the soldiers admitted they had been sick. But there was none of them unwilling to take the gang plank to the pier in three jumps had he been permitted.

Gen. Berry Praises Men.

Brigadier-General Berry, looking even huskier and bigger than when he took the brigade abroad a year ago, said that, first of all, he wanted to tell the world what he thought of the Thirty-fifth Division.

"The losses tell the story," he said. "I know the casualties have been attributed by certain persons in civil authority to mismanagement. I do not think the men of the division will thank the Governor of Kansas for that. They know that their losses were heavy; that they were set to do a terrible task and that they accomplished it wonderfully and the casualty list is the best proof in the world of how hard was the job they undertook. It is a great honor to any man to have had under his command such thorough soldiers and high-minded, hard-working, fearless Americans as made up the Thirty-fifth Division."

Speaking of the statement of Gov. Allen of Kansas that the heavy losses of the division were due to poor artillery support, Gen. Berry said: "Of course, if Gov. Allen chooses to criticise the plans of Marshal Foch, this is his privilege. Nevertheless, those plans seem to have been successful. It is not for me as a soldier to criticise them, at any rate. I understand that some of the officers of the division have been outspoken in their displeasure over Gov. Allen's attitude, especially the officers of the Kansas regiments, and there is a considerable backfire developing from them.

Artillery Support.

Brigadier-General Berry, in discussing the question that has been raised of the artillery support of the infantry in the Argonne Forest battle, said that not for a second's time in the big battle had the infantry been without artillery cover and protection, and added that the artillery work would stand the closest investigation. He said that the artillery brigade had done glorious work, and he proposed to let the fathers and mothers of Kansas know about it. He said when the proper time came, he courted a full investigation into the work of any of the Thirty-fifth Division in the Argonne battle, adding that the "deeper the probe went, the better the light that would be thrown on the work of the artillery."

"It is difficult to discuss criticism of a particular phrase of a particular unit in the big battle," Gen. Berry said, "for every detail must be considered in connection with the whole battle plan and the general strategy of the battle.

"These persons who are criticising the management of the Argonne, particularly the handling of the Thirty-fifth, are criticising the strategy and plan worked out by Marshal Foch. In turn, they are criticising the strategy of Gen. Pershing, for the work we had to do and the conditions under which we had to do it, cannot be considered separately, but are a part of the whole battle plan.

"I have no desire to talk in general terms, for most of the criticism has been in general terms, and not in specific detail, such as can be met. But I can say that the work of the artillery brigade will stand the closest scrutiny and investigation, and the deeper the probe goes the better the light in which the work of our brigade will be thrown.

Message to States.

"The message which I wish to convey to the people of Kansas and Missouri is one of intense activity and manly heroism on the part of their sons. We went abroad unequipped. We searched France for equipment up to the very day the Argonne offensive opened. I counted on working all the elements of the brigade during the offensive continually night and day, because it had to be. I have talked this over with them since the battle, and they don't resent it. They are proud of it and they are proud of what they did during the battle, and the trust and reliance that was imposed on them.

"In time, I am going to take up in detail just what the artillery brigade did during this battle, and just what the Thirty-fifth Division did. This isn't the time. But I can summarize in a few words why the people of Kansas and Missouri can be especially proud of their ~~sons who~~ are now returning to them. The Thirty-fifth Division led in the advance of our army corps. They carried the divisions along on their right and their left. The Thirty-fifth Division opened the door to victory in the Argonne.

"The proposition of attacking the Hindenburg line, as the Thirty-fifth Division did, was exceptionally difficult. We were assigned to a positoin at Vauquois. It was strongly fortified and, though there were but 1500 men actually in the stronghold, they were supported by two divisions of the Prussian Guard, and, as we later learned from deserters, part of a third division. Of course, an attack of that kind cannot be made without great bloodshed.

"The whole Argonne, in positions far less difficult, is steeped with French, British and American blood. But we took that objective and went beyond it. We obeyed orders. That is the only answer I can make to Gov. Allen."

The Engineers returned in command of Col. E. M. Slayton of Kansas City. It was almost a year since the Kansans and Missourians had gone out of New York harbor during the night. It was just a year to the day since they had left Camp Doniphan on the long journey to France. Today they received a heroes' welcome.

As Gen. Berry expressed it: "These men here opened the door to victory in the Argonne and that victory more than anything ended the war."

Engineers Twice Cited.

Col. Stayton, commander of the 110th Engineers, told of the 110th being citetd twice as a regiment for gallantry in action.

"What do you think of them?" he asked. "Did you ever see a greater bunch in your life? I am proud of every single one of them. They've been through every kind of a test that a soldier can be up against, and they've delivered the goods every time. Man alive! You don't know how proud it makes a man feel to be leading a regiment like this back home. It's different from leading them off to war, for, after you have been through battle with them you realize more than ever what men they are, and this regiment certainly was made up of upstanding men.

"Do you know that in the Thirty-fifth they called this the Kansas City regiment, for it had more men actually from Kansas City in it than any other unit. I wish there was some word I could send back to the relatives of these men, not only in Kansas City, but in Topeka and the surrounding Kansas and Missouri towns, to convey what fine soldiers they have been. But words don't do it. All I can say is that we'll soon be home and we send our greetings to our friends and relatives. That will hold until we get there and tell it all in person."

Col. Stayton himself has a fine war record. His work in the Argonne Forest, where he started the reserve line personally and saw to its building, all the while under severe shell fire, has been most highly commended.

Men Endured "Worst Test."

"They've delivered the goods," said Col. Slayton. "The worst test a soldier has is to be fired at by every sort of a weapon conceivable; to be shelled and gassed and have to go right on with his work, without a chance to crack back at the Boche. That's what this engineer regiment did for nearly three days. They worked with pick and shovel building roads, doing every sort of work imaginable, working with the tanks to get them up, helping out everybody. All the while they were under the most severe shell fire and gas attacks and doing back-breaking work, but they never faltered or kicked or hesitated. The entire regiment worked night and day, almost without eating and practically without sleeping. Then, when they were needed and the call came, the regiment to a man took up their rifles and fought as infantrymen.

"We held the reserve line for 35 hours in the fiercest kind of fighting imaginable. We fought the Boche to a standstill there. We lost 260 men killed and wounded in the battle—in fact, our losses were the fourth heaviest of any engineer regiment in the A. E. F. But the regiment delivered the goods. It was cited twice as a regiment—once for its effective work as engineers in road building and trench building under severe fire; a second time for its 35-hour fight as infantrymen holding the reserve line in the critical hours of the Thirty-fifth's battle history. That's the story of my regiment in brief. Is it any wonder that I am proud of my men? And when they march in the welcome parade back home, although several have won individual Distinguished Service Crosses, every parent and relative can remember that the entire regiment has won two citations that belong equally to every man in it."

If there was a vacant spot on the rail or deck of the Von Steuben as it came to port, human eye could not discover it. Soldiers lined the rail, the decks, they were perched even on the big six-inch guns that stuck out from the deck.

The headquarters band was playing "Katy" while the soldiers moved and danced. On the dock, a military band was giving the boys a touch of rag time. And from the ship came just one solid yell and roar.

Soon the bands stopped. The dock crew was hustling the gangplank up the side of the boat. Gen. Berry and staff were preparing to land. After all the din of welcome, it sounded really quiet. And some voice bawled out loudly from the upper deck: "My Gawd, buddy, look at the derby hats. Say, buddy, what do they cost over in this man's country?" Everyone heard it, and everyone roared with laughter.

Then someone got a close-up of a girl. She was a red-haired Salvation Army lass who had left the ranks of young women at the far end of the dock to run to the side of the boat and call up greetings. How those Kansans and Missourians did cheer her. Soon the whole crowd, Salvation Army workers, Red Cross workers, Y. M. C. A. men, reporters and photographers were running up the gangplank to board the boat.

Man From Mexico, Mo.

As the Von Steuben was being warped up to the pier one of the 110th Engineers, waiting only until he could shout loudly enough to be heard, hailed the crowd on the dock.

"Is there anybody from Mexico, Mo., here?" he demanded.

A navy officer wheeled toward the transport.

"Let's give three cheers for Mexico, Mo.," yelled the soldier. What the navy officer would have done must remain conjecture, for the band struck up. When it had finished, the Mexico, Mo., soldier made a megaphone of his hands and addressed the band:

"On behalf of Mexico, Mo., I thank you kindly, gentlemen."

This may be said for the men of the 110th: They are fast workers. Ten minutes after the Von Steuben had docked, a bunch of them were out of their blouses and warming up with ball and glove, lent by the Y. M. C. A. men who met the ships. The old pill was smacking in the old mitt and all of the Kaiser's men and guns had not detracted one whit from the native instinct.

"The men are natural ball players, always and under almost any conditions," explained a Second Lieutenant.

Eight Men Decorated.

Shortly before the 110th Engineers left Camp Pontainezen, outside of Brest, to sail for home, eight members of the regiment were decorated with the coveted D. S. C. for heroism. The decorations were conferred upon Capt. C. S. J. ("Tony") James of Kansas City, the former K. U. football star; Willis C. Milled, a cook, of Kansas City, Kan.; Sergt. John McIntyre and Corp. John C. Light of Topeka; Sergt. Hugh T. Caywood of Eureka, Private John R. Pelley of Wellington, Sergt. Ray Winters of Lawrence and Private William E. Grady of Arkansas. "D. S. C." also was awarded to Capt. Arley Hedrick of Kansas City, Mo., who died shortly before the regiment sailed for home. The decorations were conferred by Brigadier S. A. Cheney, who formerly commanded the regiment and the colors of the regiment, in honor of the two citations the regiment had received, were decorated by Brigadier-General Berry.

The Von Steuben left Brest after the Zeppelin, bearing the Kansas City artillery regiment, but passed it in mid-ocean, in fact, the principal excitement coming over was passing other transports.

"But this fast trip was none too good for us engineers," said a chesty private." we had it coming to us. When do we hit for Kansas City, now?"

The 110th Engineers, which had casualties of over 300 in a fighting career which began with the British last May and ended in active participation in the Argonne drive, both in road building and in combat, has nine distinguished service crosses on the breasts of its personnel.

Gregory Addressed Troops.

Former Attorney-General Gregory, who went abroad with President Wilson six weeks ago, returned on the Von Steuben. He made an address to the troops Thursday afternoon which was enthusiastically received, though one irresponsible member of the 110th Engineers caused even the speaker to lose his composure by shouting: "Yes, we went over to save democracy, and we did it; but what did we get besides that? I'll say we got Spanish flue and prohibition."

Melville E. Stone of the Associated Press addressed the troops the following afternoon.

The arrival of the Von Steuben at quarantine was delayed three hours because she waited in Gravesend Bay for a tug to take off the former Attorney-General and Mr. Stone. All troops were transferred and sent to Camp Mills.

There were 2892 troops in all on the Von Steuben, including 9 officers and 66 men of the Sixtieth Field Artillery Brigade, 46 officers and 1611 men of the 110th Engineers, complete and two officers and 82 men of the 110th Engineer Train, all of the Thirty-fifth Division.

Beside the band which was stationed at Gen. Pershing's headquarters at Chaumont, and returns to aid in the loan campaign, other troops on board were officers and men of the 102d Aero Squadron, 335th Ambulance Company, casuals and 600 wounded soldiers.

Gen. Berry's home is in Corning, N. Y., and for 40 years he has been an officer in the regular army.

Bandsmen All Combat Troops.

The headquarters band, recruited from combat troops after the armistice was signed, has played before President Wilson, King Albert of Belgium and King George of England, and led the troops when they marched into Metz. The fighting bandsmen, some of whom have been wounded, were escorted from the pier in Hoboken to a hotel here, where they will make their headquarters during the campaign. They are under the leadership of Capt. Louis H. Fischer Jr., whose father for 40 years was director of the orchestra in Ford's Theater in Baltimore. Associated with Capt. Fischer in organizing the band was Sergeant Willis S. Ross of Kansas City.

The 110th Engineers contains a number of St. Louis men, who were assigned to that organization at Camp Doniphan after being drafted, sent to Camp Funston and later to Doniphan to fill up the Thirty-fifth Division.

Artillery Commander's Message to Missouri and Kansas Parents

BRIGADIER-General Lucien E. Berry, who commanded the 60th Artillery Brigade during the Argonne Forest battle, made this statement for the "Fathers and Mothers" of Missouri and Kansas, upon his arrival here this morning:

"I'm bringing back more than 90 per cent of the young men whom I took to France with me from your States. They've gone through battle; they have conducted themselves as men should and as only real men can. I didn't have a straggler in my entire brigade during the entire Argonne battle. They are a fine body of men. I feel that the two States have a right to be proud of them; that their relatives and friends have a right to be proud of them. They are returning better Americans than ever and their return will cause a distinct improvement to the citizenship of Kansas and Missouri because it could not be otherwise to have their sturdy spirit and activity infused once more into the everyday life of the two States.

COL. KLEMM'S VERSION OF ARTILLERY'S WORK

Tells Why Barrages Could Not Be Laid Down on All Requests in Argonne Battle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 18.—Col. Karl D. Klemm, a son of Mrs. John Schroers of St. Louis, who commanded the 129th (Kansas City) Artillery unit of the Thirty-fifth Division in France, on return here had the following to say about artillery support in the Argonne battle:

"The artillery of the Thirty-fifth Division had its full quota of guns, was amply supplied with ammunition in the Argonne battle, had sufficient horses, of not the best quality, and was not delayed materially by poor roads.

"No one has questioned the personal valor of the artillerymen, but I desire to say they were wonderful men, enthusiastic and untiring workers.

"The artillery was in position to answer every call for specific fire or barrages and laid every barrage asked for—when it was considered safe to do so. Our guns fired almost continually, on barrages or specific targets, often being compelled to stop and cool off.

Couldn't Fire at Random.

"Many barrages were not sent over when requested, because those requests came to us from platoon, company and battalion commanders. No one, however, seemed to know where all of the infantry units were, and we could not, of course, fire at random with the possibility of wiping out some of our infantry detachments.

"Then there were barrages asked by certain detachments which were not sent because we were busy with other barrages which our brigade and division commanders considered more important.

"Naturally each officer felt that his own detachment was the most important unit of the army and decided the artillery was falling down when his request was not answered for a barrage."

Col. Klemm then explained the confusion of the division.

"Let it be made clear that I am not attempting to belittle the infantry units for becoming confused," he said. "The division made remarkable progress the first day of the battle and everything was smooth.

"Then came the second day and confusion. It was not the fault of any person or persons, only a military necessity. The division was not in the best condition for another attack, even at 8:30 o'clock that day as originally planned. But the corps and army commanders had a larger problem to solve. Nine divisions were in the line. The situation demanded a farther attack by the 35th. Everything was weighed, I am sure, and the decision was made that the attack must be made at 5:30 o'clock.

"Eight other divisions were to be considered, beside six other divisions in the support line. The major plan was to be benefited by an earlier plunge of the 35th, although not reorganized and ready for the attack. The enlisted men do not feel they were sacrificed. They feel they fought well and wisely. They dislike controversies which put them in the position of 'babies.'

Movements Before Battle.

The movements of the 129th from the night before the battle until the night of Oct. 3, when they withdrew were outlined by Col. Klemm.

"We were located near Neuville the night before the battle opened and our orders were to throw a progressive barrage for an attack on Vauquois Hill beginning at 5:30 o'clock the morning of Sept. 26. We did so until 8:30 o'clock when we were ordered moved forward to a position near Cheppy.

"We followed a rock road which crosses the Aire River below Varennes and recrosses below Cheppy. When we reached the first bridge it was impassable, and we followed a path made by tanks, not crossing the river.

"We reached our positions in the night and prepared to fire again at 8:30 the next morning, but orders were changed to 5:30 o'clock. The regiment was not ready, but did our best on short barrages and specific targets. When the limit of our range was reached we moved to Charpentry and remained there until relieved."

ALLEGED LOBBYIST RIPS COAT OF LEGISLATOR, GETS SHAKING-UP

Near Fight Follows Parker's Success on Bill Against Fortune Telling and Another Raising Wages.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 19.—Consideration of a bill to prohibit fortune telling and another to increase the wages of two negro janitors in the Court of Criminal Correction in St. Louis, caused a near fight and considerable confusion in the House late this afternoon. The coat of Representative Jones H. Parker of St. Louis, was ripped, and M. F. Dowd of St. Louis, a clerk in the House, was shaken up a bit.

Parker was speaking in support of the bill to prohibit fortune-telling. Several members charged that Dowd was lobbying on the floor against the measure and, on their demands, Speaker O'Fallon ordered him moved from the floor. Parker succeeded in having the bill passed.

A few minutes later Parker called up his negro janitors' bill and passed it. During the discussion he thought Dowd, who, instead of leaving the room, had stood at his side, was also so lobbying against that measure. After its passage he passed Dowd near a door as he was leaving and there was an exchange of conversation. Parker grabbed Dowd by the wrists and dragged him through the door. Dowd succeeded in getting a hold on Parker's coat and in the scuffle it was ripped. Members separated them.

President of Columbia in an Address Condemns "Political" Socialism

Dr. Nicholas Murray Declares That America's Real Need Is Along the Lines of Social Reform.

CINCINNATI, April 19.—Nicholas Murray, president of Columbia University, New York, delivered an address here tonight on the subject, "Is America Worth Saving? Republic or Socialist Autocracy." Extracts from his address follow:

"Where there is individual opportunity there will always be inequality. No two human beings have precisely the same ability, the same temperament, the same tastes, or the same physical power. Therefore, it is that when individuals exert themselves freely some progress more rapidly than others, some secure larger rewards than others, and some gain greater enjoyment than others. The only way in which this inequality can be prevented is to substitute tyranny for liberty and to hold all men down to that level of accomplishment which is within the reach of the weakest and the least well-endowed. This, however, is false democracy, not true democracy. Such a policy would deprive men and women of liberty in order to gain a false and artificial equality.

"Democracy has begun to decay when it becomes a combination of the mediocre and the inferior to restrain and to punish the more able and the more progressive. The equality which true democracy seeks to protect and preserve is equality of opportunity, equality of rights, equality before the law. Any form of privilege is just as undemocratic as is any form of tyranny. Any exploitation of the body or soul of one individual by another is just as undemocratic as the Prussian military autocracy. If men and women are to be free, their bodies must be free as well as their souls and their spirits. This cannot be done if they are mere tools or instrumentalities in the hands of another, whether that other be an individual monarch or a despotic majority. How to bring about the protection of the individual from exploitation and how to prevent the growth of privilege without at the same time destroying civil liberty, are the most difficult and the most persistent problems which human society has to face. Yet it is the price of progress to face them and to solve them. The one fact that is never to be forgotten is that pulling some men down raises no man up.

Word "Socialism" Loosely Used

"The most pressing question that now confronts the American people, the question that underlies and conditions all problems of reconstruction and of advance as we pass from war conditions to the normal times of peace, is whether we shall go forward by preserving those American principles and American traditions that have already served us so well, or whether we shall abandon those principles and traditions and substitute for them a state built not upon the civil liberty of the individual but upon the plenary power of organized government.

"Those whose eyes are turned toward a government of the latter type are designated in a general way as Socialists. The words Socialism and Socialist, though less than a century old, have lately become very common among us and are so loosely and so variously used as to make it difficult to think clearly regarding the ideas for which they stand. Socialism, in the large, general and vague sense of the word, means simply social reform. In that sense, every intelligent and forward-stepping man or woman is a Socialist.

"If by Socialism be meant that the individual must not live for himself alone, but must use his powers, his capacities and his gains for the benefit of his community and his fellows, then every American and every Christian is a Socialist, for these are fundamental to American life and to Christian teaching. All this, however, is social reform, not Socialism."

Assumption of Socialism.

"Socialism, in the strict and scientific sense of the word, is, however, something quite different from this.

"The assumptions of socialism are these: That all of man's efforts, both past and present, are to be interpreted and explained in terms of his desire for wealth and of the processes which lead to the satisfaction of that desire. This assumption excludes at once all moral, religious, and unselfish considerations from history and from life, and makes of man nothing but a gain-seeking animal preying upon his kind wherever he can lay hands upon him. There have been, and there doubtless are, many individuals of this type; but to suppose that the whole human race can be brought under such a description is an outrageous travesty on history, morals, and on religion. This assumption would reduce all human history to the product of blind gain-seeking forces and would exclude from it both moral effort and moral purpose. Under such a theory, no man would make any sacrifice for liberty or for love, but only for gain. All human experience contradicts so cruel and so heartless an assumption.

"That in the struggle for wealth men are divided into permanent classes—those who employ and those who labor—and that between these classes there is and should be a class struggle or class war to be carried on to the bitter end until those who labor not only conquer those who employ, but exclude them from any place in the community. This doctrine of class struggle is the savage teaching of Karl Marx, a man whose consuming passion was hate.

Trotzky and Lenine Extremists.

"It is the extreme form of the doctrines of Karl Marx which Lenine and Trotzky have been applying in Russia for a year and a half past with such terrible results.

"This doctrine of permanent economic classes and of a class struggle is the absolute contradiction of democracy. It denies a common citizenship and an equality of rights and privileges in order to set up a privileged and an exploiting class by sheer force and terrorism. Here in America we know full well that there are no permanent and conflicting economic classes, for the wage-worker of today is the employer of a few years hence. With us the son of the farmer may be the leader of a learned profession in a distant city, and he who begins self-support as signalman or telegraph operator may easily find himself in a few short years the directing head of a great railway system. Not long ago public attention was called to the fact that no fewer than 19 of the men who then directed the great transportation systems of the United States had in every case begun their careers as wage-workers in the service of one or another of the railway companies."

"Socialism also assumes that in the course of economic development, the rich are getting steadily richer and steadily fewer, while the poor are getting steadily poorer and steadily more numerous. This assumption is easily disposed of by the facts, which show that as applied to America, these two statements are absolutely false.

A Land of the Individual.

"Ours is a land in which more than twenty millions of men, women and children have just now subscribed to Liberty Bonds.

"It is a land with more than 18,000,000 dwellings occupied by about 21,000,000 families.

"It is a land in which fully 6,000,000 families own their own homes without incumbrance, while 3,000,000 own their homes subject to mortgage.

"It is a land in which more than 12,000,000 persons are depositors in mutual, stock or postal savings banks, with total deposits amounting to more than $6,500,000,000.

"It is a land in which there are nearly 6,500,000 farms having a value, including their buildings and equipment, of more than $41,000,000,000, and yielding an annual product of a value of about $8,500,000,000.

"It is a land with more than 266,000 miles of railway in operation, carrying in a year more than 1,000,000,000 individual passengers and more than 2,225,000,000 tons of freight.

"It is a land in which schools for the people are maintained at a total expenditure of nearly $650,000,000, with an attendance of more than 20,000,000 children.

"It is a land in which there are more than 3000 public libraries, having on their shelves more than 75,000,000 volumes for the instruction and inspiration of the people.

"It is a land whose total wealth is now not less than $225,000,000,000, and in which the distribution of that wealth is steadily becoming more equitable and more satisfactory under the operation of the forces and principles that have guided American life so long and so well.

Socialist Program in America.

"As yet the number of formal adherents of the Socialist party in the United States is not large, but the theories and teachings of socialism are being eagerly and systematically spread among us. Many schools and colleges and many pupils are either unconscious or willing agents in this work. In the election of 1916 the Socialist party of the United States obtained almost exactly 3.3 per cent of the total vote. It is probable that by formally adopting the international policy of the Russian Bolshevists, the Socialist party has alienated enough of its former supporters to reduce its probable vote today to less than 2 per cent of the total.

"Small as this number is, it represents organization and activity out of all proportion to its size. There should be no mistake about its program. It openly calls our Constitution dishonest. It denounces the fathers of our country as grafters, as crooks, as men of mediocre intelligence, and as attorneys of the capitalist class. In the making and building of America the Socialist can see nothing of idealism, nothing of sacrifice, nothing of high principle, nothing of love of liberty, nothing of aspiration for a finer and a freer manhood.

"The Socialist party platform of 1912 explicitly demanded not only the usual collectivist and communist policies, but also the abolition of the United States Senate and of the veto power of the President; the abolition of all Federal courts, except the United States Supreme Court and the election of all judges for short terms; the abolition of the power of the Supreme Court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of legislative acts; and a revision of the Constitution of the United States.

Plans Subdivision of Government.

"The sinister fact, never to be forgotten, about this party and its program is that they are in essence and of necessity unpatriotic and un-American. Republicans and Democrats differ sharply as to public policy, but they both accept the principles of the Constitution and endeavor to apply and improve them each in their own way. Neither Republicans nor Democrats would change the form of government under which we live. The Socialist party, on the other hand, openly declares its purpose to wreck the present form of government, to undo all the work that has been acomplished for 150 years, and to bring to an end the greatest experiment in republicanism and the greatest achievement in social and political organization the world has ever seen. Let the be no mistake about the definitene of this issue. America's existence is challenged.

What Private Capital Is.

"That which the American of today opposes to Socialist autocracy is no the crude competitive individualism of the old-fashioned economist, but co-operative individualism with moral purpose. It must not be forgotten that on the existence of private capital, which is only another name for private savings, depend the virtues of thrift, of liberality and sacrifice. The observation that liberality consists in the use which is made of property is as old as Aristotle.

"Under modern conditions private capital is much more highly and more freely co-operative than any system of Socialist organization could possibly be. The corporation, with its provision for the limited liability of the individual participant, is only a means of bringing about the co-operation of many individuals for a common cause, and is one of the greatest and most beneficent developments of the past century.

"America is worth saving, not only as a land in which men and women may be free and increasingly prosperous, but as a land and a Government under which character can be built, individual capacity given opportunity for free exercise, and co-operation on the widest scale promoted not only for private advantage but for the public good.

"The sure mark of the reactionary is unwillingness to make use of the teachings of past experience, or to read the lessons of history and apply them to the problems of today. The real reactionary, who is always an egoist, insists that his own feelings, his own desires, his own ambitions take precedence over anything that all the rest of mankind may have said or done or recorded. He wishes to start life all over again and in a Garden of Eden of his own, with a private serpent and a private apple.

"Just so soon as the American people, with their quick intelligence and alert apprehension, understand the difference between social reform and political Socialism, and the distinction between an internationalism that is false and destructive of patriotism and an internationalism that is true and full of appeal to every patriot, they will stamp political Socialism, together with all its subterfuges and half-conscious approximations and imitations, under foot as something abhorrent to our free American life. They will prefer to save America."

BURLESON WRECKING DEMOCRAT PARTY, SOME SENATORS FEE

Action Taking Over Wires Exasperates Leaders Who Hope Texan Will Resign From Cabinet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Democratic Senators are greatly exasperated at Secretary Burleson for insisting on taking over the telegraph wires and seizing the cables, for having increased the expense of usage to the public and for his troubles in bettering the service.

A large number of Democratic Senators considered the control of wire facilities by the Government as unwise and unnecessary. They were solemnly told that a military necessity existed but have not learned its nature. Several Democrats in the Senate voted for the resolution, authorizing the President to take over the wires, with the utmost reluctance.

Party and political reasons also prevent many Senators from saying exactly what they think about Burleson. They are trying to forbear, hoping that Burleson may withdraw from the Cabinet.

Democrats in the House, with few exceptions, feel bitter toward Burleson and agree that the sooner he is out of office the better it will be for President Wilson and the Democratic party.

The action of Massachusetts Democrats in cabling President Wilson that Burleson is wrecking the party and calling for his removal met with sympathy from Democrats in Washington.

VILLAGERS MOVE HOUSES TO AID ATLANTIC FLYER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 19.—Picturesque assistance is being given by the people of Harbor Grace to preparations being made there for the Handley-Page bombing airplane that soon is to leave England for Newfoundland to attempt a flight across the Atlantic. Harbor Grace is on Conception Bay, one of the largest and most beautiful arms of the sea along the coast of the island.

A desirable tract for an aerodrome on the eastern edge of the town was found, but hoses occupied part of the ground needed. Owners, however, promptly offered to move the village if necessary. As a matter of fact, three houses have been moved. Two of them are small, but one, the residence of William Welsh, on the farm of Bishop Marsh, is a dwelling of six rooms.

One hundred men have been at work on the aerodrome at Harbor Grace for a fortnight. It is not far from the yards of the Newfoundland Shipbuilding Co., which is owned by Christoffer Hannevig, New York backer of Hugo Sunstedt, the aviator. The harbor is ideal for seaplanes. It is three miles long and a mile wide, so landlocked that even the most violent blows do little more than ripple the surface. The harbor is an arm of Conception Bay where all the seaplanes of a navy might ride or take the air. It is thought here Conception Bay will be used by the American navy.

GOVERNMENT TO MAKE EFFORT TO LOWER FOOD COST

Industrial Board of Department of Commerce Takes Step to Insure Reduction in Cost of Living.

WHEAT PRICE CUT IS URGED FOR CONSUMER

Government Would Stand Loss on Guarantee—Manufacturers in Many Lines Asked Not to Profiteer.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Members of the Department of Commerce's industrial board indicated today that the board would resume its general price stabilization program without waiting for settlement of differences with the railroad administration over steel prices. It was said that an intensive effort would be made to reduce the cost of food and other necessities.

President Wilson's cablegram to Secretary Redfield was interpreted by the board members as authorizing the board to continue its activities. Redfield returned to Washington tonight from New England, and it is expected that conferences between the board and the railroad administration representatives will be resumed Monday.

Officials said today that before the controversy with the railroad administration arose the board had taken vigorous steps to bring about a reduction in the cost of living.

In this connection it was said that the board had been active in urging a clearly defined administration of the wheat appropriation bill so the people could purchase wheat products at a reasonable cost with the Government taking the loss on the difference between the guaranteed price and the normal market price.

Members of the board, it was said, already have held conferences in New York and Chicago with manufacturers of food products and it is understod that some of the manufacturers have pledged themselves not to take undue advantage of the world's demand for food to make abnormal profits.

Conferences also have been started with representatives of the textile manufacturers and assurances have been given by them that this industry is in sympathy with the policy of the board to liquidate war prices as rapidly as possible. Negotiations also were started with shoe manufacturers and members of the board expect to resume them soon.

TO DISCUSS FREE BRIDGE USES

Tenth Ward Improvement Association to Meet Tomorrow.

The Tenth War Improvement Association tomorrow will discuss a program for the general investigation of the finishing of the free bridge and suggestions for uses to which it should be put. John D. Knapp, a terminal and transfer man, has initiated the investigation program at the instance of L. F. Padberg, a director of the association, and will lead the discussion.

It will be recommended in Knapp's program that the city install a municipal street railway service on the bridge between this city and East St. Louis for a 5-cent fare; that interurban lines be allowed to enter this city over the bridge, paying the city cents per passenger for the privilege, and that St. Louis arrange for the construction of an east side loop connecting with the bridge tracks.

DETROIT, Mich., April 19.—Five persons comprising an entire family were found dead in their home on the West Side here this morning, apparently as a result of ptomaine poisoning. The dead are James Deluto, his wife, infant son, brother and aged father. Evidence that the family had partaken of contaminated food was found in the house.

After an examination of the bodies and remnants of food left in the house, Coroner Morgan Parker this noon expressed doubt that the deaths were accidental. "It looks like intentional poisoning," he said.

EACH HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY TAKES UP OTHER'S BILLS

Senate Has Passed 284 Measures and House 393—New Compensation Act—May Adjourn May 1.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 19.—Though both branches of the General Assembly during the week have worked more diligently and have made more progress than at any time during the session, there is little in the way of completed legislation in the week's record, due to the fact that it was the final period of preparation for the closing weeks when bills which have gone through the parliamentary procedure of engrossment and passage through one house, have been prepared for the final steps of enactment into law.

Beginning today, both houses are taking up for passage bills which have passed the other house. A few selected bills have passed both houses, but the large majority of those passed in either house have not been taken up for passage in the other house.

The reason for this system of leaving all of the final passage of bills until the latter part of the session was that early in the session a resolution was passed that neither house would consider for final passage any bill which passed either house later than April 18.

Decks Now Are Cleared.

As it stands, the decks are now cleared for the Legislature to devote its entire time for the remainder of the session to passing bills which already have passed one house, except for appropriations and statute revision bills which were excluded in the resolution.

Tne more important action of the week was the Governor's approval of the McCullough-Morgan "mud road" bill, committing the State to a policy of dirt roads instead of hard-surfaced roads. The Governor signed the measure over the opposition of the leading good roads advocates of the State and out of regard to political expediency evidenced by a demand of practical rural politicians who saw an opportunity to raid the road fund of $7,200,000 to be divided equally among the counties of the State, $60,000 to a county.

Much attention was given by the Legislature to salary increase measures during the week. The Governor signed a bill passed the week before increasing salaries of Circuit Judges outside of the larger cities from $3200 to $4700 a year. He also signed a measure increasing the number of Supreme Court Commissioners from four to six, meaning an additional cost of Supreme Court salaries of $15,000 a year.

Salary Increase Bills.

Salary increase bills passed in the Senate were for chaplains at the penitentiary, from $1200 to $2400; salary of the superintendent of School for the Blind in St. Louis from $2000 to $3000; State Factory Inspector from $2000 to $3000, and his deputies from $1200 to $1800; all clerks in State departments $400 to $600 a year each; Marshal of the Supreme Court from $2000 to $2500; Supreme Court stenographers from $1500 to $1800; Judges of the Court of Criminal Correction in St. Louis $1000; Hotel Inspector from $2000 to $3000.

After a long fight the Senate passed a bill calling an election the first Tuesday in September to determine whether a convention to draft a new State Constitution shall be held. The Senate has thus put the question of a new Constitution squarely up to the Republican House, which so far has opposed it on the ground that, under the present senatorial districting, a constitutional convention would be overwhelmingly Democratic.

The House Republicans have taken the position that they will not pass the Constitution bill unless the Senate first passes the redistricting bills for senatorial, congressional and representative districts, which already have passed the House. It virtually is certain that the redistricting bills will not pass the Democratic Senate, the Democrats taking the position that they have complied with their party platform pledge for a new Constitution in the passage of the bill, that the Democrats in the House are ready to vote for it if the Republican majority there will give them the opportunity, and that if the Republicans refuse to permit the bill to be voted on the responsibility to the people of the State will be on the Republicans, who also had in their platform a pledge for a new Constitution.

Sentiment Against Mortgage Bill.

The mortgage-recording tax bill, advocated by the Governor and by real estate dealers, as well as by many authorities on taxation, passed the Senate. It was defeated in the House more than a week ago, but the House will have an opportunity to vote again on it, as the Senate bill will now go to the House. Sentiment in the House has been pronounced against the measure.

One important measure affecting the assessment and taxation system of the State was passed in the House. It was Representative Farris' bill abolishing the State Tax Commission and placing its duties under the State Board of Equalization with a clerical force, under the State Auditor. The Farris bill provides for the assessment and taxation of property at full cash value, but it adds little to the present full-value law, which has been ignored by the Board of Equalization, which also could ignore the provisions of the Farris bill. However, there is a provision giving any taxpayer the right to mandamus the board to comply with the law. In addition, State and county boards of equalization are clothed with power to inquire into the question of values of property and to require the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers.

The House passed the income tax bill, increasing the tax from one-half of one per cent to one per cent. It fixed the personal exemptions at $2000 for married persons and $1000 for unmarried. The Senate has already passed a bill with the same tax as the House bill, but making the exemptions $2000 and $4000.

Other Bills That Passed.

A resolution submitting a constitutional amendment to permit St. Louis to increase its bonded indebtedness from 5 per cent to 10 per cent of its taxable wealth, also was passed by the House.

Floor Leader Dyott in a speech in the House today, urging a close application to business, said that it was not improbable that the Legislature would complete its business before May 7, which will be the expiration of the 120 days of the usual revision session. An adjournment might come about May 1, he said.

The Senate has passed 284 bills and has sent them to the House for action. The House has passed 393, which it has sent to the Senate.

Really the only business before either house is to dispose of these bills and the appropriation and revision bills.

Late Night Session.

In an unusual spurt of activity both houses were in session last night until early this morning. The House adjourning at 1:30 and the Senate at 2:30.

The House has been in session today, but the Senate adjourned until Monday afternoon. It is expected that early next week the House will take up the workmen's compensation bill, engrossed and passed in the Senate. This is a radically different bill from the one passed by the House and killed by the Senate, but it can be put through the House if the labor men will accept its provisions, which does not include competitive State insurance and which reduce the maximum of $18 for weekly payment under the bill to $15. Representatives of organized labor so far have not given out any explicit statement as to what will be their attitude on the measure.

The Senate, after killing Senator Brogan's boxing bill, passed it at 2 o'clock this morning. The action was considered a joke, however, and there is no probability that it will meet with favorable consideration in the House.

The bill abolishing the St. Louis Police Board of four members and substituting one police commissioner and two deputies was passed last night by the House.

Police Control Bill.

There is a possibility that this bill will become a law, as it comes from Democratic sources and it has passed a Republican House. The Democratic Senate is yet to act on it. It contains no home rule features, the appointment of the commissioner being placed with the Governor. It was stated on the floor that Mayor Kiel did not desire to have the appointing power.

The soft drink tax bill, increasing the tax on all soft drinks from one-half of 1 cent to 1½ cents per gallon, has passed both houses and is ready for the Governor's signature. It is the first revenue measure to be passed.

Three military bills reorganizing the National Guard, creating of the Adjutant-General and Labor Commissioner, a commission to aid returned soldiers in finding employment, and providing that a medal shall be given to each honorably discharged soldier, sailor and marine from Missouri, have passed both houses.

Senator Gardner's bill giving the Public Service Commission power to regulate the charges for electricity generated by water power outside the State passed the Senate. It is intended to regulate charges for Keokuk power, though there is considerable question of the right of the State to regulate charges for current which comes from outside the State.

New Quail Protection Bill.

The House passed a bill prohibiting the killing of quail in Missouri for two years. A similar bill was defeated in the Senate several weeks ago, but the House bill will be sent to the Senate, which will have another opportunity to vote on it.

The bill advocated by the Republican and Democratic State committees to permit political party committees to decide in each campaign year whether candidates for officer shall be chosen by primary or by convention was defeated in the Senate last night. The bill, if it had passed, would virtually have nullified the primary law and would have meant a return to the old political convention.

Other bills passed by one house or the other, were:

Resolution submitting a constitutional amendment increasing the number of Supreme Judges from seven to nine; extension of factory inspection to towns of 3000 population; providing a bounty of $20 each on wolf scalps; limiting special assessments in St. Louis to 20 per cent of assessed value of property taxed; establishing State home for blind, deaf and dumb negroes; requiring registration of veterinary surgeons; enabling acts permitting St. Louis to build and operate street railways, terminal and freight yards, and an auditorium.

Among the bills killed, was one permitting St. Louis to levy an income tax; increasing salaries of Judges of the St. Louis Court of Appeals; prohibiting the teaching of foreign languages in elementary schools; legalizing racetrack gambling.

GARDNER ISSUES THREAT TO CALL EXTRA SESSION

Tells Legislature He Must Do This or Veto Appropriation Bills Unless It Passes Revenue Measures.

MESSAGE TAKEN WITH LACK SERIOUSNESS

Governor Had Declared He Would Reject Salary Increase Bills, but He Has Signed Those Passed.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 19.—Gov. Gardner, in a special message to the House of Representatives, which has been passing virtually all the salary increase bills presented to it, today threatened to convene the Legislature in extra session after the adjournment of the regular session in May, unless revenue measures sufficient to meet the State's needs and the additional salaries should be passed.

"I know of no other manner whereby the necessary revenue can be provided for, except to convene your body in extraordinary session, or exercise the veto power of my office to diminish the appropriation bills passed by the present session, many of which are badly needed in their entirety to meet the needs of our State institutions," the Governor said.

Failed to Keep Previous Threats.

Because of previous threats by the Governor which he neglected to carry out, his message is not taken as seriously by the members of the House as it probably otherwise would be. He has threatened several times to veto all salary increases unless additional revenue were provided, but, while there has been no new source of revenue created, the Governor has not hesitated to sign the salary bills. One, increasing the salaries of Circuit Judges outside the larger cities, adds $57,000 to State expenditures, and another, creating two additional Supreme Court Commissioners, adds $17,500.

In his message, the Governor called particular attention to the bill, passed by the Senate and pending in the House, calling a constitutional convention election, and to the workmen's compensation bill. He told the Legislature that if employers and employes were not able to agree upon a bill, it was their duty as Legislators to act as arbitors and enact a compensation law fair to all.

Governor's Message.

The Governor's message follows:

"I am compelled at this time to again call your attention to the important fact that your session is drawing near a close and that insufficient provision has been made to provide revenue to meet the financial deficit of the State for the bienniel period of 1919-20, caused by loss of revenue growing out of the enactment of national prohibition.

"In my previous message to your honorable body on Jan. 10, March 4 and April 1, 1919, I particularly called your attention to the fact it was necessary to keep all appropriations within the estimated revenues of the State, and as well where new offices or increased salaries to present officers are enacted by your body, that it was imperative that you provide at the same time new sources of revenue to meet these requirements.

"I must speak frankly concerning this matter and say that any more bills sent to my office, whereby new salaries are created or present salaries are increased, will be vetoed by me unless ample provision for new revenue is created to meet the new expenditures.

"Candor also constrains me to suggest to you that all additional salary bills should be withheld by you until such time as the present deplorable taxation proposition of our state reaches a definite solution. Furthermore, I feel constrained to state that many of these salary expenditures now pending before your body are of an excessive nature.

Anxious to Co-operate.

"In conjunction with the foregoing statement I desire to say that I am ready and anxious to co-operate with the General Assembly and the State Board of Equalization to the end that a meritorious solution can be had relative to adjusting general property values and providing sufficient revenues to meet the legal demands of our State.

"In the event your body adjourns without making legal provision to finance the necessary expenses of the various institutions and general activities of our State for the year 1919-20, I am compelled to say that I know of no other manner whereby the necessary revenue can be provided for, except to convene your body in extraordinary session, or exercise the veto power of my office to diminish the appropriation bills passed by the present session, many of which are badly needed in their entirety to meet the needs of your State institutions.

Urges Action on Compensation.

"I take this occasion to suggest to you that the people of our State are expecting you to enact a workman's compensation law and to provide for our electorate to vote upon a new State Consitution; and there are other very important measures pending before you, such as children's code, protection of the sheep industry, improvement of agricultural conditions and particularly the measures intended to improve the public schools as revealed by the survey communication to you in my former message.

"The time has arrived for both employer and employe to agree upon a just workman's compensation law, and if they will not agree thereupon, it is your duty to exercise your great prerogative as the law-making branch of our State Government and act as arbiters of the subject matter by enacting such a workman's compensation law as appeals to you to be fair to all parties interested.

"Certainly the present day need of our State for such a salutary law is too important to permit it to die in your body by inaction."

JOINT FUNERAL SERVICE FOR COUPLE FOLLOWS SUIT THREAT

Body of Edward Brinkschulte to Be Interred in County and That of Wife in Illinois.

A joint funeral service for Edward Brinkschulte, 29 years old, and his wife Frances, 24, whom he shot and killed Thursday at 4615 McMillan avenue, and then ended his own life by drinking carbolic acid, will be held today at 3 p. m. from undertaking parlors at 5766 Easton avenue. The man's body will be interred at St. Peter's Cemetery, on the Lucas and Hunt roads, St. Louis County, and Mrs. Brinkschulte's body will be taken tomorrow to Mascoutah, Ill., her former home, for burial.

This arrangement was made after a controversy between Mrs. Lena Brinkschulte, 6448 Myrtle avenue, mother of the dead man, and his wife's sisters, Miss Bertha Nonguesser and Mrs. John Johnson of New Memphis, Ill., in which Mrs. Brinkschulte claimed the right to have the bodies buried beside each other at St. Peter's Cemetery. The mother-in-law did not yield until Joseph C. McAtee, an attorney, employed by the sisters threatened to file replevin suit for the body of Mrs. Brinkschulte.

Last Wednesday, the day before Brinkschulte killed his wife and then himself, at her home, he wrote a pleading letter to her asking for a reconciliation for the sake of their 5-year-old daughter Dorothy, according to his mother, and when the wife rejected the offer to re-establish their home, Brinkschulte did the shooting.

Mrs. Brinkschulte, the mother, said her son was downcast when his wife, who had brought suit for divorce, refused to be reconciled.

Charles Sampson, 42 years old, a bill poster of 2800 Benton street, died at the city hospital yesterday from injuries suffered April 12, when a Lee car struck a motor truck on which he was riding, at Sixth and Biddle streets. Sampson was thrown to the street. His feet were crushed and later were amputated. James B. Reynolds, the motorman, gave bond, and is held for the Coroner. Joseph Thompson, a negro, of 3134 Morgan street, driver of the truck, said the motorman stopped his car as he started across the tracks, but started up again. Reynolds denied this, declaring he had only slowed up.

Sampson's death is the twenty-fouth automobile fatality this year, as compared with 32 deaths in a like period last year.

GOLDEN JUBILEE HONOR FOR FATHER BRENNAN

Catholic Clergy From Many Quarters to Join in Tribute to Astronomer Priest.

Catholic clergy from all parts of the United States will assemble in St. Louis on May 7 to celebrate the golden jubilee of the Rev. Martin J. Brennan, well-known priest and astronomer, who on that date will have been a member of the priesthood for 50 years. Extensive plans have been laid for the celebration.

Father Brennan has been pastor of the Church of SS. Mary and Joseph at Carondelet the last ten years. Owing to limited space in this church and the heavy demand for seats, it has been decided to hold the Pontifical Mass, which will be sung at 10 a. m. on the 7th, in the chapel of the Sisters of St. Joseph in Carondelet, which has a seating capacity of more than 1600. The Church of SS. Mary and Joseph and the convent of the Sisters of St. Joseph will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. It is estimated that more than 200 priests will attend.

Liberal Purse Being Raised.

Father Brennan's parishioners have been authorized to take charge of arrangements for the jubilee. The finance committee of which Taylor Stith of 6334 Taylor avenue, is chairman, is raising a substantial purse, which will be presented to Father Brennan by Harry Scullin, president of the Scullin Steel Co., who is vice chairman of the finance committee.

All day on May 7 Father Brennan will be entertained by high church dignitaries and men of science, and the evening of the following day a banquet will be tendered him by his friends at the Century Boat Club, 5500 South Broadway. Edward W. Foristel will be the toastmaster, and Archbishop Glennon will respond to the toast, "Our Jubilarian." Other toasts will be, "Our Country," "Our Pastor," and "Our City." Mayor Kiel and a number of city and State officials will be present.

At the Pontifical High Mass Father Brennan will be the celebrant, Mgr. Tallon will preach the sermon. After the mass there will be a reception and banquet for the visiting clergy at St. Joseph's Academy. At 3 p. m. the children of the school of SS. Mary and Joseph will present Father Brennan with a token of their esteem at exercises in their school hall.

General Committee in Charge.

The general committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Edward F. Judge, chairman; Taylor Stith, vice chairman; Charles F. Conley, secretary; Fred W. Schwaneck, treasurer; Edward W. Foristel, Harry M. Dryer, James M. Shea, James E. Murphy, John F. Roach, the Rev. M. J. Clarke and the Rev. George P. Keating.

Father Brennan was born in Ireland, and was brought to St. Louis as an infant. He was educated in the schools of St. Louis, and was graduated from Christian Brothers' College in 1869 with the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and Doctor of Science. A few years after the Civil War he was assigned to the Old Cathedral as an assistant to the pastor. His first pastorate was at the Church of St. Thomas of Aquin, and he was transferred thence to the pastorate of St. Lawrence O'Toole's, at Fourteenth and O'Fallon streets. He is credited with having done very effective work in this parish. In 1910 he was transferred to the Church of SS. Mary and Joseph.

Father Brennan has an international reputation as an astronomer. He has been an instructor of astronomy for the last 27 years at Kenrick Seminary, where he is dean of the faculty.

BREWERS MAY GET STAMPS FOR 2 3-4 PER CENT BEER

Department of Justice Tells Revenue Bureau Sale Will Not Prejudice Government's Case.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The New York brewers who are trying to force a decision from the Federal Government on just what is an intoxicating beverage will get stamps for their beer with an alcoholic content of 2¾ per cent if the Bureau of Internal Revenue follows the advice of the Department of Justice.

The department, it is said, decided that the revenue agents can sell the brewers the required stamps at the rate of $6 per barrel for their new product without prejudicing the case of the Government when the controversy is finally threshed out in court. The stamps are furnished with the understanding that they in no way shall be considered a license to violate the law by making the 2¾ per cent beer.

No arrests because of the alleged violations by the brewers who are turning out the 2¾ per cent beer are contemplated until after the hearing in New York Wednesday on a suit brought by a brewing company, which seeks to enjoin the agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Department of Justice from enforcing penalties. It is believed that test cases will be made of the 2¾ per cent beer being sold by the New York breweries.

It's a little harder to get help just now, but Post-Dispatch Wants are bringing applicants.

BILL TO REORGANIZE POLICE BOARD WITH ONE COMMISSIONER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 19.—Action of the House late last night in passing a bill for a reorganization of the St. Louis Police Department with one Police Commissioner at $8000 a year and two deputies at $5000 and $4000 makes possible the enactment of the bill into law, though there has been nothing to indicate what will be the attitude of St. Louis Senators toward it.

The bill met with almost unanimous approval of the House where it was supported by leaders among both Republicans and Democrats. It was stated in the House that the Kiel administration favored the bill, and that Mayor Kiel did not want the power of appointing the Police Commissioners placed in his hands.

As the bill provides for appointment of the commissioners by the Governor, it has a better chance of getting through the Senate, which is Democratic, and which would insist on retaining control of the Police Department for the Democratic State administration.

NEGRO SNEAK THIEF ARRESTED IN ASHPIT

Had Entered Lindell Boulevard Home Few Hours After Being Released From Workhouse.

Wayman Harris, 19 years old, a negro, was released from the workhouse at the end of a two-months' "stretch" on a larceny charge at noon yesterday, and six hours later was again in custody at the Newstead Avenue Police Station, having been arrested at 5:30 p. m. as he was trying to cover himself with ashes in an ashpit in the rear of 4440 Lindell boulevard.

Shortly after 5 o'clock Harris was seen in the home of Mrs. Charles M. Barnett, 4491 West Pine boulevard, by her small son, Harwood, who met the negro at the head of the stairs. The boy told his aunt, Miss Cary Rosenfield, who is staying with the Barnetts, and Miss Rosenfield and Mrs. Barnett, who had been on the front porch, telephoned the police. Sergt. Peter McGauly and Lieut. McKenna went to the house and took up the negro's trail. McKenna saw Harris running down the alley between West Pine and Lindell boulevards and fired a shot at him before he hid in the ashpit.

Miss Rosenfield said she was in her room when she heard some one coming upstairs. She thought it was the maid and called, receiving no answer, but did not investigate. The negro was in Barnett's bedroom for about 10 minutes, but took nothing.

Second Negro on Guard.

Both Mrs. Barnett and Miss Rosenfield saw another negro loitering in front of their home about the same time. He disappeared during the excitement and the police found no trace of him. He was thought to have been posted as a "lookout."

While waiting for the police Mrs. Barnett started an investigation on her own account and accosted Harris when he was some distance from her home. She asked him if he was the man who had been in her house and he said he had not, but fled.

Harris was tried some time ago on a burglary charge, according to police records, but pleaded guilty to larceny and received a two-month workhouse sentence, which was up at noon yesterday.

According to the police report, Harris also tried to enter the home of Mrs. Wells H. Blodgett, 4449 West Pine boulevard, shortly before being seen at the Barnett home. Mrs. Blodgett, it is said, reported to the police that her home was ransacked during her absence, but she denied having done so when questioned by a Post-Dispatch reporter last night.

Mrs. Blodgett said that Harris had attempted to enter the home of K. K. Culver, 4459 West Pine boulevard, and Mrs. Culver verified this. Mrs. Culver said that she had answered a front door bell ring and that meanwhile Harris was caught by the cook while he was trying to come in at the rear. One of the officers brought Harris to the Culver residence, where he was identified.

Two men entered and held up the poultry shop of Chris Grote, 1107 North Eighth street, at 9 o'clock last night, and 20 minutes later detectives attached to the Carr street police district had men in custody whom the victims identified as the robbers.

Grote, his son-in-law, William Kline, his wife and Joseph Giardina, 1023 North Ninth street, were in the store when all were commanded to "stick 'em up." One of the robbers held a gun and another went into the pockets of Kline and took $1.50. Mrs. Kline was not passive, however, instead of throwing up her hands she began to scream, and did it so loudly that the robbers went no farther than her husband. They turned and ran, although there was $50 in Grote's cash drawer.

At 9:20 Detectives Aylward, Gerlach, Schuette and Roach saw three men at Eleventh and O'Fallon streets. Before they had a chance to run the detectives "fanned" them for guns. Two proved to be armed. They were Joseph Peskie, 33 years old, 1439 North Tenth street, and Walter Rockowski, 23, 1211 North Twelfth street. The third, Steve Sierawski, 24, 1425 North Twelfth street, with Peskie, were indentified by the Klines and Giardina as the two who held up Grote's shop. The three were held for the circuit attorney.

TOO MUCH HURRYING CAUSES DELAY IN WEDDING CEREMONY

Chauffeur Driving Couple to Belleville Parsonage Speeds Up by Request and Is Arrested.

Miss Sadie Rowley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rowley of Belleville and Charles D. Roby of Forsyth, Ill., were delayed in reaching the Methodist parsonage at Belleville to be married yesterday afternoon, as a result of hurrying too much.

As they were riding along the Rock road in a hired limousine driven by Roy Jung, Roby looked at his watch and told the chauffeur to put on a little more speed, as he feared they would not be able to fill their appointment with the preacher at the time agreed on. A few moments later a motor cycle policeman overtook and piloted them to the Central Police Station, where he reported Jung had been driving 35 miles an hour.

After a brief delay Jung was allowed to drive the bridal couple to the parsonage upon his promise to return to the police station after the wedding. He kept his promise and was fined $5 and costs.

CONCEALED WEAPON CHARGE AGAINST CONSTABLE'S SLAYER

John W. Warshaw Explains Circumstances of Carrying Revolver, Contrary to His Custom.

John W. Warshaw, 28 years old, 6335 Ridge avenue, who Friday night shot and killed Constable Otto L. Runde, 40, 1282 Sutter avenue, St. Louis County, mistaking him for a robber, was arrested yesterday afternoon, following a verdict of accident by a Coroner's jury, on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. He was released on a $1000 bond for his appearance before Justice Stecker Tuesday.

Warshaw explained how he happened to be carrying a revolver, contrary to his custom, he said. His father, he said, had some formula for converting the polish on a revolver to a dull finish. He left the revolver with his father about two weeks ago, but his father had lost the formula. Each night, he said, as he carried his father's supper to him, his father urged him to take the revolver home, and Friday night he put it in his pocket for that purpose.

He said that as he approached Runde and his companion, they parted, one taking the outside and the other the inside of the sidewalk. Warshaw said he heard one say, "Watch him," and thinking of robbery, he drew the revolver and began firing.

JURY DELIBERATING FATE OF "BUD" KELLY FOR MURDER

Insanity Plea Tendered—State Uses Companion as Witness and Asks for Penitentiary Sentence.

A jury in the case of Martin Thomas (Bud) Kelly, 24 years old, of 3028 Elliot avenue, charged with murder in the first degree began deliberating at 10 o'clock last night but had not reached a verdict at midnight. Kelly is charged with the killing of William G. Ambs, a discharged soldier of 1300 South Twelfth street, in a taxicab on December 15, last. Judge Taylor then left his chambers, telling the deputy sheriffs he would open court at 10 a. m. today to receive the jury's verdict.

Kelly's defense was a plea of insanity. His attorneys placed on the witness stand members of the Kelly family and physicians to substanitate their contention that he is a sufferer from dementia praecox.

William (Nobby) Woods, who was jointly charged with murder with Kelly, was used as a State witness, the charge against him being dismissed for that purpose.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Lacey asked a penitentiary sentence for Kelly, telling the jury that if it developed that he was a fit subject for a sanitarium he could be transferred there.

BRYAN SUGGESTS CERTAIN CHANGES FOR THE LEAGUE

Would Allow Nations Needing Colonies Right to Present Their Claims.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 19.—William Jennings Bryan, in an address here tonight on the league of nations said it provided for three things which constitute an advantage the importance of which can scarcely be estimated, deliberation before war, reduction of armaments, abolition of secret treaties.

He suggested certain amendments:

"1. The basis of representation is not fair to the United States.

"2. The terms of admission to nations that may desire to join hereafter are not fair. Under no circumstances should the consent of more than a majority be required for the admission of any qualifying nation.

"Another matter that should be more clear is that each nation has the right to decide for itself whether it will undertake the things advised by the General Council. This nation cannot afford to allow a council in which it has so small a voice to carry it into war against its will. The constitution would seem to imply the right of the council to compel the declaration of an economic boycott by the members of the league. Economic boycott is likely to develop into a war and an economic boycott may be pecuniarily advantageous to the nations that want to declare it.

"If the league of nations is to substitute reason for war, it must be able to deal with claims that are made for the wanted places of the earth. A nation feeling a need for more territory should be able to go before the league and present its claims, and point out the territory which it can use to advantage. The council should advise upon it, and the force of public opinion should be used to secure such adjustment of equities as would afford a peaceable means of securing needed territory."

CITATION FOR GEN. WINTER, WHO FORMERLY LIVED HERE

BUSCH TERMINALS TO USE ELECTRIC ENGINES

Two of Locomotives Already Received — Improvement to Cost $500,000.

The entire Manufacturers' Railway system of 24 miles is being electrically equipped, and motive power will be changed from steam to electricity within the next three weeks, the company announced yesterday. Two of the six electric locomotives ordered have been received and tested.

Manufacturers' Railway is the first terminal railway west of New York to be electrically equipped. The change in motive power was decided upon two years ago when plans were completed for the construction of 13 railway tracks in the basement of the new Bevo Building at Broadway and Pestalozzi street. As it was impractical to operate steam locomotives in this building, August A. Busch decided to electrify the entire system.

The electric locomotives are smaller than steam locomotives, but have great tractive power. They weigh 83 tons each, and are capable of pulling a 1600-ton train—40 loaded cars—at a speed of 15 miles an hour. They are practically noiseless.

The cost of the change will be $500,000, $200,000 for the installation of poles, trolleys, etc., and $300,000 for the six locomotives. Power will be procured from the generating system at Keokuk dam. Manufacturers' Railway handles 60,000 cars a year.

HEAD OF PRINTING COMPANY AND WIFE HIT BY AUTO TRUCK

Driver Who Failed to Stop Arrested and Charged With Felonious Wounding—Two Severely Hurt.

Henry J. Reuter, 54 years old, of 5927 Kingsbury boulevard, the president of the H. J. Reuter Printing Co., and his wife, Helen, 54, were seriously injured at 4:15 yesterday afternoon when they were run down by an automobile truck after they had alighted from a westbound Olive car at Delmar and Laurel avenues. The driver of the truck did not stop and later was taken in custody at Creve Coeur, Mo.

Reuter and his wife were taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where it was said he was suffering from a fractured shoulder and internal injuries. His wife suffered cuts about the body and lower limbs.

The truck which ran them down was following the car in a parallel line, but did not heed the traffic rule about passing a car discharging passengers. Bystanders, who saw the vehicle driving away, caught the license number, through which the driver was traced to St. Louis County.

Deputy Sheriff Conrey went to the home of Andrew Moeller, 50, a truck gardener. He found Moeller in bed and interrogated him about the accident. Moeller admitted that he knocked someone down, but was surprised to find he had injured two. He said he was forced to approach the car because of an automobile following him, which he thought would strike his machine if he stopped. He said he thought he had not injured anyone seriously. Moeller was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Charles Beck, 2044 Russell avenue. He was charged with felonious wounding and was released on bond given to await the result of the injuries of the Reuters.

KIEL TO VOTE FOR $300,000 DOCK FUND

Will Urge Budget Provision on Advice That Completed Units Will Soon Be Inadequate.

Following a statement to him by M. J. Sanders, Federal manager of the Mississippi-Warrior Waterways, that the two completed units of the municipal docks at North Market street would shortly be inadequate to handle the increased tonnage offered for shipment upon the Mississippi River, Mayor Kiel yesterday said that, as a memer of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, he would vote for including $300,000 in the municipal budget for the completion of the three remaining units planned for the dock. If that is done the dock will be 900 feet long with five warehouses abutting it.

A heavy increase of freight is expected for the following reasons:

1. The Upper Mississippi valley is beginning to understand that it can obtain the advantage of cheap water transportation to the seaboard by shipping by rail to St. Louis for consignment here to the barge line.

2. Rail and river rates from St. Louis to Texas points and later to points in southeastern states, are expected soon. They will result in a greater volume of freight from St. Louis manufacturers and jobbers.

It also is pointed out that this volume of freight must accrue when the new fleet for the river is put in operation, or the operation will be a failure. The new fleet wil have an annual capacity of at least 1,000,000 tons or five times the capacity of the present temporary equipment.

A. W. Mackie, manager of the Mississippi River section of the Waterways, has said that the first of 40 new 2000-ton barges may be expected to arrive by July 1, and that the first of six 1800-horse power towboats will be in commission probably in November.

Three hundred and sixty feet of dock now are being operated at North Market street. Last week the tonnage handled was 2000. The tonnage necessary to supply the new fleet per week will be at least five times that amount.

Mayor Kiel yesterday visited the dock in company with Sanders, Mackie, James E. Smith, president of the Mississippi Valley Waterways Association; Director of Public Utilities Hooke and C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city, who designed the docks.

"KILL THE UMPIRE" IN GERMAN

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

COBLENZ, April 18.—The German 117th Infantry, located in Hachenburg, a village in the neutral zone adjoining the American area, has organized a baseball team and is learning the American national game. The interest of the German army in outdoor athletics was aroused by the example of the Wisconsin brigade in the Thirty-second Division, which occupies that portion of the area. Though the antifraternization orders prevent the detailing of Americans to coach the German nines, they obtained a book of rules which they translated into German. They are learning the fine points of the game by watching our teams play. One German soldier explained to Capt. Neiderpruhn of Detroit, a division intelligence officer, that three hours daily were required for athletic games for the first time as a part of the German army drill and that baseball was the most popular sport. SANDS ESTATE IN MISSOURI

The estate of George L. Sands of St. Louis, who died Nov. 21, will not have to be administered in Madison County, according to a decision of the Illinois Appellate Court, reached yesterday. Sands bought a share in an east side coal mine just before the heavy war business, and while it cost him but $50,000, he received more than that in dividends the first year and the property is now worth about $200,000.

The Mercantile Trust Co. of St. Louis, as executor, began proceedings to settle the estate in Missouri. On the discovery of Sands' interest in the Illinois property Public Administrator Sanders asked for letters. The Court held that Sands was never a resident of Illinois.

BURLESON AID IS IN BOSTON TO END STRIKE

12,000 Electrical Workers Are Out in Sympathy With 8000 Telephone Girls.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, April 19.—Assistant Postmaster-General Koons arrived in this city today, and it is said he is vested with full power to end the strike of 8000 phone operators, who have paralyzed business and created inconveniences to thousands of subscribers of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., and the Providence Telephone Co., its subsidiary.

Following the strike of the girls, a meeting of the General Council of Electrical Workers was held, and a sympathetic strike was ordered. As a result 12,000 of these employes have joined with the operators. The electrical works have a grievance of some months' standing, and believe that they can force Postmaster-General Burleson's hand at this time.

Mayor Peters, at the instance of leading business interests of Boston and New England, rushed to Washington Thursday night, and was in conference with Burleson. It is believed that he impressed upon him the importance of settling the strike in view of the fact that the Victory Loan drive opens on Monday, and undoubtedly would suffer severely if the strike was allowed to continue indefinitely. It is generally conceded that some concessions will be made to the strikers. They are organized practically 100 per cent.

What Operators Want.

Miss Julia S. O'Connor, president of the operators' union, declares that the grievance of the operators has been tossed back and forth between Burleson and General Manager Driver of the telephone company, and that no satisfaction was promised them. This led to the strike vote. The young women are asking for a minimum wage of $22 a week after four years of service. They are now receiving $16 a week after four years of service. The operators are on a sliding wage scale up to four years' service point, and their demands call for general increases all along the line.

The trouble seems to have been due to a question of authority. General Manager Driver claims not to have any and Burleson has told the strikers' committee that he can do nothing for them until Driver has passed on their demands and made recommendations.

In Boston there has been absolutely no service by telephone since the strike was declared. In suburban towns and cities a form of emergency service for calling the police, firemen or physicians has been maintained. In Portland, Me., there has been some service with substitute operators and strikebreakers and the same is true in some parts of Vermont and New Hampshire. Otherwise the service is tied up completely.

Recently students of Massachusetts Institute of Technology have been enlisted in the service of the company and they have had a hard time. They have been heckled by the girls who do picket duty and in many cases their male sympathizers have attacked the substitute workers and several have been sent to hospitals.

Society Women as Operators.

Society women in several communities have entered the service of the company for short periods, sometimes under the guise of Red Cross workers, to maintain emergency service. At a meeting of the telephone workers in this city with practically every one of the striking girls present, Miss O'Connor, the president, roundly condemned such proceedings. She asked for a show of hands as to how many present had not contributed to the Red Cross, and not a hand was raised. As a result overtures were made to the officials of the Red Cross for this section and, in consequence, advertisements were published disavowing the action of these Red Cross workers in taking the strikers' places.

Many rural communities in New England have relied upon the telephone to notify the fire and police departments in case of serious accident and fires. Without the service these places have been endangered but fortunately nothing of an alarming nature has occurred.

The hardest hit by the strike are the business men and they have appealed to every possible agency to assist in ending the strike. Orders have been curtailed and all business has been carried on with great difficulty. In the banking district and in the stock exchange the force of the strike was felt from the very first. Some of these firms have been able to maintain communication with New York because they have leased wires and some of these firms have come to the rescue of their patrons who wanted to communicate with distant places by placing their telephones at their disposal.

But while the business man has been hard hit, the physicians and those with sickness in their homes have come to look upon the strike almost as a disaster.

Head of Telegraphers' Union Urged to Hasten Strike Poll.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 19.—S. J. Konenkamp, international president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, was urged to hasten the poll now being taken on a nationwide strike vote, in order that effective aid might be given immediately to striking telephone workers in New England, in a resolution adopted today by the Executive Committee of District Council No. 16. The strike contemplated by telegraphers is intended, it is said, as a protest against treatment the workers have received from Postmaster-General Burleson. The resolution protested against the date the strike vote shall be recorded being deferred from April 22 to May 5.

BIG KANSAS CITY SHOE FIRM TO LOCATE HERE

Company Will Make Its Headquarters at 17th Street and Washington Avenue July 1.

The Central Shoe Co. of Kansas City will become a St. Louis organization on July 1 and will occupy the new nine-story building on the northeast corner of Seventeenth and Washington avenues, containing nearly 200,000 square feet of space.

This building was designed expressly for the Central Shoe Co., and is of reinforced concrete construction and is faced with pressed brick, trimmed with sandstone, making it one of the most attractive modern structures in the wholesale district.

St. Louis is generally recognized as the world's greatest shoe market and the coming to St. Louis of the Central Shoe Co. is undoubtedly the beginning of a still greater concentration of shoe manufacturing in this city.

Built Substantial Business.

The Central Shoe Co. has built up a very substantial business during the several years past, but the management has felt for some time that it had practically reached its limit of development from Kansas City as a headquarters.

The majority of the Central's shoe factories are in St. Louis or in the immediate neighborhood of it, and this fact tends to make St. Louis the logical headquarters from the standpoint of efficient service to dealers in all markets.

St. Louis is also the geographical center of the most productive retail shoe market and the superior shipping facilities afforded offer a real advantage both to the manufacturers and the rtailer as well.

Logical Shoe Center Here.

General Manager T. P. Moody is enthusiastic on the subject of St. Louis as the logical center for the shoe industry of America, and has already outlined plans for largely increased activities for the Central organization in its new home, with the idea of more intensely covering market in all sections of the co try.

It will only take a few more ditions to the Washington av shoe houses to make this street well known to the public generally the center of the shoe district Wall street is known far and w as the center of the financial dis of America.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH REVIEW'S OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STOCK MARKET VALUES ARE 2 TO 10 POINTS HIGHER ON THE WEEK

Broad and Active Trading Marks Wall Street Dealings—German Currency at a Discount of 70 Per Cent.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The Evening Post, in its weekly financial review, says:

"This week's more or less tentative announcement of the terms of indemnity which the Allies' Commission has settled on for Germany had one immediate response. On the basis of normal values, 59¼ Dutch florins will buy 100 German marks. When Germany asked for an armistice last October, 33 florins would suffice. A week ago 20½ would make the purchase. At the present week's close, only 18⅜ are required. Swiss and Scandinavian exchange on Germany has moved similarly; it is possible now to say that German currency sells at 70 per cent discount on those markets, which still trade in it.

"From the first, there have been three separate reasons for the heavy war-time depreciation. Gold payments, whether on the paper currency or on bills of exchange, had been stopped by law and the paper currency was being rapidly expanded. This made a foreign merchant reluctant to buy a draft on Berlin, except at a steadily increasing discount. But Germany's foreign trade had also disappeared, and when her Government occasionally managed to deal with nearby neutral countries, it was chiefly to get food or merchandise, which originated in enemy countries, and her purchases usually far exceeded her sales.

"These were two well-known explanations. But the simple fact of war, and the possibility, in view of Germany's conduct in the war, of a huge indemnity against her when the war was over, had a hand in the market from the start.

Germany's Appeal for Terms.

"This influence naturally grew more powerful with the German Government's repeated appeals to the allies to name their terms, which every experienced observer rightly interpreted as meaning that it foresaw its own defeat. That is undoubtedly the paramount influence on the German exchanges at this moment.

"The bid for Russian paper rubles on the Wall Street curb, would indicate appreciation of the Petrograd exchange, only slightly heavier than that of the German mark. But Russia has no indemnity to pay.

"The recent rapid fall of German exchange clearly indicates increasing doubt in those neutral markets as to what conditions will be created by her payment of the indemnity. In many respects the allies' terms, as cabled this week from Paris, are merciful. There is to be no 'paying the whole cost of war.' Large as the stated total of $23,800,000,000 is, it cannot surprise intelligent Germans who have known what their country's armies had been doing with the cities, factories, coal fields and people of Belgium and Northern France; what its Zeppelins had achieved in the enemy's unfortified cities, and what its submarines had to their own account on the ocean.

"Germany is asked to pay only one-fifth of this just requisition in the next two years, payment for the rest being spread over 30 years, and the allies' Governments are to take her bonds in payment—apparently finding the cash themselves to reimburse the victims of the barbarian fleet and army.

"The talk that the cables bring of counter claims for 'damages done by the entente troops to Germany,' or for 'delay in making peace, whereby Bolshevist uprisings were made possible,' is mere pretense. Her delegates will protest, argue, implore, and then sign.

Handicap on Germany.

"But what will be the longer economic consequences, as regards this outflow of tributary capital from Germany for a generation to come? The handicap on Germany will be immense, and not less so because of her Government's refusal to impose heavy war taxes during war time. Her people will be poorer for a good many decades, because of the exploits of her statesmen and soldiers.

"Nevertheless, two facts must be remembered. First, these are days of huge accumulation and huge transfer of capital; if we may judge by war experiences, a billion dollars means no more to the economic results of a prosperous nation than a hundred million meant, half a century ago. But second, the power of production and saving has been equally increased, and everyone knows how soon France, by accepting the inevitable and going to work with industry and economy, got on her feet again in the economic world, after 1871.

"Stocks were 2 to 10 points higher for the week. Yesterday's market was strong."

CORN FUTURES RECORD WIDE GAINS FOR WEEK

Prices Are Influenced by Immense Shipments of Food to Europe; Oats Also Are Very Strong.

Immense shipments of foodstuffs to Europe resulted last week in record-breaking high prices for provisions and lifted corn values here to the topmost level of the season. Compared with a week ago, the corn market at the close yesterday was 3¼c to 6c up. Oats showed an advance of 2½c to 5½c.

Food Administration officials were quoted as saying that life and order in Europe depended on the speedy outflow of supplies from this side of the Atlantic, and that a comprehensive survey indicated world demand for wheat would absorb virtually the entire surplus from the 1919 harvest in the United States, without impairing much, if at all, the billion-dollar fund provided by Congress.

Under these circumstances bullish sentiment pervaded the corn market and was emphasized by prolonged wet weather and by reports of a scarcity of cars. Assertions that in the autumn Europe would be threatened with a deluge instead of a dearth of supplies failed to make any lasting impression. Yesterday's market was the highest of the week.

Oats displayed independent strength on account of serious delays to seeding. Top prices of the week recorded yesterday.

Despite the strength in the corn market there are many traders who believe that the advance is speculative inflation, and largely influenced by high hog prices, resulting from packers being able to find markets abroad for enormous amounts of their product. Bears assert that this demand will be filled up shortly, and that then, with large stocks of grain in this country, Australia and Argentina, and with the growing season bringing more forcibly before the trade the enormous home wheat crop, that buyers of coarse grain will see their markets fade rapidly.

Sellers point out that there are 77,000,000 bushels of wheat in the American visible supply, against 3,000,000 bushels at this time last year, while in Canada the supply is 43,347,000 bushels against 8,115,000 bushels a year ago. They claim that wheat flour stocks in the United States are 60 per cent above last year, and that supplies of other substitutes are much in excess of a year ago. Large stocks of oats, compared with last year, are also a point made by the sellers, for domestic demands as well as export takings are materially under those of war times.

Bulls, however, declare that corn supplies are practically exhausted, and that shipping conditions mitigate against exports of other countries other than the United States, on a large scale. Exports of wheat and flour last week are said to be close to a record, and buyers expect a big decrease in the visible supply of wheat in the figures issued tomorrow. The fact that Russia is to be fed by the allies has strengthened the position of the bulls, as food conditions are said to be acute in that country.

SHARPLY HIGHER SWING TO CHICAGO CORN MARKET

Decreasing Wheat Supplies Are Used by Traders to Advance Coarse Grain; Oats Also Strong.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Vanishing of wheat supplies lifted the corn market today to new high price records for the season. Closing quotations were nervous, at 1½c to 2½c net advanced, with May $1.61 and July $1.55¼ to $1.55½. Oats gained 1c to 1⅝c. The finish in provisions ranged from 5c decline to a rise of 25c.

Urgency of world need of foodstuffs appeared to monopolize the attention of corn traders. Withdrawal of the Food Administration from the market as a seller of wheat after having disposed of nearly all of the Government surplus in Chicago and Milwaukee, was taken as evidence that the scarcity had become more acute, especially as reports were current that a large amount of wheat and other grain would be shipped without delay, south as well as east, for export.

Besides, receipts of corn here were relatively small, and the forecast was for rains which would tend further to curtail the movement from the farms and to injure the quality of reserves.

Oats, like corn, ascended to the highest prices yet this season. Shipments for the week were largely in excess of the receipts.

Provisions averaged higher with grain and hogs. At first, however, the market was weak, owing to absence of support.

Hay Market.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Graham & Martin Grain Co., Merchants' Exchange.

Receipts of hay during the past week have been moderate in amount, barely enough arriving to supply local requirements. Shipping demand continues excellent. Everything offered is being absorbed readily at full prices. Quote timothy: No. 1 at $38@39; standard, $36@37; No. 2, $34@35; headed, $33@34; threshed, $26@27.

HOGS—Market extremely slow and 10c to 15c lower than the best time Friday; one load sold to a city butcher at $20.70, which is no criterion upon which to judge the market, as the practical top was $20.60. Only one packer in the trade, and the demand was therefore very limited for all classes of hogs. Good to choice hogs, 200 lbs. up, $20.30 to the top, while the bulk of the hogs suitable for packers and city butchers ranged from $20 to $20.40, weighing 170 lbs. up. Best rough sows, $19. Wool Market.

Wool dealers seem disposed to buy new bright wools on the basis of 40c for clear (small lots have been bought at that within past day or so). Whether or not larger lots will bring more or what prices may be expected remains to be determined—at present, market conditions are very unsettled, awaiting receipts in sufficient volume to establish values. Fine wools are selling relatively better at the Government sales than bright wools.

This Being Easter We Look for Some of Burke's and Rickey's Eggs to Crack

Cardinals Helpless Before Davenport's Fine Twirling; Browns Win 5th Game, 8--1

Home Runs, Fumbles, Double Steals and Tumbles Figure in Victory Viewed by 4000 Knot-Hole Gangsters—Demmitt Clouts the Ball Savagely.

By John E. Wray.

GROUND and lofty tumbling, fumbling and throwing combined to thwart some fair pitching afforded the Cardinals, yesterday, contributing to the hilarity of some 4000 of the Knot Hole Gang, and about 6000 paid admissions that foregathered at Cardinal Field and saw the Browns win the fifth game of the spring series, 8 to 1.

It was the fifth contest of the annual spring escapade, and the Browns, by virtue of their easy success, now lead in such honors as may accrue to participants in such a haphazzard adventure, three victories to two.

Errors that appear in the error column, coupled with others that do not; air-tight pitching by the attenuated David Davenport, conjoined to some particularly laudable larruping of the celebrated apple by Ray Demmitt, were the causes of the Cardinals' undoing.

Davenport in Wonderful Form.

Davenport was an almost insuperable obstacle to the success of the Cardinals. Had the Rickeys played perfect ball and done their prettiest, Davenport would still have beaten them. He held the enemy to five hits and had he not reduced the pace of his burning shoots in the last inning he might for the second game in the series have achieved a shutout. As it was, the Cardinals have not earned a run off his delivery in 18 innings.

Tuero started the game on the Cardinal hill. The Cuban did not perform up to the accepted standards of major league hurlers; but what could be expected of a poor Hidalgo in a foreign land who, trying to make a deep impression, found his efforts worse than neutralized by his teammates, in the first moments of play? Tuero was off to a bad start and never recovered his poise. At that, the enemy made but four hits off his delivery in five innings, one of which was Sisler's "fluke" home run in the first, a lucky strike that was the principal factor in breaking the camel's back.

May Pleases Rickey.

Jakie May was the particularly pleasing spectacle to Manager Rickey. Jake took up the white man's burden in the sixth session against the confident Browns and he stopped them in their tracks. He allowed but one hit in four rounds and would have escaped unscathed and runless but for a smart double steal followed by a double-barreled throwing contest in the course of which two Brownies chased across the pan.

The Knot Holers Didn't Even "Peek."

Tuero's Morale Badly Shaken, When Error and Fluke Homer Start Rally

TUERO, who really thinks he has a right in the majors and probably has, had to bite his lip hard, in the very first play when Schultz, starting the game in Fisher's stead at second base, let a rather easy chance amble between his legs untouched. It put a potential run on first base which soon became an official marker.

Tobin, who looks by far the best outfielder shown in the series, at this early date, skirted clear around the infield to third base on Joe Gedeon's slow teaser to Hornsby. Tobin cruelly took advantage of the fact that the Cards did not expect him to pull any Ty Cobb stuff and got away with it.

Camera! Here Comes Sisler!

Sisler then entered the picture. Into the teeth of a hard driving wind, he hit a smart line which the gale backed up into what promised to be a single. Shotton rushed in to take it on the fly, seeing that this was the only way to keep Tobin from scoring. He just failed to get within reaching distance and it eluded his grasp. To make matters worse he fell prone and the speedy Sisler thereupon proceeded to circumnavigate the bases, scoring a homer on what should have been at best only a single. This impaired the Castilian morale, seriously. Tuero passed the next batter, Williams, who rubbed it in by stealing second. Demmitt "died," but Tuero again wobbled and walked Bronkie.

A Common or Garden Muff.

Then came the backbreaker. Gerber hit a high fly a little to the left of center. There appeared some doubt as to whether Shotton or Cruise would handle the ball. Shotton finally swerved and gave the field to Cruise, who was under it and had his hands on the ball, but it passed on through without saying howdye—two more tallies coming home. Tuero hit Billings, but managed to make Dave Davenport fan. It was a terrible inning, but the pitcher has an alibi.

Two hits were made off Tuero, in the next inning, but Gedeon was nipped at the plate trying to score on the second safety, for the third out.

But in the fourth Ray Demmitt took the spotlight and delivered a blow that again knocked Tuero to his knees, at least figuratively. Ray caught the first pitched ball solidly. It lined out to center, hardly clearing the head of the centerfielder, and rolled deep to the flag pole pocket. Demmitt had no trouble skirting the sacks for a home run—a genuine homer. Tuero showed good nerve by retiring the side in order.

Tuero Himself to Blame.

Tuero walked Sisler in the fifth inning and it was very bad pitching that cost him a run, here. He had Sisler two strikes and no balls, and then handed him four successive wide ones. A sacrifice followed by another dose of Ray Demmitt's bat, this time a ringing double to the right pavilion fence, produced a run that should not have developed.

The climax of the day's boots and bingles developed in the eighth inning after Pitcher May had deserved a better fate. With one down Bronkie singled, the only hit made off May, and stole second. Next, May walked Gerber, who, with Bronkie, executed a very nifty double steal. Up came Billings. Josh hit a rap at Schultz, who fielded it cleanly. He made a hurry-up throw to head off Bronkie at the plate. The runner had a long start and Schultz's throw was not of the best. The runner slid under, safe. Then Clemons soaked the ball to second, like a bare-handed man getting rid of a hot coal. Hornsby took the throw, but was too late for a putout. He promptly relayed the ball back. It hit a bat lying on the ground near the plate, glanced off and rolled to the grand stand, while Gerber scored. Billings chased all the way around and tried to add another marker, but was caught when Clemons retrieved the ball and threw to Paulette.

Davenport had the Cardinals inspecting his wonderful stuff as it wafted by them untouched. Of the five hits made off his delivery all were singles. Two of them came in the same inning, the fourth, but only after a double play had erased the effect of the first one.

The ninth saw the nearest thing to a rally. Hornsby made his second single of the day. He moved up on Paulette's out. After Schultz had walked they executed a smart double steal. Gerber threw out Clemons, Hornsby scoring. Fisher enlivened the forlorn hope when he gained a base on balls, batting for May. he gained a half-hearted cheer when he stole second; but Shotton's long fly ended the faint hopes.

Red Sox Worried About Barry's Failure to Regain Form; Team Otherwise Strong

Ed Barrow's Chief Problem, However, Is Where to Play Babe Ruth, Who Wants to Cavort in Left Field, While Manager Would Have Him Pitch.

No. 11—THE BOSTON RED SOX.

By Burt Whitman,

Sporting Editor Boston Herald.

RICHMOND, Va., April 19.

ED BARROW needs one more outfielder of proven class, preferably a right-hand batter of parts, before it is safe or sound to state that the 1919 Red Sox will be as powerful in the American League as they were last season.

The addition of Third Sacker Oscar Vitt from the Tigers makes the hot corner of the Sox stronger than it has been since Larry Gardner started to slip. But the second base situation is worse than it has been for some time.

Jack Barry is trying his derndest to get back into shape and his stride. This is difficult. Jack no longer is a boy. In addition to the physical aspect of things, there is the tremendous task of Jack in reshaping his mental outlook. For he was manager of the team in 1917, and was in the navy last year.

A Ballplayer With the Gout!

Dave Shean played well at second, last year. If there were any evidence on hand that he would do so well this year, Barrow need not worry about second. But at this writing Shean has left the club for Boston to undergo specialized treatment for gout. The other second sacker is young and fleet Mike McNally. So far there has not been a thing that Mike has not been able to do, so far as defensive play is concerned. But he is a weak hitter. Barry and Shean, too, are weak batters; but as second place men on the batting order, either of them is capable of sacrificing adroitly or of working the hit-and-run with lead-off man, Harry Hooper.

The pitching will be just about the same as it was last year. Ruth will be a pitcher, primarily, then a pinch hitter, and occasionally a left fielder.

George Dumont is a good right-handed acquisition for the club. He came to the champions in the Washington-New York-Boston-Detroit trade of the winter. Ruth, Mays, Bush and Jones are known quantities. Dumont appears to be the sort that can take his turn and do big things with such a defense as the Sox can put up behind him.

Caldwell May Be Dropped.

Ray Caldwell has not shown any indication that he will aid the team and may slip out of tre league before long. The other pitchers now in sight are Jean Dubuc, a remarkably effective practice pitcher, because of his ability to get the ball over, and George Winn, a promising and confident left-hander from the Virginia League of last year. Dubuc will cost the team some money, as Salt Lake City rates the French Canadian very highly. Next to Ruth, the best southpaw in sight now is Herb Pennock, last year in the navy. He seems to have improved over his pre-war form and confidence. He has plenty of stuff, but too often is "right over."

McInnis is set at first and as brilliant as ever. Scott is like Gibraltar at short and Vitt is all sound at third.

Strunk is a fixture in center and Hooper, captain of the team again, is in right, the best right fielder in the game. In left there is a hole. Frank Gilhooley is to be the substitute outfielder of the team. Until some definite action on left field is taken Gil may play there, if Ruth is saved for pitching.

Ruth Primarily a Pitcher.

Boby Roth as a Red Sox would make the team the strongest in the league; but just now we have no idea what plans Barrow has for fixing that left field problem. Ruth is a nifty outfielder and would fill the bill; but Barrow has reached the conclusion that Ruth must be a left-handed pitcher most of the time and that playing him in left field in between times as a steady diet is all wrong.

Behind the bat the club has a good new man in Al Walters, light, it is true, but heady, smart, a good receiver and thrower, aggressive and not by any means a cripple at bat. Wallie Schang and Walters will divide the receiving. The third-string man may be either Norman McNeil, from the Providence club, or George Moorefield, a naturally slugging batter, who has had some experience in the bushes, who is not at all a finished catcher, but who has caught the eye of everyone around by the way he "busts" the apple.

Here's the Lineup.

Hooper, rf; Barry, 2b; Strunk, cf; Ruth, lf; McInnis, 1b; Vitt, 3b; Scott, ss; Schang or Walters, c; Mays or Penock, p, is the order in which the Sox may take the field in their opening game. If Ruth does not play left field, Gainer or Gilhooley will be out there and the batting order unchanged. Ruth has affected a bad left shoulder this spring, but many think this is just a playful maneuver to get the left field assignment, which he covets.

The morale of the club is excellent. New blood prevents decay and deterioration.

'Poge' Lewis Was Knocked Out in Final A. E. F. Game

Bump on Head Rendered St. Louisan Unconscious for 15 Minutes in Football Clash Won by 89th Division From 36th of First Army.

WITHOUT doubt one of the greatest aggregations of college football talent ever assembled and equally, without doublt, the best coached team in the world, was the Eighty-ninth Division of the Army of Occupation which was carried off the gridiron at Paris, on March 29, after defeating the next best team in the foreign service, the Thiry-sixth Division, First Army, score 14 to 6.

This game, which was the climax of a long series of eliminations leading toward the championship of the A. E. F., was of especial interest to St. Louisans in that one of its college heroes, Monroe "Poge" Lewis of Washington U., played a line position in that engagement, while Fred Dennie, former St. Louis U. coach, was one of the Strategy Board, which directed operations from the side lines.

The engagement is described in letters to this country as bordering on savage, although little intentional fouling was done. The men, keyed up to fighting Huns, went at each other fiercely and casualties were numerous.

Lewis, himself a giant, weighing 208 pounds, was carried unconscious from the field. Lewis, in a letter to his parents, dismisses the game briefly, despite the fact that it was probably the ambition of his athletic career to go into this game and help win it. He writes, in part:

> "Saturday, we 'came across' and won the thing we were after, the championship of the A. E. F. and are now all heroes in Paris, as it were. We beat the 36th Division 14—6 before more than 15,000 soldiers. General Pershing and Secretary Daniels of the navy shook hands with all of us and praised us on our victory. I was knocked out in the second period, but got back into the game in the last quarter which was very exciting.
> "I wasn't hurt badly, just a blow on the head which knocked me out for 15 minutes. The first team is to be given a nice trip—we leave Wednesday, April 2, and go to Southern France, visiting Nice and may go to Rome. The players were given very pretty medals after winning the final game here. I am enclosing photos of the first team which started the game and of the coaching staff which would cost many thousands of dollars to hire, as they are all famous American players."
> "POGE."

The coaching department of the team would surely have cost a tidy sum—not less than $30,000 a season. Besides the players mentioned, Dennie, Mehan, Souci, Redfield, Pritchard and Trumbull, one of the best coaches in the world, played a line position and captained the team—Paul Withington, the Harvard star and All-America man.

No details are at hand as to team weight, but the names of the first team players are sufficient guarantee of the class of the eleven.

BOSTON, Mass., April 19.—The major league baseball season was opened here today when the Brooklyn club defeated Boston 5 to 2, in a 10-inning game this morning, and 3 to 2 this afternoon. Holiday crowds of more then 5000 and 15,000 attended. Hundreds of overseas soldiers were in the stands.

Jeff Pfeffer pitched well in the afternoon game for Brooklyn. Boston players got on the bases in every inning, but there were no hits to send them home. Pfeffer contributed to Brooklyn's win by driving the ball into deep left center, where Riggert dropped it after a long run. Boston scored in the seventh on hits by Miller and Herzog, and in the eighth when Pfeffer became wild and passed two and hit two, forcing Holke in.

Rudolph for Boston, and Cadore for Brooklyn engaged in a pitching duel in the first game which was broken by Brooklyn in the tenth inning, when Griffith singled with runners on third and second.

Boston scored twice in the seventh, with three hits and a sacrifice fly.

Goodwin and Sothoron Probable Pitchers Today; Doak Improving

For the sixth game of the series, scheduled to be played at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, Marvin Goodwin, who has already started two contests, and Allen Sothoron, who stopped Rickey's men in the opener, may be the opposing flingers. However, Bill Doak, who was injured in the auto smash earlier in the week, worked out yesetrday and may be used.

Teams May Play Monday.

In case of a tie after today's spring series contest, it has been decided by the management of the two clubs to stage the rubber contest Monday. The scene of the game has not been selected. The Cardinals are scheduled to depart Tuesday for Cincinnati where they open Wednesday.

Cripples Present at Game.

Bill Sherdel and Lee Meadows, in addition to Doak, witnessed yesterday's game. Sherdel still has a bad sore on his leg, but thinks he will be ready for Wednesday's opener. Ames and Horstman are still unable to leave the hotel.

Walton Cruise, a batting Titan two seasons ago, started the game in centerfield for the Cardinals. It was the first contest in which he played throughout. He failed to get either his eye or his hands on the ball. A little practice will bring him round.

Pipe This Senor Gonzales.

"Pickles" Dilhoefer has put Miguel Gonzales very much in the brine. The midget catcher reported yesterday and worked out with the club before the game. His wrist, injured two seasons ago, appears to have completely recovered, judging by the low, straight throwing he displayed. With Snyder, Gilhoefer and Clemons now available, Gonzales' chance of remaining in Cuba on a salary of nothing per month, is growing hourly.

Fisher Temporarily Out.

Second Baseman Fisher is out of the game with a stiff neck. Schultz rather loosely filled his shoes, but met the ball smartly for a single and walked twice. When Jack Miller comes, one of these three second sackers may keep on walking—you can guess which. Miller is acting captain before he arrives. He will relieve Bert Shotton.

Spring Series Pay.

Thus far about 36,000 persons have paid to see the five spring games—the total would have been greater but for the Pre-Victory Loan parades that keep down today's attendance. This means $9000 for each club. It's velvet to the Cardinals, whose training expenses were practically nil.

It's a Cardinal Idea.

The Knot Hole Gang was the noisiest 4000 that ever entered the park. They were abetted by the Bryan Hill Drum Corps which circled the field, giving the snare drums a worse beating than Jack Dempsey gave Fred Fulton.

Those uncovered 50-cent seats are as popular as an offended pole cat at a lawn party. Only a few hundred occupied the emptiness yesterday.

Johnny Tobin has scored eight runs in five games.

Here's the Annual Duel.

Sisler and Hornsby are driving the most runners home. Sisler has sent five across the pan ahead of him and has scored five himself. Hornsby has hit in four and scored three times himself. Rogers has it on his rival in the averages—.368 to .250.

Roettger Fans 15 but Is Beaten by McKinley, 11 to 3

Yeatman Star Is Belted for 17 Safeties—Fanned Six in First Two Rounds.

CENTRAL TAKES LEAD

Mid-City Nine Yesterday Defeated Soldan, 7—6, in Interscholastic Feature.

A freak pitching exhibition in which Walter Roettger of the Yeatman High Schol team was hammered for 17 hits and 11 runs by McKinley High School, but struck out 15 batters, was the feature of yesterday's High School League double-header. McKinley won, 11 to 3. In the opening game Central assumed the league leadership by gaining its second victory, this time over Soldan High, 7 to 6.

This contest was really the battle of the day, inasmuch as it furnished about 750 scholastic devotees a regular thrill in the form of a ninth inning Soldan rally which threatened to overcome what seemed to be a safe Central lead.

The West End players took their turn in the last half of the ninth inning with the short end of a 7-to-4 score. Kling, the first batter, coaxed a walk from Bremser, Mike Walker's star southpaw. Sherer, the next batter, duplicated; and to make his lack of control more impressive, Bremser then uncorked a wild pitch, placing the runners on second and third.

Bremser Forces in Run.

Robertson received four straight balls and the pillows were packed. Then followed a consultation in which Bremser advised his team mates that he had no thought in the world of retiring to the bench. He pitched to Williamson and fanned the batter. Frederick then drew the fourth walk of the inning, forcing in Kling. At this stage Catcher Brennan attempted to pick a runner off of first, but Kutterer was sleeping on the bag, and the ball rolled to right field, Shearer racing over with the second run of the inning. Score, 7 to 6.

Then came the game saver. Rutledge, third baseman, applied the hidden ball trick to Robertson and there were two runs. Lehman ended it all by popping to Bremser.

The game started out with all earmarks of a wild and wooly affair, each team scoring a pair of runs in the initial inning. Errors and walks were profusely interspersed, so the gallery soon tightened and the game resolved itself into a fair exhibition.

Central scored two more in the fifth and another trio in the seventh, taking a 7-to-2 lead. The West Enders kept right on fighting and closed the breach by tallying a pair in the seventh. Then came the aforementioned ninth inning.

Six Runs, Six Strikeouts.

Of course the pitching feat of Roettger will well enough characterize the McKinley-Yeatman game. Another touch to the description may be presented in that McKinley scored six runs in the first two innings, and at the same time the six McKinley outs of that period were via the strike-out route.

Roettger has been reputed to be the best twirler in the "prep" set, but both last week and yesterday he was sadly bumped. This is attributed by North End followers to the fact that he has been doing mound work, handicapped by a large blister on his pitching hand.

McKinley got to work early in the game, the first three batters hitting safely. Two wild pitches, two passed balls, another hit, and an error produced three runs. Three more came in the following inning by way of three more hits mixed with errors, and a formidable portion of stolen bases. Thereafter it was simply a question as to what score McKinley would amass.

Yeatman's only offensive movement came in the second inning when Roettger led off with a triple, Hunstein singled, and McKinley contributed a couple of misplays. Net result—three runs.

With 45 hits and 18 errors the aggregate total for the day, the box scores indicate that the scholastic youths are still a trifle under form.

Ruth Sets New Home Run Mark With Six Circuit Raps in Row

BALTIMORE, Md., April 19.

"BABE" Ruth, of the Boston Americans, in six successive times at the bat, four in yesterday's exhibition with the Baltimore Internationsl and two in today's game, scored home runs, breaking the home run record.

The previous modern day record for home runs was four, made by Bob Lowe in 1905 and tied by Edward Delahanty the following season. In a contest played in 1867 Harry Wright of the Cincinnati club, made seven home runs in one game.

Kid Regan Has Good Chance to Defeat Champion Herman

Banner Crowd of Season Is Expected to Witness Contest at Coliseum Next Friday Night—Moving Pictures Will Be Made of Bout.

THAT the eight-round encounter between Pete Herman, bantam-weight champion of the world, and Kid Regan, local favorite, will be the biggest fistic attraction of the current season locally, was made practically a certainty by developments yesterday. Chief among these was that Tommy Sullivan, promotor of the bout, found it necessary to demand that printers rush out 500 tickets which were needed to fill an urgent order from Carondelet, the home of Regan.

Regan, who invariably disposes of at least 500 tickets for every bout in which he appears, claimed that up to late Saturday, he had received 326 requests and he figures that this number will be doubled before tomorrow. Sullivan accordingly found it necessary to prod the printers that the requests might be filled.

Fight to Be "Filmed."

Arrangements were completed yesterday to make motion pictures of the affair at the Coliseum next Friday night. This is the second appearance of a local boxer in the "movies," as Harry Trendall and Ted Lewis were filmed in action in the same ring several years ago.

It will be recalled that Trendall was knocked out by Lewis, after the "Pride of the Patch" had put up a great fight during the early rounds.

Opinion among the local wiseacres" is that Regan has the best chance to become St. Louis first and only boxing champion in the history of the game here. It will, of course, be necessary to score a knockout in order for Regan to claim the title and even then the fact that neither Regan nor Herman will enter the ring at the bantamweight limit, might provide a good alibi for the champion should he lose.

Regan Is Given Good Chance.

Nevertheless, Regan will surely be entitled to some consideration among the heavy bantamweight and featherweights even if he succeeds only in outpointing Herman. And the little local idol firmly believes he can do this.

Just when Herman will appear on the scene for the bout is not known. Tommy Sullivan, however, has wired his manager, Sam Goldman, requesting him to bring the title holder here at least three days in advance, in order to give St. Louisans a chance to watch him work out.

Regan held a protracted gymnasium session yesterday at Harry Cook's, beginning at 2 p. m. and concluding about 4 o'clock. Last night he appeared in a 4-round exhibition against Johnny Collins, at the Railroad Y. M. C. A.

Many Requests for Tickets.

Additional evidence that the Coliseum will be well filled for the championship encounter, cropped out late yesterday afternoon. W. E. Pierce, an employe of a National Stockyards firm in East St. Louis, phoned Sullivan with a request for 300 reserved seats, stating the cattle men were planning to attend in a body.

The preliminaries have not yet been arranged, but it is certain that Bobby Anderson, the Du Quoin slugger, will appear in the semi-windup. It was hoped to have Fred Nelson oppose him, but Anderson insists the former is too heavy. In case they cannot reach an agreement regarding weight, another opponent will be selected for Bob. One more preliminary will be arranged. Walter Heisner, as usual, will handle all the bouts.

Sunday Baseball in N. Y. Assured

Gov. Smith Signs Bill and Majors Probably Will Rearrange Schedules.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 19.—Gov. Smith to day signed the bills authorizing Sunday baseball and moving picture shows.

It is understood that both major leagues will rearrange their schedules so as to include Sunday games at the Polo Grounds and at Washington Park in Brooklyn.

Under the two bills baseball games may be played and moving pictures exhibited on Sundays providing that consent is given by the local governing body. The bills were fought by the Lord's Day Alliance and other religious organizations, but were supported by the State Federation of Labor and numerous business and political bodies.

The Governor also pointed out that the baseball bill removes the present legal prohibition against fishing on Sunday.

Both measures take effect immediately and the games and exhibitions will be permitted as soon as local ordinances are adopted.

INTERNATIONAL TENNIS BODY WANTS U. S. NET ASSOCIATION TO JOIN

NEW YORK, April 19.—The United States National Lawn Tennis Association has been asked to announce under what conditions it would favorably consider becoming a member of the International Tennis Federation. England, France, Belgium, Sweden and other nations organized the federation just before the beginning of the war in 1914. The United States refused to join at that time because it was impracticable to conform to the rules proposed.

Capt. R. N. Williams II has written to George T. Adee, president of the United States association, saying new proposals have been made in Paris for the Americans to join. He points out that rules as to voting, the award of the world's championship tournament on Turf to England in perpetuity and several other important matters would have to be changed.

Capt. R. N. Williams II and Capt. Watson Washburn of the United States Association's Executive Committee are now in Paris. They will conduct negotiations and action will finally be brought before the National Association at a meeting in this country.

Bethlehem Defeats Paterson in Final

Ratican, St. Louis Boy, Stars for Winners in 2—0 Victory in Title Game.

FALL RIVER, Mass., April 19.—The Bethlehem soccer eleven of Bethleham, Pa., defeated the Paterson (N. J.) team here today for the Dewar cup, emblematic of the United States Football Association championship. The score was 2 to 0. Harry Ratican, former St. Louis soccer star, scored the second goal for Bethlehem in the last minute of play.

A crowd of 9000 persons enjoyed an exciting game of soccer.

Paterson players look for all the world like the St. Louis product and the club plays a game similar to that of St. Louis teams. Paterson pushed hard and fast in the first half, playing at a terrific pace for fully 35 of the 45 minutes. Good shots were numerous and the Bethlehem cross bar was rattled on several occasions.

The odds were in favor of Paterson as the second half opened. They were soon reversed. Bethlehem was playing its best game about middle of the second half. Harry Ratican was getting all the feeding he could handle and time after time he broke through for a clever bit of work. He and Fleming, Bethlehem, scoring pair, were shooting hard and often. Paterson was being crowded dangerously when a half back fouled Ratican just outside of the penalty area. The ball was passed to McKelvey, who, on a clear shot, scored the first goal of the game. That was 15 minutes after the half started.

Again Bethlehem resorted to a defensive game, breaking away only in spurts for an attack. On one of these occasions, following a corner kick in the Bethlehem goal, Ratican broke away with the ball and took it up the field and shot into the corner the goal that put the game and the championship in the safe for Bethlehem.

Tennis Tourney With 200 Entrants to Be Played Here

Sunday School Athletic Association Will Divide Players Into 20 Groups.

FOREST PARK CLUB GROWS

Plans for Expansion Will Be Developed at Meeting to Be Held May 6.

By DAVIDSON OBEAR,
Secretary St. Louis T. A.

The St. Louis Sunday School Athletic Association is going in for tennis. For the past few years this organization has taken an active part in athletics throughout the city. It has fostered baseball, basketball and track, and will now add two more sports, tennis and swimming, to its schedule.

The association represents more than 60 Sunday schools, and proposes to conduct tennis on a large scale. At a meeting of the Tennis Committee, held Friday night, plans for tournament play were announced. Contests for boys and girls in singles and mixed doubles will be held. The main object of the committee will be to provide enough tennis to keep the players busy from June until September.

It is expected that 20 groups will be organized, each to contain from 12 to 24 boys and girls. In the singles tournament each player in every group will be expected to play twice a week so that by August the winners in each group will be decided. The play off for the championship in singles will probably take place the last of August. Teams for the mixed doubles competition will be selected from the boys and girls in each gruop.

Over 150 Girls to Enter.

More than 150 girls have signified their intention of entering the singles and a like number of entries from the boys is expected. Entries from members of Sunday Schools in the Athletic Association will be received by Miss Carrie Mellow 6633 Vermont avenue, telephone, Riverside 36. Miss Mellow is chairman of the tennis division and is selecting captains for the various teams.

The officers of the Sunday School Athletic Association are: W. E. Been, president; George W. Mehl, vice president, H. L. Wells, secretary and treasurer. The Tennis Committee consists of H. L. Wells, Miss C. Mellow, J. K. Stewart and S. E. Parker.

Forest Park Club to Expand.

The regular monthly meeting of the Forest Park Tennis Club will be held at the Cabanne Branch Library on Tuesday evening, May 6, at 8 o'clock. The officers of the club are making a special effort to attract a large attendance. Plans in connection with a membership campaign will be announced.

The tennis courts of the Wabash Club at Ferguson will be ready for play on April 27. Last season a new building with lockers and showers was erected. The regular meeting for the election of officers will take place in June.

Stars Join Boz Club.

The Boz Club of St. Louis, a literary organization in the West End of the city, has decided to take an active interest in tennis. A court at Cabanne and Goodfellow has been secured and is being put in condition for play. The club has its headquarters in Goodfellow Hall at Goodfellow and Vernon avenue, which is convenient to the courts. The Tennis Committee has made application for membership in the St. Louis Tennis Association. Malcolm Travis, former Washington U. champion, and Kenneth Schaberg, champion at Principia in 1916, are members of the club and their presence will, no doubt, strengthen the team which will take part in inter-club play. The officers are: Joseph A. Maxwell, president; George L. Schaberg, vice president; Raymond G. Timmerman, secretary, and Reginald F. Irwin, treasurer.

NAVY CREWS GAIN AN EASY VICTORY

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 19.—The Naval Academy oarsmen virtually swept themselves into supremacy in the college world by overwhelming the 'varsity and freshmen crews in the regatta on the Severn River this afternoon.

The Navy 'Varsity finished nearly 14 lengths ahead of the Crimson with Princeton three lengths behind Harvard and in the Freshman event the Navy plebes crossed the finish eight lengths ahead of Harvard and nearly 10 lengths ahead of the Princeton Freshmen.

The races, triangular contests, were rowed over a course of a mile and seven-eighths, instead of the customary Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths, this being the result of a mutual agreement of the competing crews. Lincoln Is Star of Webster Track Squad's Victory

Captain of County Champions Scored 23 Points Against Cleveland Yesterday.

MUELLER LEADS LOSERS

South Side Junior Counted 18 Points Competing in the Dash Events.

In a track meet yesterday morning at Francis Field, Webster Groves inaugurated the local season by defeating Cleveland High School, 126 points to 97. The work of Allen Lincoln, captain of the Webster team, was the feature. Lincoln amassed 23 points in five events, and was beaten only once, in the broad jump only, in which he finished second to Trumm of Cleveland.

Lincoln ran the century in 10 1-5, and the furlong in 22 4-5 seconds, and finished yards ahead of his rivals in both races. In addition, he took first place in the shotput, and hurled the discus 123 feet 6 inches, which was 26 feet beyond the throw of Trumm, who drew second place.

Cleveland Juniors Star.

The events were diveded into three classes—senior, junior and combined senior-and-junior, and Cleveland took honors in the junior events only, registering 47 points against the 41 of Webster juniors. In the other divisions Webster had overwhelming greater scores, counting 59 in senior events to Cleveland's 29, and 26 in the combined division against 7 for Cleveland.

Mueller and Novak of Cleveland had things their own way in the junior dashes, and drew places in the 50, 100 and 220, Mueller taking firsts in the shorter dashes, and Novak winning the 220. Mueller was the individual star in junior events with 18 points.

Coach Newman's team was handicapped by the absence of four of his men, who were unable to take part because of their connection with the baseball team. Eckles, Edgington and Groerich and Cliff Placke were the absent members.

Webster will prepare next week for a meet with Western Military Academy at Alton, April 26, while Cleveland meets Central and Kirkwood Tuesday afternoon, at Francis Field. Several events postponed yesterday, will be held April 28.

Grinnell Star Is Victor in Feature Drake Relay Race

Haas Noses Out Butler by Six Inches in Special 100-Yard Dash Event.

DES MOINES, Io., April 19.—Breasting the tape scarcely six inches in front of Sol Butler, the negro star from Dubuque College, Carl Haas of Grinnell upset the dope capturing the special 100 yards dash, the feature event of the tenth annual Drake Relay Carnival. The finish was so close that not until the judges announced their decision was the result known to the 4000 spectators.

Carl Johnson of Michigan, favorite, failed to place, while Haddock, Kansas, was also outside the money. Third place went to Hayes of Notre Dame, another dark horse. The time was 10 1-5 seconds.

Only one record was smashed during the afternoon. This honor went to Cedar Rapids High School, which broke its own mark of 8:38 4-5 in the 2-mile relay.

The mile university brought out a finish which equaled the special dash for closeness. Kansas got off an early lead and held it to the final lap half way around. The pace began to tell on O'Leary and he was passed by McMahon of Nebraska and Barlow of Missouri. These two men fought it out neck and neck down the home stretch, the Cornhusker runner winning by a stride as they crossed the finish line. Kansas copped third and Grinnell finished fourth. In this event all of the big 10 colleges were badly outclassed.

The summaries:

TWO-MILE UNIVERSITY—WON BY Notre Dame, Meredith, Sweeney, McDonough, Meehan; Chicago, second; Illinois, third; Wisconsin, fourth. Time, 8:02.

SPECIAL 100-YARD DASH—WON BY Haas, Grinnell; Butler of Dubuque (Io.) College, second; Hayes of Notre Dame, third. Time, 10 1-5.

FOUR-MILE UNIVERSITY—WON BY Chicago (Lewis, Long, Moore, McCook); Iowa State, second; Drake, third. Time, 18:56 3-5.

ONE-HALF MILE UNIVERSITY—Missouri Valley section—Won by Grinnell (Hass, Virsell, Minty, Cowden); Kansas, second; Nebraska, third; Drake, fourth. Time, 1:31.

ONE-HALF MILE UNIVERSITY, BIG TEN section—Won by Michigan (Meese, Butler, Loech, Johnson); Illinois, second; Iowa, third; Minnesota, fourth. Time, 1:29 4-5.

TWO-MILE COLLEGE—WON BY Morningside (Lee, Myers, Shafenberg, Hunt); Cornell (Io.), second; Coe, third; Simpson, fourth. Time, 8:23 3-5.

ONE-HALF MILE COLLEGE—WON BY Dubuque (Duke, Arembs, Bergman, Butler); Coe, second; South Dakota, third; Simpson, fourth. Time, 1:34 2-5.

ONE MILE UNIVERSITY—WON BY Nebraska (Gibbs, Gillian, Fuchs, McMahon); Missouri, second; Kansas, third; Grinnell, fourth. Time, 3:26.

Wagers Are Made Jim Barnes Will Get Score of 65

Sunset Hill Golfers "Bet" That New Professional Can Accomplish Feat.

PAR FOR COURSE IS 74

Evans, Ouimet and Others Also Conceded a Possible Chance of Doing It.

By CLARENCE L. WOLFF,
City Golf Champion.

As an illustration of the confidence which has been reposed in the golf-playing ability of big Jim Barnes of Sunset Hill Country Club, we cite an incident which took place around the "big table" at the nineteenth hole of that club, a few days ago.

During the "teeing-up" at said nineteenth, a discussion arose between two prominent local golfers as to the scoring proclivities of Barnes and the probability of his shooting a low score record. Following the usual order of things under such circumstances, there was much chatter pro and con until finally Prominent Golfer No. 1 bet P. G. No. 2, that during the season of 1919 Barnes would register a score of 65 strokes, or better, for the 18-hole circuit of the Sunset course. Thereupon large bunches of American gold went down on the table, and there was business of preparing and signing the articles of agreement to bind the bargain.

Another Wager Is Result.

The news of the wager soon spread to all corners of the club grounds, causing much verbal speculation as to whether or not P. G. No. 1 had made a very bad bet, and then it was that a certain blond gentleman (who answers to the name of Carl) speaking just a little "out of turn," and a trifle too loudly, opined that a score of 65 could not be "did" on the Sunset links.

At this stage of the proceedings the money of a certain "flivver" distributer began to "talk" most fluently and another wager was made, but its terms included a little more "territory." Instead of limiting the agreement to Barnes' score only, it was made to embrace the score of any and all golfers who played the course this season. This alteration of the first bet opens up the field for Evans, Ouimet and a few others, who are conceded a possible chance of negotiating the course in such a low figure.

Par for Course Is 74.

Par for the Sunset course with its present yardage is 74 strokes—35 for the first nine and 39 for the latter—and that par, with the entire distance fairly "reeking" with traps and hazards, is by no means an easy one. Still, and in utter defiance of this fact, these affirmative bettors are staking their chances on a figure nine strokes below a difficult par. Game babies, we "calls" them.

Following are the par figures for each hole of the course and also the score Barnes would have to make to win the wagers for his supporters:

Out—Par..	4	3	3	4	3	5	5	4	4	—35
Barnes ...	4	3	3	3	3	3	4	4	4	—31
In—Par	5	4	4	3	5	4	5	5	4	—39	—74
Barnes	4	3	3	3	4	4	4	5	4	—34	—65

ENGLISH DRYS LOST GROUND DURING WAR

Restrictions Reduced Drunkenness 80 Per Cent; Scientific Control Versus Total Prohibition.

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright.)

LONDON, April 19.—The advocates in Great Britain of prohibition have lost ground during the war under the results achieved by scientific regulation.

There is reason to believe with public opinion convinced that the war regulations have achieved splendid results, that the "wets," greatly in the minority, will be unable to prevent adoption of at least 76 per cent of the war restrictions.

These restrictions reduced drunkenness by 80 per cent. They have not only dealt a staggering blow to the advocates of unrestricted sale of intoxicants, but have undermined total prohibition.

In interview with the Post-Dispatch correspondent, Lord D'Abernon, Chairman of the Central Liquor Control Board, showed why he is committed to the scientific control of the liquor traffic as against total prohibition by legislation. He said:

"All persons in England interested in temperance are watching what is going on in America to meet the world-old problem of abuse and excess of alcoholic indulgence. My personal view is that it can be met by moderate scientific control.

"During the war enormous progress was made in this country in meeting this problem. Drunkenness has been reduced by 80 per cent and the cases of delirium tremens and deaths from alcohol fell in proportion.

"There should be no unnecessary interference with past customs or public convenience. Opinion is practically unanimous that no return to the bad position before the war is tolerable. The progress achieved must be consolidated in so far as it affects national efficiency.

"If America is more successful than England, we shall endeavor to learn by your example. All our results and knowledge are placed cheerfully at the disposal of American investigators.

"This is a problem half as old as time, and I want England and America to settle it for the world in friendly rivalry and friendly competition as to who shall do it best. The problem must be approached on scientific lines and with complete detachment from worn-out shibboleths and prepossessions."

"The four cardinal points of the system which has been in operation in England and Wales since 1915 are: The curtailment and drastic scientific regulation of the hours of sale; compulsory dilution of spirits of excessive strength and the lightening of heavy beer; establishment of canteens on a large scale, and prohibition of group treating and of other inducements to excess.

"In London many houses opened at 5 a. m. and closed at 12:30 the following morning, a total of 19 and one-half hours a day," he said, speaking of conditions before the war. "Conditions in the provinces were nearly as bad.

"Every facility was given to the 'soaker' and 'toper.' Public houses were everywhere open when men went to work, while they were at work, and when they would naturally have been asleep. The continued existence of these conditions was intolerable at a time when every hour's work and full efficiency were demanded.

"It was determined in 1915 to cut the hours to a maximum of five and one-half, consisting usually from 12 to 2:30 in the middle of the day and from 6 to 9 at night. Recently another half hour was added in the face of strong demand for relaxation of war restrictions and another hour was added to the time during which guests of a hotel may obtain drink."

In reply to the same demand for longer hours and better beer and whiskey, the Government has permitted the gravity of beer to be increased but not whiskey. The increased gravity of beer is so slight that it almost comes into the category of a war-time brew known as "Government ale," which a well known judge in London described as being "all arms and legs" and no body.

The no treating order of war time, though still unrestricted, is not observed so rigorously as it was.

Despite the recent relaxations, when more beer and whiskey became available at a time when demobilization was in progress, there has been only an insignificant increase in the number of police cases from drunkenness.

Alcoholism among women in England and Wales resulted in 1913 in the conviction for drunkenness of 35,765 whereas in 1917 there were only 12,307 convictions, although thousands more women had become wage earners and were, in fact, engaged in arduous work where there was a natural desire for stimulants. In 1918 there was a further large decrease on the 1917 figures.

Fenton 'Mayor's' Loyalty Is Questioned in Court

He Testifies, in Wife's Divorce and Partition Suit, He Is "American to the Core"—Ordered Not to Sell Any of Realty.

Michael Weil, erstwhile jovial tavernkeeper at Fenton, St. Louis County, who was called "Mayor of Fenton" by the awed villagers who sat around his saloon-hotel-restaurant-butcher shop and heard him discourse easily and confidently on politics, potato blight and penuchle, yesterday sat in court at Clayton and heard his own loyalty and industry assailed by his wife and son.

Mrs. Weil wants half of his property, which she estimates at $42,000, and a divorce, and the proceeding yesterday was to determine whether an order should be issued restraining him from disposing of his property. Mrs. Weil says the former Fenton "Falstaff," her husband, has threatened to sell all that he has and go back to Germany, his native land. Judge Wurdeman ordered him not to sell his real estate.

Mrs. Weil Tells of Labors.

Mrs. Weil has charged that the exalted position occupied by her husband in the community was not due so much to his superior knowledge and surpassing logic as to her own facility at butchering beeves, cooking, tending bar, waiting on table and generally superintending of the labor and finances of the establishment.

It was his wont, she charges, when they drove stock to town, to ride majestically in the buggy while she kept the stock on the move and diverted them from attempts to turn off on the wrong road, overrun somebody's field and the like.

John F. Rudder testified yesterday that when he became a salesman in the First Liberty Loan campaign he naturally hastened to Weil, who, as the leading citizen, he thought, could be expected to head the list. Nothing doing, he said. The village philosopher opined that the war would be over in six months and that Germany would be on top when it was. He refused to subscribe.

Rudder did say, however, that in a later campaign, when the six months had gone by and things didn't look so rosy for All Highest, Weil took $100 in bonds.

Fred Weil, a son, also took the stand to declare that he heard his father tell Rudder that "the Yanks won't get any of my money; I'll keep it in my pocket." He averred, furthermore, that he had often heard his sire express the desire to get back to Germany, and to say that he intended to do so as soon as the war was over.

Mrs. Weil, on the stand, upheld her contention as to her husband's wealth. She said she saw a list of some of his personal property, shortly before she left him, totaling $19,000. She declared his real estate amounts to $12,000, his tenants, including herself and their two sons, all of whom pay rent to the head of the family, she said.

Weil on Witness Stand.

Smarting under these various charges, Weil himself finally took the stand. He vigorously denied any intention of returning to Germany, not being willing to subject his fortune either to the indemnity taxes or to the tender mercies of communists. Moreover, he said, "I am American to the core."

He added, alas, that his fortune had been greatly exaggerated by report, and that he was not nearly so well provided with the things of the world as was reputed. He put his personal property at $2000; real estate, $10,000; taxes unpaid, debts coming due and no cash.

Judge Wurdeman, in announcing the decision, said he had little fear that Weil would leave for his native heath. "About the only chance Mike's got to get to Germany is by airplane. They are not issuing passports to tourists at present," he observed.

A hearing of the divorce case has not been set.

BRAWL IN SALOON SUPPLIED CLEW TO BECKER'S SLAYERS

Highwaymen Resented Remark of Prizefighter Who Called Act Cowardly and Were Soundly Beaten.

ONE MAN ARRESTED MAKES CONFESSION

Police Have Names of All Who Took Part in Holdup and Murder and Other Arrests Are Expected Soon.

A fight in Stephens Bros.' saloon, Eighteenth and Papin streets, in which one man knocked out three others with his fists, led to the arrest of John T. Dougherty, 21 years old, a shoe worker and recently discharged sailor, of 1904 Papin street, who yesterday confessed that he was one of four men who waylaid and robbed Henry (Kid) Becker, professional gambler, in front of his home, 3163 Russell avenue, last Monday night. One of the robbers shot and killed Becker.

Dougherty was arrested Thursday morning, after the police had received a tip that there had been a fight in the Stevens saloon and that in a quarrel preceding the fight Becker's name had been mentioned. They learned that a boxer and boxing instructor named Pingle had entered the saloon Tuesday morning, when three other customers were drinking there and had got into a quarrel with these three because they resented his remark that the killing of Becker was a cowardly act.

The quarrel led to a fight, in which Pingle whipped all three with his fists. The police learned that one of the men with whom Pingle fought was Dougherty. When he was found at his home he showed marks of having been in a fight. He at first said he had fought with his brother. He made his confession only after he had been questioned many hours by detectives.

Three Highwaymen Beaten.

Policemen who went to the saloon learned that Pingle got into a conversation with the bartender, and spoke of the Becker shooting, saying it was a shame the way Becker was killed, "by dirty curs who did not give him a chance."

This expression seemed to greatly agitate the three other customers and one, since identified as Dougherty, said to Pingle: "What's it to you? You'd better mind your own business." Another, since named by Dougherty as the man who did the shooting, said to Pingle: "You'd better keep still. You might get the same dose yourself." According to the information given to the police, Pingle then offered to fight the three and the offer was accepted, and he fought and whipped them all with his fists.

In his confession Dougherty gave the names of three men who, he said, were with him when the robbery and shooting occurred, and a police search for them was begun yesterday. He said his share of the robbery was $240 and the amount taken from Becker was $1300. Except for the omission of the names of Dougherty's companions, the confession is as follows:

"I was talking with a man at 18th street and Chouteau avenue at 6 p. m. Monday, the night of the shooting, when two other men drove up in a machine and we talked about holding up Kid Becker. The man who drove the machine said it was all right, as Becker was a man who would never 'squawk.' This same man told me and one of the others to go to Grattan street and Chouteau avenue and wait for him there.

"He and another man came there in a machine, and we all got in. We drove to Longfellow boulevard and Allen avenue, and got out and walked up Russell avenue. I and one of the other men stood across the street from Becker's house.

Tells of Running.

"We saw a machine come down Russell avenue and someone said: 'There comes Becker now.' Two of the men went over to stick up Becker. I then ran west on Russell avenue and was about one block west of Becker's house when I heard a shot.

"I walked to Compton and Park avenues and took a street car going east and got off at Eighteenth street and Chouteau avenue. Two of the other men were there, and we split the money. I got $240. I asked how much they got, and one of the men said $1300.

"I asked who shot Becker, and this same man said: 'I did. I shot him because he began to holler.'

Went to Saloon After Robbery.

"We then went to Stephens Bros.' saloon at Eighteenth and Papin street and had several drinks. The fourth man came along while we were there.

"After leaving the saloon we went to my home at 1904 Papin street and had a party and stayed there until 6 a. m. Tuesday and then bummed around awhile.

"In running west on Russell avenue after the shooting I threw a gun on the lawn about a block west of Becker's house. I met two of the men Tuesday morning and left them at Eighteenth street and Chouteau avenue and have not seen them since. I left some of the money at home with my mother and left about $150 at Stephens Bros.' saloon.

"The four of us talked about holding up Kid Becker a week before the shooting. I didn't want to have anything to do with it, but the man who did the shooting said it would be all right, as Becker would never say anything about being held up."

Elmer G. Dempsey, 23 years old, chauffeur for S. S. Wilson, of 3158 Allen avenue, directly back of the Becker home, was arrested Friday night and booked "held for the Circuit Attorney."

Chauffeur Knew Men.

A few minutes before the Becker shooting Dempsey drove into the alley and two men jumped on the running board of his machine and told him to "keep going," their apparent purpose being to keep him out of the way so he would not witness the Becker robbery. At the inquest Dempsey testified he did not know these men.

After his arrest last night Dempsey admitted he knew both men and had associated with them at the Stephens saloon. He said he also knew Dougherty and had been his schoolmate.

When the two men, whom he knew well, jumped on his machine, he said, one of them told him they were "about to hold up somebody," and added: "You get out of here and we won't forget you." The other man said: "Keep your mouth shut or you'll get yours."

Dempsey said fear that this threat would be carried out prevented him from telling the truth at the inquest. Thursday afternoon, he said, a woman called the Wilson home on the telephone and said to Mrs. Wilson: "Give this message to your chauffeur. Tell him if he squeals he will be got."

Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, vice president of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, was called to Rolla during the past week in the interests of the State biennal. Great enthusiasm was manifested in the program, which will have as its keynote "Americanization."

PART FIVE ST LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 20, 1919. PAGES 1—12B

WASHINGTON AV. CORNER IS BOUGHT FOR SHOE FACTORY

Sale of Site at 21st Street to McElroy-Sloan Co. Understood to Have Been at Record Price.

GENERAL REALTY MARKET IS BRISK

Promoter Said to Be Making Progress on Project for Real "White Way" on Twelfth Street.

By Berry Moore.

Buoyancy characterizes all sections of the St. Louis realty market. Acquisitions of holdings are taking place for both business purposes and for investment and for speculation as well, according to real estate agents.

The chief transaction in the business area disclosed during the week was the purchase by the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co. of the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Twenty-first street. The site, embracing 75x136 feet, is to be improved with a five-story fireproof factory building.

The transaction was effected by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. The price paid was not disclosed, but it is understood to have sustained the record on that part of Washington avenue, which is being absorbed for sites for buildings for wholesale and for light manufacturing purposes.

The southwest corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, owned by Paul Brown, has been sold by the Mercantile Trust Co., but the identity of the purchaser and price paid is withheld. The site is occupied by a five-story building under a lease to the Langan Bros. Furniture and Carpet Co. It has 106 feet on Washington avenue by 150 feet on Eighteenth street, and is regarded as one of the most commanding sites on upper Washington avenue. It is available for either a hotel or on a large scale or for a wholesale building. The Marquette Hotel occupies the southeast corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue.

Many Other Big Deals.

Many more deals of the foregoing magnitude are under contract, but until the deeds have been passed the interested parties decline to give out details. Succinctly stated, activity is at the zenith in business realty, but there is a disposition on the part of operators to suppress the movement, anticipating the adverse effect of stimulation caused by the disclosure of operations in their entirety.

According to Frank W. Schramm, real estate agent and former City Assessor, a promoter from Chicago is in St. Louis with plans to establish a group of theaters of the burlesque orders in downtown Twelfth street.

The project, which Schramm describes as attractive, contemplates the transformation of that part of Twelfth street from Market street to Washington avenue, into a white way of the first water.

Although the launching of this project will involve the expenditure of $1,000,000 or more, it is being brought forth, it is believed, at a most opportune time, in view of the fact that national prohibition becomes effective in Jan. 1918. There is no derth of sites in this part of Twelfth street available for the proposed theaters, and which may be acquired either by lease or purchase on a most reasonable basis, including both corners and inside lots.

A large factory building at the southwest corner of Page and Newstead avenues was purchased yesterday by the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. through the Mercantile Trust Co. It was formerly owned by the Wolf Shirt Co. The consideration was $30,000.

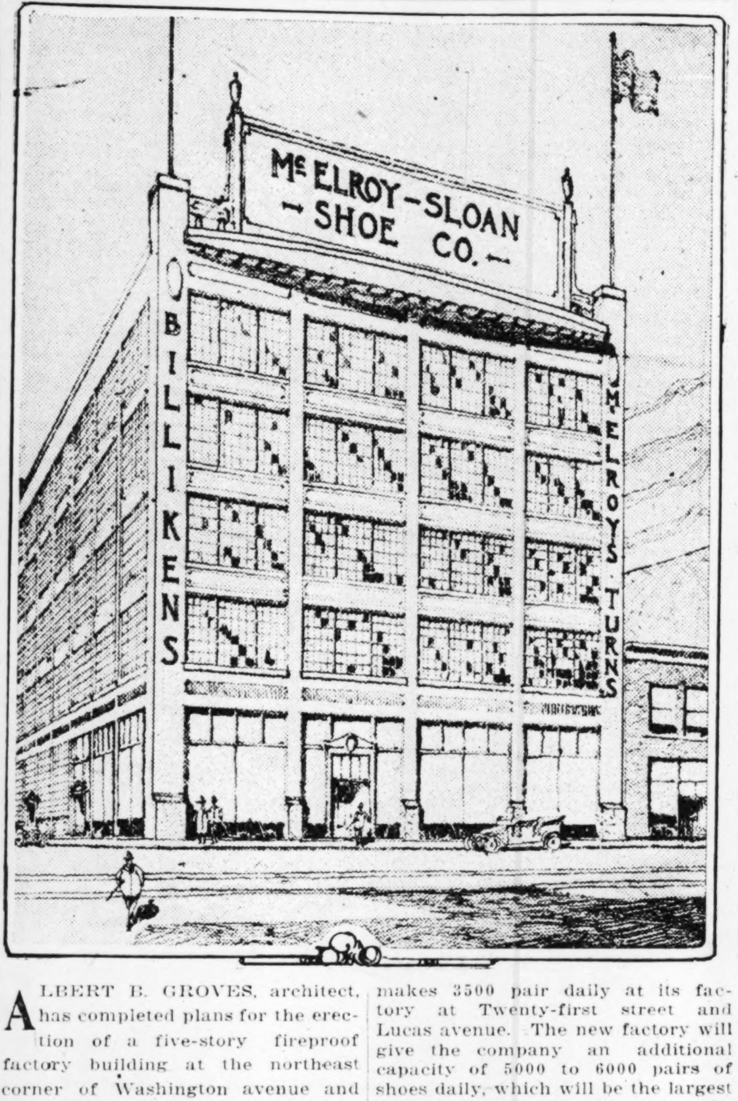
Residential Realty Also Active.

The movement in the residential district is keeping pace with that in the business parts of the city, there being an unprecedented number of deals pending for apartment buildings, flats and homes. The majority of sales of buildings in these areas are being made for cash.

Plans were disclosed for the erection of a six-story fireproof apartment building, with the purchase during the week of the northwest corner of DeBaliviere and Waterman avenues by Edward A. Ganss. The lot has a frontage on DeBaliviere of 100 feet by a depth of 125 feet. It is understood that Ganss, who is a real estate dealer, has acquired the site for a client who will finance the project. The building will be of the kitchenette type, with one, two and three room suites, and will be arranged with stores facing De Baliviere avenue.

Cornet & Zeibig and David P. Leahy were identified with the transaction, the latter representing Arthur E. Stedlin. The price paid for the lot is withheld. The majority of the vacant corners on DeBaliviere avenue, which extends from Delmar to Forest Park, were formerly owned by Stedlin Brothers, who saw the future of this streets as a business center, and who purchased them at the Washington Heights auction held by the Mercantile Trust Co. several years ago.

Fireproof Factory Building to Be Erected for Shoe Company



ALBERT B. GROVES, architect, has completed plans for the erection of a five-story fireproof factory building at the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Twenty-first street, for the McElroy Sloan Shoe Co. The site, having a frontage of 75 feet on Washington avenue, was purchased during the week through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., under an option obtained recently.

The building will be used by the Shoe Co. for the manufacture of the Billiken Shoes, of which it now makes 3500 pair daily at its factory at Twenty-first street and Lucas avenue. The new factory will give the company an additional capacity of 5000 to 6000 pairs of shoes daily, which will be the largest output of children's shoes in the country.

The McElroy-Sloan Co., which was established in 1914, has made tremendous strides each year, averaging an annual gain of more than $1,000,000. John W. Craddock is president, Warren F. McElroy, vice president, W. M. Sloan, general manager, and J. F. Dyer, secretary.

MERCANTILE CLUB BUILDING PASSES TO FORECLOSURE BUYER

President of Buying Company Says Property Is Not for Department Store.

The Morton Investment Co. yesterday acquired control of the former Mercantile Club building at the southwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets, sold recently under foreclosure for $240,000.

Nathan Frank, president of the company, denied last night a story current to the effect that the building had been obtained for large department store interests which desired to control the corner, which is considered one of the strongest in the retail district, owing to its proximity to the Famous-Barr store.

The sale was made to satisfy the second and third mortgage bonds for $100,000 each. In reality the actual purchase price of the property, exclusive of the delinquent interest on the bonds, was $690,000. The purchase embraces a 99-year leasehold estate on the fee to the site, valued on a 4 per cent basis at $250,000 and is subject to the first mortgage bonds of $200,000. The lease provides for an annual ground rental of 4 per cent on $250,000 The fee or ground is owned by the Shaw estate, incorporated as the Missouri Botanical Association. The site has a frontage on Locust street of 127½ feet and on Seventh street of 90 feet.

The northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets was recently purchased by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as a site for the St. Louis Union Bank, for $800,000. This plot has 127 feet on Seventh street by 119 feet on Locust street.

According to Frank the sale of the property to him, under the provisions of the third and fourth mortgage bonds, automatically cancels the 20-year lease of the ground floor recently acquired by F. W. Drosten, who has expended $50,000 or more on the premises. He has notified Drosten, however, that he will not be disturbed. Frank is one of the largest owners of real estate in downtown St. Louis, his holdings including the block at the southwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, leased recently to Woolworth through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

MARKED ACTIVITY REPORTED IN WEST WALNUT MANOR LOTS

The Janet Realty Co. reports marked activity in West Walnut Manor the past week, a number of sales for large plots of ground being closed.

Lot 50x128 feet, on west side of Helen avenue, near Garesche boulevard, was sold to Louis J. Dill, who owns a home next to the ground he purchased.

Lot 60x128 feet, on east side of Helen avenue, near Emma avenue, was sold to Emmett Melzner.

Lot 25x128 feet, on Hodiamont avenue, near Lena avenue, was sold to Michael O'Malley for $250.

Special Sale of Kenwood Springs Lots.

The Bottorff Realty Co. is offering at special sale the remaining lots in the Kenwood Springs addition, owned by Herman C. G. Luyties. A uniform price of $20 a foot, or $1000 for each one, has been placed on the lots. This price includes the street improvements, which cost $10 a foot.

ACTIVITY IN LOTS IN HI-POINTE IS SHOWN BY SALES

L. J. Withrow Purchases Splendid Plot on the Skinker Road Frontage as a Site for Fine Home.

As a site for a fine house, former L. J. Withrow has purchased the center lot of the Skinker road frontage of Hi-Pointe. The dimensions of the lot are 55x160. The price paid was not made public.

The lot faces Forest Park, and forms a superb site for a home. The addition is situated at the northwest corner of Clayton and Skinker roads, at their junction with McCausland avenue.

The Broadway Savings Trust Co. announces the sale of eight lots in Hi-Pointe in the block west of the city limits, or DeMun avenue, set apart for flats, and placed on sale only last week. The purchasers represent both builders and speculators. These lots are being offered at $45 a foot, this price assuring purchasers from $5 to $10 a foot, according to Charles DeLargy real estate officer of the trust company, under whose auspices the property is being marketed.

Lots in the block east of the City Limits car line, which runs through the subdivision, are being disposed of at from $45 to $60 a foot. Only a few lots remain unsold in this part of the subdivision, bungalows as well as houses being permissible there. There are 30 lots in the flat block, west of De Mun avenue, none having less than 40 feet frontage, and ranging in depth from 135 to 150 feet.

The Skinker road frontage of Hi-Pointe, comprising 10 spacious building sites, and recently placed on the market, is receiving decided attention, according to W. F. Shannon, who is directing the sale of this property in behalf of a syndicate of which Isaac T. Cook is president. It is understood that negotiations are progressing for several more of these lots, all indications being that they will be rapidly absorbed.

The Skinker road lots are restricted to residences costing not less than $6500 and range in price from $75 to $90 a foot. These are the only lots on Skinker road south of Wydown boulevard facing Forest Park, which makes them highly attractive for residential purposes.

Plans are being drawn to connect Skinker road with McCausland avenue on the south and Hodiamont avenue on the north, so as to make a continuous boulevard from Easton avenue to Manchester avenue. Skinker road was recently asphalted.

The Brentmoor is one of a handsome group of apartment buildings recently completed and comprising suites of 10 rooms and five baths. Negotiations are pending for other suites in this building.

Flat Lots Sold in Hi-Pointe

Of Course It Sells

Where else in all St. Louis can you buy a lot in a block like this?

One block for single flats only.

No double flats. No apartments.

A real opportunity for anyone desiring to own a flat and yet be relieved of the objectionable features usually to be had where flats are permitted.

This will be like a block of residences.

Where else can you build a flat in such a beautiful residence section?

One house on each lot. No lot less than 40 feet, and from 135 to 155 feet in depth.

And what a bargain!

Just Think, $45 Per Front Foot

Which price includes all improvements. Even the alleys will be paved and the trees planted, without any additional cost.

In the Washington Heights district, flat property went up to $70.00 per front foot and was entirely built up at this price. In the O'Fallon Park district, $60.00 and $75.00 is the standard price for this class of property, and the same applies to the Tower Grove Heights district, with very little property obtainable at any price.

And remember—this is right at Forest Park, within walking distance of the new $300,000 Christian Brothers College, just up the hill from Washington University, with churches of nearly every denomination conveniently nearby, and splendid stores right in the neighborhood. The new George Dewey $160,000 public schools is just two blocks away. Two car lines within a block.

This is a rare chance and there is no other block like it in any other subdivision in St. Louis. It is located in the highest and most attractive part of Hi-Pointe.

JUST ACROSS DE MUN AVENUE ON TOP OF THE HILL OVERLOOKING THAT ATTRACTIVE SUNKEN GARDEN AND BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE SECTION, WHICH PRACTICALLY HAS BEEN SOLD OUT.

YOU KNOW HOW THE RESIDENCE SECTION SOLD.

HOW THE VALUES INCREASED FROM THE BEGINNING.

Those who purchased residence lots are assured a profit, as lots in that district are now selling at $5.00 to $10.00 per front foot profit to the original purchaser. Few, however, are on the market, as the owners bought to build homes.

Flat property always increases in value faster than does residence property, and the prices of the lots we now offer are sure to increase at once and will be selling at $60.00 per front foot within 60 days.

There is just one block of this property, and eight of the lots have been sold.

This is your opportunity and if you want to participate, you will have to buy at once, as you can readily see that this one block will be rapidly closed out.

A splendid chance for a quick turn-over and a sure profit.

SELECT YOUR LOT TODAY.

Office open every day until dark.

Ask the salesman to show you this beautiful block for single flats only.

L. A. G.—In the case of her larger colonies Great Britain assumes no moral or material responsibility for their revenue or expenditures. Until 1890-1900 the expense of the British navy was borne entirely by the taxpayers of the United Kingdom. Since then some of the colonial members of the empire have manifested a desire to participate in its common defense. Australia has created a navy and Canada had begun the formation of one prior to the present war. Other colonies, such as the Cape and Natal, long ago voluntarily voted sums of money to be expended on imperial defense. Since the beginning of the war the colonies have been notably generous in their free will offerings.

HENRY.—How successful are the latest methods of what is called "plastic" surgery may be judged from 2 pictures both after operation. The operation was performed in 3 stages. First, part of the right lower turbinate bone was cut out, straightened and inserted where the cartilaginous septum had been. Three weeks later the bony hump on the bridge was sawed off and moved downward to fill in the depression over the cartilaginous part. Seven months later a piece from the cartilage of a rib was transplanted to the nose to fill in what still remained of the depression. All these operations resulted in rapid healing and perfect union, and the young man was so delighted with the transformation which his mirror revealed to him that it quite changed his character. He had been careless and untidy about his dress; now he became natty and neat. Dr. Cohen describes several other similar operations. In certain of the French military hospitals the surgeons are successfully performing operations of this sort on wounded soldiers, operations that 2 yrs. ago would have been looked upon as impossible.

C. R.—Salt is a tonic for oily hair. A coarse quality should be sifted, so that no lumps remain, and then mixed with powdered orris root, 2 ozs. to a lb. of salt, sift again to mix well, and then rub well into the hair and scalp; brush out with a bristle brush. * * * Sometimes removal of hair on upper lip can be effected, but not always. Even electric needle is not always sure; and if the root of the individual hair is not killed when the needle is applied or is split, 2 grow in the place of 1. Of remedies, common to all, and about as sure as any—for with some the hair has great tendency of growth—is the application of an exceedingly weak preparation of ammonia, after pulling out the hair with a swift, strong jerk of the tweezers. Do not try too large a place at one time. After wetting the spot with ammonia and it dries apply a little cold cream. Do not use vaseline. Repeat this operation until growth is stopped or greatly diminished. Another way is to rub the hair off with pumice stone being careful not to take off the skin, and apply very weak ammonia. The cold cream must be used afterward to prevent soreness. If ammonia is too strong it makes a painful burn.

SWIMMER.—Published in 1915: Engineers at Seattle are worried by the news that the water of the Miraflores Lake, on the Panama Canal, is becoming salt through the sea water going up through the locks. For they, too, are constructing a canal connecting a fresh water lake with the salt waters of Puget Sound, and if this shall become salt many of the advantages to be attained by the canal will be lost. That salt water will climb up the steps of locks seems so paradoxical that engineers never suspected it. The Literary Digest quotes an article by Paul Whitham, a consulting engineer of Seattle, in which he explains how the water behaves: "Assume that a vessel enters the Seattle lock from the sea at mean tide. The depth of the water in the lock would be 33½ ft., not less than 80 per cent of which would probably be salt water. Fresh water from above would then be let in at the bottom of the lock, which action should mix the fresh and salt water during the process of increasing the depth to 50 ft. The resultant mixture would then be approximately 60 per cent of salt water. Sea water may be said to weigh 64 lbs. per cubic ft., and fresh water 62.5 lbs., a difference of 15 pounds. The 60 per cent salt water would consequently weigh 0.90 lb. per cubic ft. more than the fresh water. When the upper gate is opened to let the ship into Salmon Bay this difference in head will be sufficient to cause the brackish water to flow out of the lock with an initial head of 6 inches along the bottom of the basin, while the fresh water will flow in from the top and take its place. Many industries depending upon securing fresh water are being established on the lake, there is much wood piling used in the docks and the fresh water harbor was planned as a haven for ships out of commission. Seattle engineers are wondering if the lake will become salt enough for the growth of barnacles and the toredo that bores holes in wood, and have asked J. B. Cavanaugh, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., to suggest some method of preventing the salt water from climbing up the locks.

A. B. C.—In the September (1910) issue of Popular Electricity there was a picture of the first electric automobile. That is, it was the first electric road vehicle approaching the lines of present-day construction. If we include under this category any kind of vehicle for road work driven by batteries, an odd machine shown herewith antedates the one above mentioned by 2 yrs. The machine is best described in a letter from Mr. Fred M. Kimball of Boston, to Mr. Day Baker, manager of the New England office of the General Vehicle Co. To quote from this letter, "Agreeable to your request, I hand you herewith negative of the tricycle to which my firm, Fred M. Kimball & Co., adapted the electric drive for Mr. P. W. Pratt of this city, about the year 1889. The switches on the extended arms in front of the seat were used, respectively, for ringing an alarm bell and governing the supply of current furnished the motor. The motor was a 2-pole, back-geared machine and transmitted its power to the foot pedal shaft by means of a sprocket pinion, gear and sprocket chain. From the foot pedal shaft, power was transmitted to the driving wheels by another sprocket chain. The vehicle was equipped with 6 cells of storage battery, and the crate in which the batteries were assembled was supported by spiral springs from the crane arms, projecting fore and aft, respectively, just above the axle. A mechanical band brake, the operating lever of which rises just behind the seat, was an important factor of the outfit, which weighed, all together and ready to operate, about 300 lbs. The flexible leads which connected the motor to the battery are coiled up through the spokes of one of the driving wheels. This machine was first tested in Winthrop Square, Boston, just after the first concrete pavement was laid therein; subsequently, it was run for several weeks on Columbus av., which, at that time, had just been repaved with concrete. The original owner, Mr. Pratt, used the machine 2 or 3 yrs. in Boston, after which it was taken to Atlantic City and was one of the attractions of the Board Walk.

Mr. Auto Owner

Do you know that you are throwing away good hard dollars when you throw away your old tires? Thousands and thousands of dollars are thrown away yearly in this manner by people that don't know that there is such a thing as Steel Studded Chrome Leather Retreads. We will take those old tires of yours, that you consider practically worthless (provided of course, the fabric is not broken and they are free from holes, cuts and stone bruises) and hand you back one that you can't tell from new and which is puncture, blowout and rim cut proof as well as a non-skid and it will cost you about half of what a new tire will cost. For particulars inquire European Re-tread, 3332 Olive street.

Do the "Movies" Help the "Speakies" Art?

DOES acting before the motion picture camera aid one acting in the spoken drama? This question was put to five well-known film stars who are now acting in the "speakies." And because four of the five actresses have returned to the spoken stage after many months in the movies, their views are particularly interesting.

Two of the five assert that their movie experiences have been of real value in improving their acting. Two are equally emphatic in declaring that it has not. One dodges the issue by insisting that the two fields of art—or business, if you prefer—cannot be compared.

So there you are.

"Of course the movies have helped me," says Miss Hazel Dawn, who is now appearing in "Up in Mabel's Room," after four years in pictures. "But their help has been financial rather than technical."

"Making moving pictures is not an art, it's a business," says Miss Evelyn Gosnell, who has just made her stage debut on Broadway. "Besides, acting is an intuitive art, so why give credit where it isn't due?"

"The training I received during my many years in the movies has been invaluable to me in preparing for the speaking stage," asserts Miss Enid Markey, who is appearing in a Broadway farce for the first time in her career. "The movies taught me everything I know."

"Acting before the camera and before an audience is so entirely different that it is impossible to compare them," says Miss Gail Kane, now in "The Woman in Room 13," a successful melodrama. "If I have improved as an actress it is because of study and hard work—not because of my work in the movies."

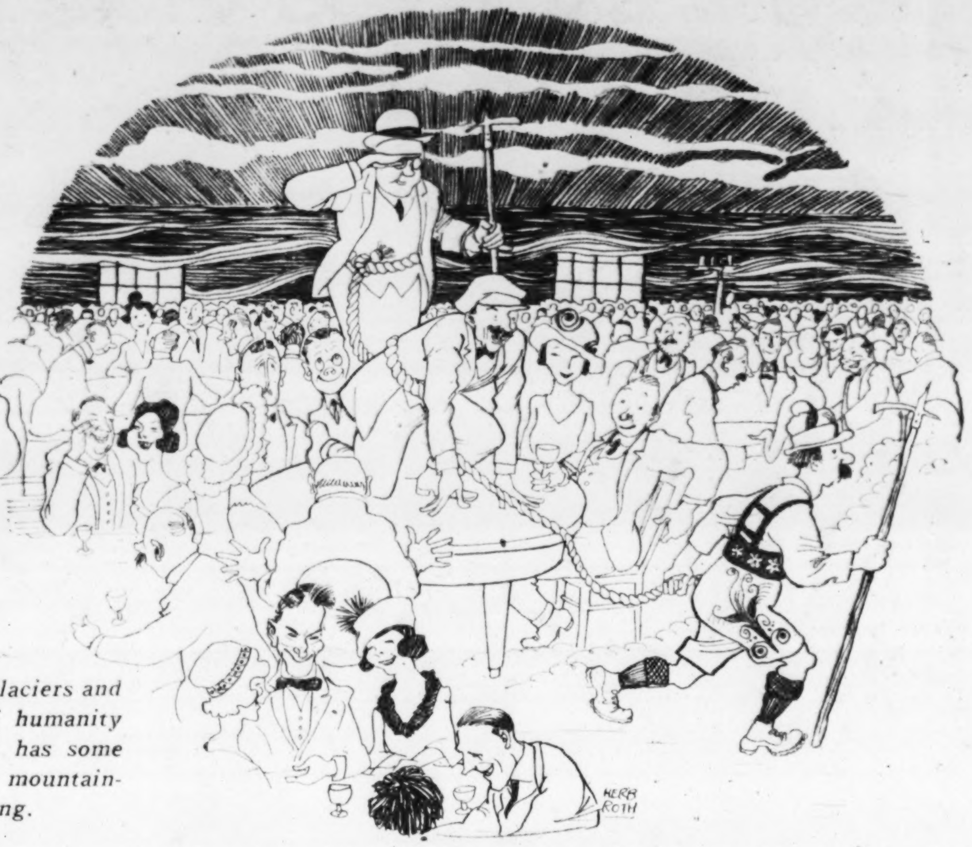
"The movies have helped me tremendously in the spoken drama," declares Miss Alice Brady, who is a Broadway as well as a gelatine star. "Work before the camera shows an actress what not to do as well as what to do."

A Big Saturday Night at Vernon's

NUMBER THREE OF A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON THE PHOTOPLAY INDUSTRY

"Early to bed and early to rise" is motto of movie folk except night before Sunday holiday — Then acres of motors wend way to famous Country Club, where you can see all your favorite stars at once — The "Hawaiian Village" and roulette wheel where millionaire actors risk silver dollars with abandon of Harry Lauder :: :: ::



Exploring glaciers and crevasses of humanity at Vernon's has some affinity to mountaineering.

By KARL K. KITCHEN

GEORGE ADE did not have Los Angeles in mind when he wrote "Early to bed, early to rise and you never meet any prominent people." For the exact contrary is true in the City of Gelatine Stars. The work of the movie colony is done from sun to sun—sunup to sundown. The biggest stars have to be at the studios by 9 o'clock in the morning, "made up" and ready for work. Consequently, hilarious suppers and bilious breakfasts are rare events in fil-lum circles.

There is no naughty, wicked life in Los Angeles. There is not one saloon in the city, and even the restaurants, such as they are, do not sell liquor after 9 p. m. After that hour the night is about as lively as a cat asleep behind a kitchen stove compared with a Bachanalian orgy. So even if the gay lads in the film colony were anxious to "whoop it up," they would find it very difficult to do so.

As for the film actresses, than to indulge in nocturnal gaiety nothing could be more disastrous. Even the slightest traces of dissipation are revealed by the camera. The "night before" is a horrible example on the "morning after," when it is shown on the screen. With the result that in the actor colony enforced virtue is its own reward.

I do not mean to say that the people in the movie game live the life of cloistered nuns or anchorites. Many things go behind the closed doors of Hollywood bungalows which would not be approved by the National Board of Censorship. But outwardly, at least, the conduct of the film folk in Los Angeles is above reproach—first, because dissipation is fatal to their work, and, second, because it is impossible to dissipate.

When the sun sets in Los Angeles—and they have very fine sunsets for such a provincial town—there is nothing to do but dine and go to the movies. Few traveling dramatic or musical comedy companies reach the Pacific coast these days of high railroad fares and those that do succeed in arriving there have long since lost their Broadway flavor. So that unless one is a movie fan one's style is rather cramped.

But, of course, there is one exception, and that is Vernon's. Especially on Saturday night. For Sunday is a holiday as well as a holy day in Los Angeles, and the movie folk may sleep late without fear of disappointing a palpitating public. So when the shades of night fall on Saturday the road to Vernon's is choked with traffic.

The Vernon Country Club, to give the proper name of this institution, is a saloon and dance hall just outside the city limits of Los Angeles. While the sale of liquor is prohibited in the city after 9 p. m., the lid is off just across the boundary lines. So close to the line that it is almost on it is Jack Doyle's, the biggest saloon I was ever in. Twenty-nine bartenders, by actual count, are on duty behind its enormous bar, and after 9 p. m. it is as crowded as a Bronx express. A 12-minute street car ride for the munificent sum of 5 cents takes you from the heart of Los Angeles directly to the door, and anyone you meet will tell you which car to take—which makes it nice.

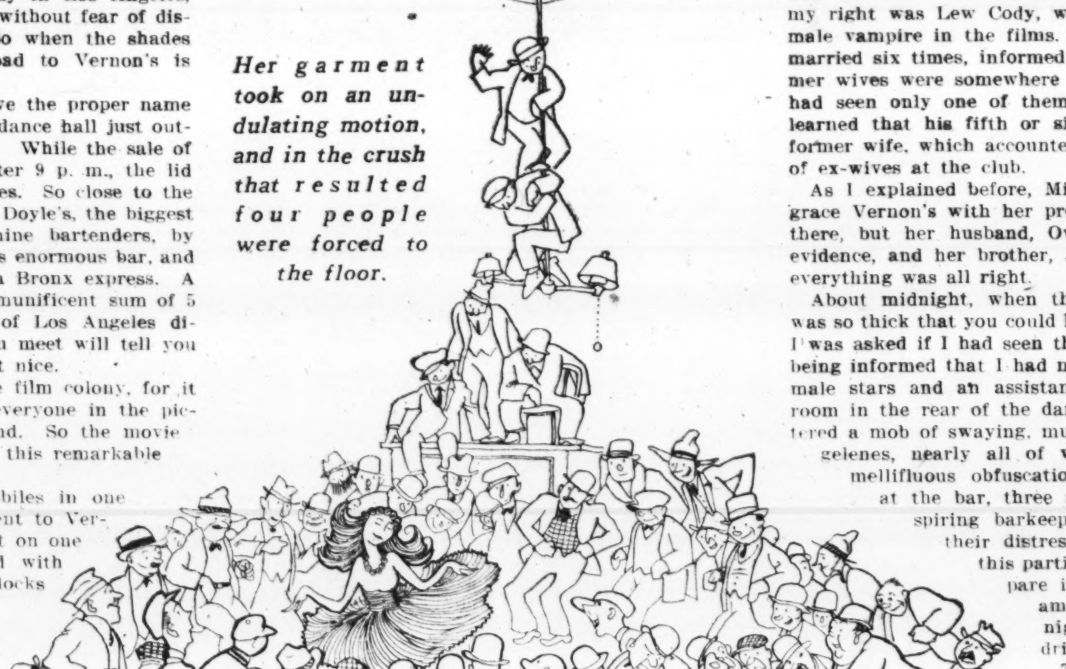
Doyle's is not patronized by the film colony, for it is strictly stag. Besides, nearly everyone in the picture game has a car of some kind. So the movie folk motor a mile or two beyond this remarkable oasis to Vernon's.

I never saw as many automobiles in one place as the Saturday night I went to Vernon's. Not only was a 10-acre lot on one side of the establishment packed with cars, but they were parked for blocks on the roadside and even on the sidewalks. Although it was only 8 o'clock there was a line of people several hundred yards long, waiting their turn to enter the so-called country club.

From the outside the Vernon Country Club did not impress me as a very imposing structure. And that people should stand in line for hours and then pay 50 cents for the privilege of entering its barn-like precincts seemed to be the height of folly. Fortunately, I did not have to wait. My cicerone explained to the head waiter that I had come all the way from New York to see the establishment, and the mention of the magic word "Manhattan" was the open sesame. We not only beat the gate, but the war tax, and from a bewildering maze of cars I found myself in the largest dance hall in the world.

I have been in Paris and Berlin. I have been in Petrograd and in Moscow. But never have I seen anything like Vernon's. Imagine the largest public dance hall you ever saw. All right. Multiply it by 10. Very well. You now have a faint idea of the size of this amazing establishment.

Fifteen hundred people can dance at one time at the Vernon Country Club, which is probably so named because it is neither in the country or a club. How many can drink there at one time is a moot question. Several thousands, I am sure. Nearly that many were drinking at our table. For the tables are placed so closely together that it is impossible to decide where your party ends and the strangers begin. The waiters do not move up and down between the tables to serve refreshments. They appear unexpectedly under your arm, or between yourself and your nearest companion. The table area is quite as great as the dancing space, and on Saturday night the drinking population is the densest in the world.



Her garment took on an undulating motion, and in the crush that resulted four people were forced to the floor.

Close-fitting dancing, next to drinking, is the principal indoor sport, and there is a jazz band on the job that shakes a wicked tune. It is a mining camp honkatonk raised to the nth degree. And as a gathering of moving-picture folk it is in a class by itself. If the doors of Vernon's were locked on a Saturday night and no one allowed to leave for a month, the motion picture industry would come to a standstill.

I will not attempt to name even the big stars who were spending the evening at Vernon's the night I was there. Suffice it to say, Miss Mary Pickford was the only prominent person who was not present. And as I found out later, she was prevented from being present by a slight cold.

There were no less than seven stars at our table, and we were surrounded by a veritable nebula. At my right was Lew Cody, who is the most celebrated male vampire in the films. Mr. Cody, who has been married six times, informed me that three of his former wives were somewhere in the crowd, but that he had seen only one of them to say "hello." Later I learned that his fifth or sixth marriage was with a former wife, which accounted for the small percentage of ex-wives at the club.

As I explained before, Miss Mary Pickford did not grace Vernon's with her presence that evening I was there, but her husband, Owen Moore, was much in evidence, and her brother, Jack, dropped in to see if everything was all right.

About midnight, when the fog from the highballs was so thick that you could hardly see two tables away, I was asked if I had seen the "Hawaiian Village." On being informed that I had not I was escorted by three male stars and an assistant director to another big room in the rear of the dance floor. Here I encountered a mob of swaying, musically inebriated Los Angelenes, nearly all of whom were in a state of mellifluous obfuscation. Scores were lined up at the bar, three and four deep, while perspiring barkeeps vainly tried to appease their distressing situation. As a bar, this particular annex does not compare in size with Doyle's, but I am sure that on Saturday night there is more intensive drinking here.

The center of attraction in this part of Vernon's, called the "Hawaiian Village" from the fact that a Hawaiian band their plays and found that particularly interesting work. In 1889 I taught Miss Julia Marlowe the minuet and later her rustic dance for "As You Like It;" later on I had William Faversham for his dance in "The Faun." Then there was Winston Churchill, the author, who was one of my best pupils back in his boyhood days in St. Louis. I never lose track of my pupils. This is why so many of the grandparents are sending their grandchildren to me at the present time. Then there was J. K. (Fritz) Emmet, Florence Rockwell, Della Fox and a great many others among the theatrical pupils.

"One of the most delightful of the plays directed by me during my entire career was that of "Bobby Shafto," which was given at the Pickwick, at Jefferson and Washington, a good many years ago. The late Mrs. H. D. Pittman, then society editor of the Post-Dispatch, wrote the play and Gus Thomas, the playwright, who then lived in St. Louis, was the coach. Of course, there was a great display of children's dances in the presentation of which it was my pleasure to direct. Lisle Colby, who is now Mrs. Gus Thomas, and a sister of Bainbridge Colby, took the part of Bobby and Nida Stickney played Nida. This was, in my judgment, the most successful children's play that was ever given here. And I very often meet the men and women of today who were very little boys and girls in that cast.

"Then, at the other academy out on Olive near Grand, we had the Imperial as a regular organization, made up of the social leaders, and many other very impressive events, including the Friday cotillon. One of the biggest affairs we ever had there was the reception given during the ceremonies attending the golden jubilee of the late Archbishop Kenrick, which was arranged by Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison, Mrs. Berthoud and other ladies in honor of the jubilarian. It was different from the usual receptions and it was most impressively given. Some of the greatest churchmen were there, including Cardinal Gibbons. And there were other big functions given by social leaders of distinction, many of whom have since passed away."

Prof. Mahler takes a particular pride in telling some of his little pupils—and as he specially features the training of children, he has a great many in the younger classes—that he taught their grandfathers and grandmothers when they were children, and he also urges the little feet of these youngsters on to renewed effort when he tells their owners what clever performers their grandparents were in their day. Of course, when a little 7-year-old miss is told that her grandma or grandpa was the wonder of the class, that pupil is going to uphold the glory of the family, even though it requires some extra effort. Among the names figuring in his third generation classes are the Wades, Rays, Scudders and Striblings. In 1878 he taught Festus J. Wade his choice steps and one of his new pupils is little Leonora Scullin, a granddaughter of the banker. He taught both Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Ray years ago and later on their son, E. Lansing Ray. Now he is teaching Lansing Ray Jr. He had Mrs Scudder as a pupil and lately has been teaching her grandson, who is a son of John Overall.

Prof. Mahler is very proud of his class registers, which he has carefully guarded since he launched his career as a master of the dance. He opens one of these books every once and awhile to show some little girl the name of her grandfather or grandmother. The names in the lists could well be taken and used in the preparation of a "who's who in St. Louis," and it would extend back over a very long period. He also has photographs of many of these pupils, showing how they appeared in their dancing costumes in the older days. He makes it a rule to retain photographs of all of the children, especially those who participate in the plays. Some of these who were very little folks when they faced the camera are among the prominent men and women of the present day, and a number of these families are represented in this year's classes.

Among the pictures shown here are Mrs. George K. Hoblitzelle, who was Miss Laura Harrison; Miss Frankie Elliott, now Mrs. Frances E. Cockrell; Miss Emilie Haydock Camp, now Mrs. F. C. Lake Jr., and Miss Lily Carr, now Mrs. Hope Norton of New York, and Hunt Turner.

"These were among my very best pupils," Prof. Mahler remarked as he looked at the pictures. "Little Frankie Elliot was a wonderful dancer and as sweet a mannered child as one would wish to meet. Her best showing was in the Spanish dances. Little Laura Harrison never came to the class that she did not bring her smile with her. She was active on her feet and just took to dancing naturally. And there was that dear Lilly Carr, who was a granddaughter of Col. J. L. D. Morrison. She was one of the child dance sensations of her time. She danced the Mercury dance for which I had to arrange special music. This same dance is now given by little Virginia Simmons, daughter of Maj. George W. Simmons of the Red Cross service in Russia. That reminds me that George Simmons was one of the best leaders of the cotillon that I ever saw. His only rival here was Olliver Richards. Hunt Turner was a big success in one of the late Mrs. Pittman's plays and, like all the others of his family, was graceful and easily taught. Then there were those pretty Bates children, now grown up, who provided much entertainment for their many admirers in their childhood days.

Prof. Mahler belongs to the old school type of dancing masters and refuses to be stampeded by the jazz or any of its accompanying modern dances. If refusing to accept any of these newer steps places him in the back-number class, he announces his willingness to assume the responsibility and pay the penalty.

"No," says this devotee of the legitimate, "we don't have to respond to any of these newer crazes. They will come and go and the people who love to dance will get back to the old dances, which have furnished so much enjoyment. The waltz will never give way to this latest nonsense, certainly not very long, nor will those old-time favorites like the polkas, schottische, mazurka, quadrille, Saratoga Lancers, Harvard, Ostend and a host of others be crowded out of the ballroom. I saw in my evolution as a teacher the arrival of a large number of dances, some of which proved more attractive than others. When I was a child the polka was just getting into its stride, and then came the esmeralda, which was a pronounced favorite. The schottische came with a rush next and created a furore among the dancers. The lancers and the imperial came pretty close together, then the Parisian varieties of the waltz lancers and the York. The racket was alluring, especially to the younger people, because of the slides it afforded and the resultant opportunity to romp. The barn dance came after the racket and then the Harvard, which had just enough of the waltz in it to afford sauce, as it were. Then we got the Newport, which was well received, as was "Comin' through the rye," which followed. There was a waltz strain in this latter dance which helped a great deal.

"The five-step waltz, which was the next in line of production was entirely too difficult of execution and its life was short. The Oxford minuet, the composition of Horace W. Beek, created a decided stir when it was first given in Chicago, where its composer and creator lived. The Berlin, by Gilbert, came along in 1888, and then the gallop, with its slides and romps remained with us a long time. I have no fear that these absurd new dances will ever permanently displace those I have named."

CHAPTER XX.

SHORT, BUT SIGNIFICANT.

DRAKE abruptly left off questioning Jeanette, and almost imemdiately departed from the house.

As a matter of fact, such a striking change all at once had come over him that the girl was puzzled.

However, notwithstanding his present curt, taciturn humor, she accompanied him downstairs to the big entrance hall.

Here she only vaguely noticed an incident which, had she but known it, was riveting his entire attention; but there was nothing in his manner that yielded a hint of the fact. She was too busy casting back over all that had transpired in their talks, trying to find a clew to his unaccountable austerity, to observe that her brother had appeared suddenly from the rear of the hall and advanced toward them, with the manifest purpose of speaking to the detective, and that her being there disconcerted and deterred him. Nor did she observe how pale and agitated he was.

But Drake, noting these details with inward satisfaction, darted a swift, searching glance at his companion's clouded countenance; then his features became an illegible mask. Nobody could have guessed that he was nerving himself to the performance of something that he very much disliked doing.

With an absent air, he flung a hasty "Pardon me" at Jeanette and abruptly left her side.

Her troubled eyes watched while he went over to Andy Moorehouse—again on guard in the lower hall—with whom he held a brief, whispered conversation. After which he took up his hat and walked to the front door.

Further back in the hall, Chancellor Druse, pale and apprehensive, the fingers of one hand laid tremblingly upon his lips to check their nervous twitching, stood irresolute, wavering between a desire to come forward and unburden his mind and an impulse to go away.

What Drake said to Moorehouse—the only part of it that Chancellor and Jeanette were not presently privileged to hear—was harmless enough as far as the brother and sister were concerned, though Jeanette might have wondered why he was so secret with a matter that was simply a repetition of a request he had made of her, something of which she knew considerably more than did Moorehouse. What Drake whispered was:

"Keep an eye on the Foster woman, but don't let her get next that you're piping her. She's planted something I want. It's a book—a diary. She might betray its hiding place. If she tries to leave the house, let her go; but have one of the boys trail her."

He waited while the other signified that he understood, and then a cryptic smile broke over his lean face. He continued:

"As for Miss Druse and the Tritt girl, you needn't be so particular. I'd rather have it made pretty plain—especially when Chancellor Druse and Burritt are around—that their movements are restricted; but if they try to pump you, don't give them any satisfaction. Keep 'em guessing."

Moorehouse nodded. "I get you," he muttered. "It's a stall."

"Not entirely—as far as it affects Effie, anyhow. With Miss Druse, yes. But you want to make it look like the real thing."

"I'm a bum actor," returned the imperturbable Moorehouse, "but I'll do my best."

It was then that Drake, without a look at Jeanette, took up his hat and walked over to the door.

"The order affecting Miss Druse will stand," said Drake. "And you will see to it that Miss Tritt holds no communication with anybody at all outside of the family and the police."

The granite walls of the big house were thick and the double doors of the entrance muffled extraneous sounds, so that it was not unusual that none of those in the hall should have heard a luxurious motor car when it glided up the drive and stopped outside. Marshall Druse alighted from the car and hurried up the steps.

The master of the house encountered the departing Drake in the vestibule. Jeanette, still watching the detective through the inner glass door, saw her father stop short.

She likewise saw Drake's deferential bow and the sardonic grin that was her father's sole recognition of the salutation. Drake did not hesitate, but continued on his way unperturbed. Her father waited until he was gone, then emitted a short, derisive laugh and came on in to where she still stood.

In the smoker of an elevated express flying cityward sat Fergus Drake, motionless, his dark face saturnine. He was turning over and over in his mind the meeting with Marshall Druse and asking himself a question for which he could find no satisfactory answer.

"What has the old man got up his sleeve?"

La-may Face Powder Does Not Contain Any Rice Powder

Now you can use a pure face powder that is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. It will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. And, it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. The specialist who makes this improved powder used a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and pimples. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size is twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed absolutely pure. Five thousand dollars reward is offered any chemist who finds it contains any white lead or rice powder. Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be a demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York. Save this notice. La-may rouge is also pure.

Anne Rutledge's Sister Tells of Lincoln's First Love

At age of 90, Mrs. Sarah Rutledge Saunders, living in California, remembers amiable young man, tall and gangly, who boarded at her father's tavern in New Salem, Ill., and wooed her golden-haired elder sister—They studied grammar and spelling together—Spent an hour beside her when dying, and stumbled blindly from room, afflicted with a grief that never left him

Mrs. Sarah Rutledge Saunders, 90 years old, remembers Lincoln's courtship of her sister, Anne Rutledge.

DURING the past week occurred the fifty-fourth anniversary of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. The number of those who can remember that tragic day is rapidly growing smaller and smaller. Still fewer are those who can recall the President-to-be as a young man in Illinois. It is a rare coincidence in longevity that one of those rare survivors from nearly a century ago should be no other than the sister of that fair Anne Rutledge, who won Lincoln's youthful heart, and whose untimely death is usually regarded as having contributed much to the melancholy which was one of Lincoln's most familiar traits.

The sister, who was a witness as a little girl of that mysterious love affair of which so much has been written and so little is known, is Mrs. Sarah Rutledge Saunders, who, at the age of 90, is now living in the little town of Sisquoc, in Santa Barbara County, Cal. Before passing to her reminiscences of Lincoln's unhappy love, it will be well to give the accepted version of it, as related in the biography of Ni olay and Hay.

"Lincoln's stature and strength," the account begins, "his intelligence and ambition—in short, all the elements which gave him popularity among men in New Salem, rendered him equally attractive to the fair sex of that village. On the other hand, his youth, his frank sincerity, his longing for encouragement and sympathy, made him peculiarly sensitive to the society and influence of women.

"Soon after coming to New Salem he chanced much in the society of Miss Anne Rutledge, a slender, blue-eyed blonde, 19 years old, moderately educated, beautiful according to local standards—an altogether lovely, tender-hearted, universally admired and generally fascinating girl. From the personal descriptions of her which tradition has preserved, the inference is naturally drawn that her temperament and disposition were very much akin to those of Mr. Lincoln himself.

"It is little wonder, therefore, that he fell in love with her. But two years before she had become engaged to a Mr. McNamara, who had gone to the East to settle certain family affairs, and whose absence became so unaccountably prolonged that Anne finally despaired of his return, and in time betrothed herself to Lincoln.

A year or so after this event Anne Rutledge was taken sick and died—the neighbors said of a broken heart, but the doctor called it brain fever, and his science was more likely to be right than their psychology. Whatever may have been the truth upon this point, the incident threw Lincoln into profound grief, and a period of melancholy so absorbing as to cause his friends apprehension for his own health. Gradually, however, their studied and devoted companionship won him back to cheerfulness."

Mrs. Saunders, who makes her home with her son, James Saunders, was a baby crawling on the floor when Abraham Lincoln first went to Salem and engaged lodgings at the tavern kept by Anne's father. But he remained there several years, and during the last year little Sarah was old enough to be clearely aware of him and to store recollections that are undimmed to this day. She has a vivid picture of the tall, gangling, kindly "Mr. Lincoln," as the family called him, and also of her sweet-tempered, golden-haired sister, Anne, the eldest of five girls.

"Although I was just a little girl," said Mrs. Saunders when seen recently at her home, "I distinctly recall Mr. Lincoln's presence in our home and his courtship of my sister. He was just like a member of the family.

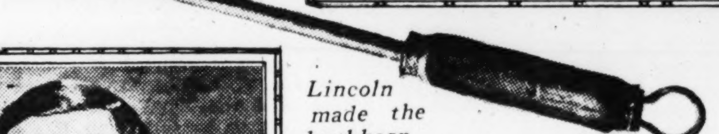
"He was just as much at home in the kitchen as in the living room. One time, when the handle of father's butcher's steel had worn off, Mr. Lincoln fashioned a new one of buckhorn and put it on the steel. We still have the implement, with the handle he put on with his own hands.

"We have other mementoes, too, which we cherish. One, a brittania coffee pot of which Mr. Lincoln was particularly fond and in which my mother often brewed coffee for him. I also have a quilt made from pieces of his clothing, and many other little things by which my memories of him are refreshed. Until recently I had an old grammar which he and Anne used to study earnestly together.

"He was always kindly and gentle, and on evenings when not studying with my sister he would stretch his long legs from a chair in front of the fireplace and keep everyone in an uproar with his funny tales."

Perhaps the most beloved relic in the possession of Mrs. Saunders is a little daguerreotype of Lincoln, sent by him while in the presidential chair to her brother, Robert Rutledge. This was during the Civil War, and Robert, through appointment by the President, was United States Marshal for the State of Iowa. A little, old-fashioned gold frame encircles the picture, which is said to be an unusually true likeness of the donor.

This was many years after the death of Anne, and showed how he cherished the old memories and clung to the different members of the family of her whom he had so loved.



Lincoln made the buckhorn handle on this butcher's steel, preserved in the Rutledge family.

Robert Rutledge, brother of Anne, whom Lincoln appointed Marshal for Iowa during Civil War.

Of the congeniality and joy of the courtship of Anne and Lincoln, Sarah Rutledge has heard her mother often speak.

With Lincoln living in their home, it was almost inevitable that he and the eldest daughter should be drawn together. Anne was also a student by nature, ambitious and said to be superior to any girl Lincoln had ever known. The Rutledges were descendants of a distinguished family, whose ancestor was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Anne was a very beautiful girl, her sister says, with hair of pale gold and eyes large and deep blue. She was slight, graceful and supple, her lover towering above her in his great height.

Her sister remembers her as vivacious, but sincerely religious, and unusually gentle and tender-hearted.

Together the lovers studied grammar and spelling during the long winter evenings. The little grammar, a gift from Lincoln to Anne, was preserved and is in one of the historical museums of the country. Inscribed on the fly leaf in his handwriting are the words, "Anne Rutledge is learning grammar."

On occasions they traversed the wooded slopes back of the tavern and talked of the future. Always the girl fired him to bigger ambitions. It was said that she was his greatest inspiration in all of his earlier labors.

The Rutledges were a long-lived family, but it fell to Anne, beloved of Lincoln, to be the exception. Death, premature and tragic, overtook her when she was but 22 years of age.

Mrs. Saunders vividly recalls the fateful day when that which was earthly of Anne passed out of the life of her family, and of the gaunt man who loved her with the wonderful bigness of his heart.

In a moment of consciousness Anne sent for him when she knew the end was near. He came to her from his work in an adjoining county—rode horseback, urging the animal on in frantic premonition of what awaited him at his journey's end.

Lincoln had one anguished hour with his dying sweetheart. It was in the living room of a pioneer cabin, untouched by grace or beauty. According to Mrs. Saunders, the house of even the well-to-do farmers in these poineer days were seldom more than two big rooms and a sleeping loft, and privacy was the rarest privilege. Her stricken family left them, however, for this hour of parting alone. What was said between them no one ever knew; but when Anne fell into a coma, Lincoln stumbled out of the death chamber, blind and groping.

Two days later Anne Rutledge died, with her wedding day but three weeks off. Lincoln was at the verge of madness. A week after the funeral a friend encountered him wandering in the woods along the river muttering is planted here, was a group of young women in shredded-wheat skirts, who were dancing the "Hula-Hula." At least that is what they said they were dancing, and one of them, a dark-eyed damsel from Texarkana, asked me if I would like to have her dance especially for me.

Flattered by the attention, I replied, "With pleasure," and a moment later the Hawaiian band struck up "On the beach at Waikaiki." At the same moment the shredded wheat part of her garment took on an undulating motion and in the crush that resulted four people were forced to the floor. When they got up and the Texarkana lady finished the dance, the male vampire who was my escort whispered to me to give her a dollar—which, of course, I did.

"Would you like to have me dance for you again?" the would be Hawaiian asked in dulcet tones.

"If you don't mind, I'll give you the dollar and you can cut out the dance," I replied, for I was afraid that I might be killed in the crush. The inhabitants of Los Angeles have many quaint and curious customs.

By forming a flying wedge we were able to reach the roulette tables, which were in an adjoining room. There I saw millionaire film stars hazarding silver dollars with the reckless abandon of a Harry Lauder. The bank, however, paid only in merchandise, another peculiarity of roulette in Southern California. So when I protested that I didn't gamble except for big stakes, I was informed that it would be necessary to go to Tia Juana, a town just across the Mexican border, to gratify my whims. Pitching quoits for two bits a game is about the sportiest game in this section.

It was fully an hour before we got back to our table, and by that time it was occupied by several strangers, who had ordered several drinks on our check, but who were delighted to have us join them. They didn't inform me that they were actors, but I judged so from the fact that one of them asked me if I liked his profile in "When Men Betray."

"Have you heard Blondie sing?" suddenly asked one of my companions, who was anxious for me to take in everything. And being informed in the negative, a blond youth was summoned to our table to entertain me with a few ditties. He was introduced to me as Mr. Charlie Fuhr, the professional entertainer of the Vernon Country Club. And without so much as producing a tuning fork, Mr. Fuhr began to sing a little ditty with the impertinent refrain of "What did Romeo say to Juliet when he climbed her balcony?" This was received with such applause that Mr. Fuhr rendered an encore. For these two ditties Mr. Fuhr, or "Blondie," as he was called, was presented with two silver dollars by one of my companions.

"He's a real artist, isn't he?" commented the assistant director, who was trying to find his own glass of Scotch.

"Yes," I replied. "I think he would be great in pictures."

By 2 o'clock in the morning, when everyone said the gaiety was at its height, I was obliged to ask for a gas mask or an excursion to the outer air. And as the proprietor had neglected to provide gas masks for visiting firemen and newspaper men I worked my way to the entrance. Imagine my surprise when I discovered that the man in the box office was still selling tickets.

"What time do you close up here?" I asked the doorman, explaining that I was a stranger in a strange land.

"Oh, about 4 o'clock tonight," he replied. "This is an off night tonight. We had twice as many people here last Saturday."

The utter hopelessness of trying to live up to it overcame me. I bought back my overcoat, summoned my cicerone and motored back to the sleeping City of Angels.

"Saturday night is the only night we movie people cut up," my cicerone explained. "The rest of the week we go to bed early and everything."

After a Saturday night at Vernon's I should think early retiring would not only be advisable, but absolutely necessary—for a week at least.

I haven't recovered yet. But movie folks are of another race.

to himself. He sat for hours in brooding melancholy, which his friends feared would end in suicide. Many times he was found in the lonely burial grounds, seven miles from the village, with one arm across her grave, reading his little pocket Testament.

Until he went to Springfield a few years later to practice law, he disappeared at times. Everyone knew that he was with Anne, sitting for hours by the grassy mound that covered her. "My heart is there in the grave with her," he told his friend William Green.

Eventually he went back to his old occupations, bearing himself simply, doing his duty as a man and citizen, but his fits of melancholy returned, a confirmed trait he never lost.

It was said by those who knew them both that her death taught him compassion and gave him the strength to endure all the sorrows that fell to his lot after the backwoods boy had become the first citizen of the nation.

Long years after, Lincoln, in speaking of Anne to a friend, is reported to have said: "I truly loved the girl," and, after hesitating a moment, he added, "and I have loved the name of Rutledge ever since."

Sarah Rutledge Saunders and her family moved to California from Illinois in 881, the survivors being Mrs. Saunders, James, the son with whom she makes her home, and another son, Dr. H. G. Saunders of Santa Barbara.

"Aunt Sallie," as all the neighbors call her, recently sent to the Old Salem Lincoln League, which is rebuilding the town in its original form, a silk, hand-made quilt that she pieced together since her eightieth birthday, unaided by glasses. The quilt is to be sold and the proceeds used toward the restoration of old landmarks.

The Rutledge tavern, with the old plowed hillside beyond that played such a large part in the life of young Lincoln, where he wooed, won and lost his first sweetheart, is to be preserved forever as a public shrine.

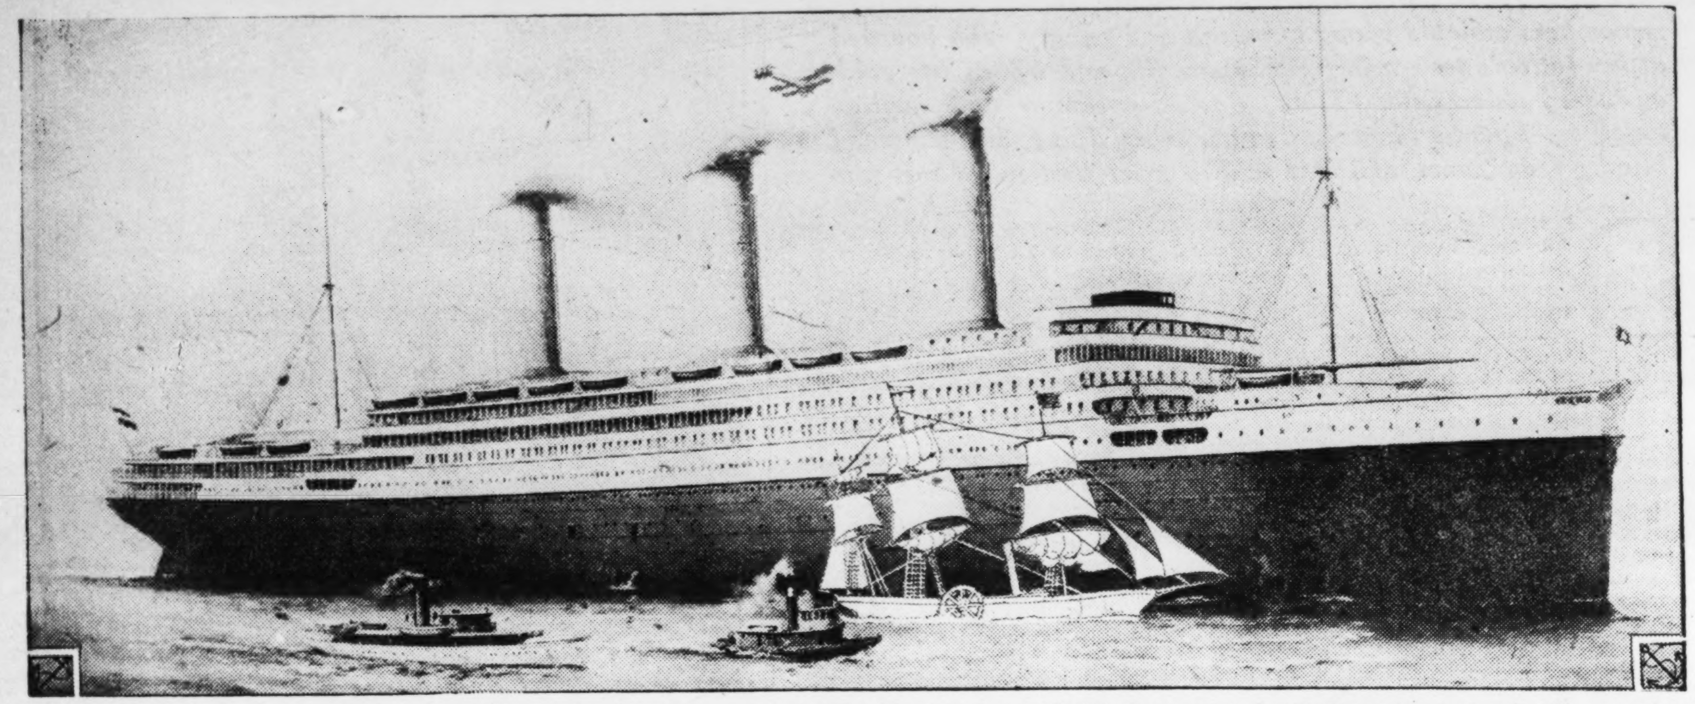
Attempt to Cross the Atlantic in Airship Comes on 100th Anniversary of First Trip of Steam Vessel Over Same Seas



The Savannah, first steamship to cross the Atlantic, 100 years ago next May, compared with the great Leviathan, largest of all merchant ships afloat today.

How the saucy little Savannah set out and amazed the entire world in May, 1819—Crossed to Liverpool and then called at St. Petersburg and some of the Balkan ports—Was twice mistaken for a ship afire on account of her smoke and sparks—Pursued all day by a British Man-of-War who wanted to give succor WIND and weather permitting, with propitious fortune attending, the broad Atlantic will have to submit, during the approaching month of May, to another conqueror; and when this is done, history will write a new epoch and make due note of one more striking coincidence. With confidence marking every stage of the preparatory steps for the forthcoming airplane flight across the sea, only the extremely pessimistic can see any chance of failure. The hope that fills every American breast is that a machine carrying the Stars and Stripes will be the first to achieve this spectacular feat, just as a ship carrying the same proud standard—the Savannah—was the first to cross the broad and turbulent bosom of this mighty stretch of water, just 100 years ago.

t was on May 24, 1819, that this diminutive steamship of 350 tons register, driven by a 90-horsepower engine and carrying sails for emergencies, weighed anchor and set out from the Southern city in whose honor she was named, destined for Liverpool. The thousands of spectators who assembled along the docks to witness the departure shuddered, shook their heads and uttered prophecies of disaster. It was, in their judgment, too much to hope for, and the log of that portentious voyage discloses the outstanding fact that human nature was about the same then as it has been ever since. The gloomy one who cherishes forebodings was there, as he invariably is, wherever and whenever the bigger tasks are undertaken.

This impudent little creation of wooden hull, steam power, iron paddle wheels, rigging and sails, did just what she started out to do. She crossed to Liverpool and came back literally with the bacon, which she annexed while in English ports. She did even more. When the English lords of the sea and the foremost of the big mariners over there were still wondering, Capt. Moses Rogers of New London, Conn., the Yankee skipper of the saucy little vessel, announced that he was going to take a run to St. Petersburg, Stockholm and Kronstadt before his return to Savannah and no one doubted that he would keep his word. He made the trip safely and returned to Savannah, where he was welcomed with much rejoicing. He had done what Fulton had accomplished on the Hudson; he had demonstrated that steam was to be thenceforth the motive power of the world's commerce, whether on ocean, lake or river.

The Savannah was built by Francis Fickett at New York in 1818, and at that time no one had any thought of utilizing the little vessel as a steamer. She was constructed especially as a sailing packet for the New York and Havre line, but Capt. Moses Rogers, who had been employed both by Fulton and Stevens in command of several of their early Hudson River steamboats, induced Scarborough & Isaacs, a wealthy shipping firm in Savannah, to buy the boat and equip it with an engine and boiler. The vessel was about 100 feet long, 28 feet beam, with a depth of 14 feet; was fitted with an inclined engine, built by Stephen Vail of Speedwell, N. J. The boiler was made by Daniel Dod of Elizabethtown, N. J. She was provided with side wheels of wrought iron, with eight radial arms, and so constructed as to be folded up like a fan. They were 16 feet in diameter, with eight buckets for each. The wheel houses were of iron, covered with canvas. She carried a full complement of spars and sails, and the cost of the entire craft and fittings was but $50,000.

The vessel left New York for Savannah March 28, 1819, and arrived there on April 6, taking 8 days and 15 hours for the trip. The engine was operated but 41 hours of this time, the sails being utilized during the remainder of the run. Before setting sail for Liverpool the Savannah took a trial trip to Charleston, S. C., and returned to her dock on May 1, whereupon Capt. Rogers began overhauling his little vessel for the supreme trial, with never a thought of failure. There have been several dates of this sailing, given in different histories, but John H. Morrison, who went into the subject fully in his maritime writings, fixed it definitely as May 24. May 21 the owners announced in the Savannah Republican that the vessel would leave for Liverpool the next day and expressed their willingness to take all passengers and freights that might be offered. No passengers cared to take chances, however, and from all accounts there was very little freight. Commenting on this lack of confidence, the Savannah paper made this observation:

> No passengers, however, offered themselves, probably from a fear either of the ship being set on fire by her furnaces or blown up by the explosion of her boilers; and, we have reason to believe, carried no freight. Nevertheless, the Savannah weighed her anchor two days later than the day advertised and sailed for Liverpool.

Twice in her journey across the ocean the Savannah was mistaken for a sailing vessel on fire because of the volume of smoke that was seen pouring out of her single stack. The first was on May 29, when an American ship stood by for several hours to offer aid, but received no such signal. This captain, reporting the incident on his arrival at Newburyport, said that the odd-looking craft went much faster with her fire and smoke than he could go with all sails set, hence he gave up the chase after a few hours. Her next venture of this kind was off the Irish coast, when she was chased the whole day by the British revenue cruiser Kite of the Cork station. The commander of this vessel wondered why the burning ship ran away, when he was trying to offer succor to what he thought was a craft in great distress.

The Savannah proudly whistled as she entered the harbor of Liverpool June 20, making the voyage in 27 days. Only 80 hours of this time was made under steam. Naturally, the arrival of the queer looking vessel created a profound sensation in England and the press of London had much to say on the noteworthy achievement. One of the versions had it that the pursuing English cutter fired several shots across the bows of the Savannah, when she refused to stop for assistance. This account set forth that the officer in charge, who, of course, had never seen a steamer before, could not believe his eyes when he saw a vessel under bare poles running away from his craft with smoke belching from her, not to mention an occasional shower of sparks. When the vessel did slow down the English officers were taken aboard and shown how it was so easy for the Yankee creation to outdistance one of his majesty's fastest cutters.

The June number of the Fortnightly Review for 1819 made this comment:

"An American steamship of 300 tons burden, the Savannah, the first ship to ever use steam in navigation, has just crossed the Atlantic and arrived at Liverpool this week. Her propelling engine is 90 horsepower. Her model is perfect in all its proportions and she is a beautiful specimen of naval architecture. We welcome her the more heartily as she flies the American flag."

It was about Sept. 29 that the ship left the Russian waters on her return voyage and made several stops at some of the Baltic ports. Then she had a very stormy passage all the way back to her home port, where she arrived on the last day of November. A few days later she went to New York, stopping at Washington on the way, where there was official recognition given the accomplishment of Capt. Rogers. At New York the machinery was removed from the hull and sold to James P. Allaire; thereafter the Savannah went into the service as a wind-jammer, for which she was originally created—a melancholy fate for such a brave little craft. She made regular sailing trips between New York and Savannah, commanded by Capt. Holdredge, until Nov. 5, 1821, when she was driven ashore by a northeaster and wrecked opposite Moriches, on the south shore of Long Island, proving a total loss.

The steam cylinder of the Savannah's engine was exhibited at the Crystal Palace Fair in New York in 1856, and attracted much interest. Naval architects took the view that the Savannah would not prove a success as a cargo carrier as the space needed for her machinery and fuel supply left very little storage room for freight. She had no fuel bunkers and when she shipped her wood and coal supply for a voyage her carrying space was almost entirely taken, a defect that was guarded against in the construction of the Sirius and the Great Eastern, which were built some years later.

Savannah does not propose to let the anniversary of this notable achievement pass by unnoticed, as the arrangements now under way for a fitting celebration furnish ample testimony. There will be exercises along the entire water front and there will be oratory as well.

straight to a New York camp. When he beheld his new Lieutenant his limbs became flaccid and his heart leaped into his throat and his mouth stood open and his eyes bulged. It was young Hatton—Harry Hatton—whose aristocratic nose he had punched six months before, in the Hatton pulp and paper mill.

And even as he stared young Hatton fixed him with his eye, and then came over to him and said: "It's all right, Werner."

Buzz Werner could only salute with awkward respect, while with one great gulp his heart slid back into normal place. He had not thought that Hatton was so tall or so broad-shouldered.

He no more thought of telling the other men that he had once knocked this man down than he thought of knocking him down again. He would almost as soon have thought of taking a punch at the President.

The day before Thanksgiving Buzz was told he might have a holiday. Also he was given an address and a telephone number in New York City and told that if he desired he might call at that address and receive a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner. They were expecting him there. That the telephone exchange was Murray Hill and the street Madison avenue meant nothing to Buzz. He made the short trip to New York, foundered about the city, found everyone willing and eager to help him find the address on the slip, and brought up finally in front of the house on Madison avenue. It was a large, five-story stone place, and Buzz supposed it was a flat, of course. He stood off and surveyed it. Then he ascended the steps and rang the bell. They must have been waiting for him. The door was opened by a large, amiable-looking, middle-aged man, who said, "Well, well! Come in, come in, my boy!" a great deal as the folks in Chippewa, Wis., might have said it. The stout old party also said he was glad to see him, and Buzz believed it. He went into a great bright sitting room, with books in it, and a fireplace—very cheerful. There were not a lot of people in the room. Just a middle-aged woman in a soft kind of dress, who came to him without any fuss, and the first thing he knew he felt acqainted. Within the next 15 minutes or so some other members of the family seemed to ooze in, unnoticeable. And tall, black-haired girls, who made you think of girls in the movies, only her eyes were different. And then, with a little rush, a girl about his own age, or maybe younger—he couldn't tell—who came right up to him, put out her hand and gave him a grip with her hard little fist, just like a boy, and said, "I'm Joyce Ladd."

"Pleased to meetcha," mumbled Buzz. And then he found himself talking to her quite easily.

Then four other men in uniform came in, and it turned out that three of them were privates like himself, and the other a Sergeant. Their awkward entrance made him feel more than ever at ease, and 10 minutes later they were all talking like mad, and laughing and joking as if they had known these people for years. They all went in to dinner. Buzz got panicky when he thought of the knives and forks, but that turned out all right, too, because they brought these as you needed them. And besides, the things they gave you to eat weren't much different from the things you had for Sunday or Thanksgiving dinner at home, and were cooked the way his mother would have cooked them—even better, perhaps. And lots of it.

After dinner Mrs. Ladd said: "What would you boys like to do? Would you like to drive around the city and see New York? Or would you like to go to a matinee or a picture show? Or do you want to stay here? Some of the Joyce's girl friends are coming in a little later."

And Buzz found himself saying: "I—I'd kind of rather stay and talk with the girls." Buzz, the tough guy, then blushed like a shy schoolboy.

They did not even laugh at that. They just looked as if they understood that you missed girls at camp. Mrs. Ladd came over to him and put her hand on his arm and said: "That's splendid. We'll all go up to the ballroom and dance." And they did. And Buzz, who had learned to dance at places like Kearney's saloon and at the mill shindigs, glided expertly about with Joyce Ladd of Madison avenue, and found himself seated in a great window seat, talking with her about Kipling. It was like talking to another fellow, almost, only it had a thrill in it.

They all stayed for supper. And when they left Mrs. Ladd and Joyce handed them packages, that later turned out to be cigarettes and chocolate and books and soap and knitted things, and a wallet. And when Buzz opened the wallet and found, with relief, that there was no money in it he knew that he had met and mingled with American royalty as its equal.

Three days later he sailed for France.

Then a new life. Life in a drab, rain-soaked, mud-choked little French village, sleeping in barns or stables, or hencoops. If the French were "a gay people, fond of dancing and light wines," he'd like to know where it came in! Nothing but drill and mud, mud and drill, and rain, rain, rain. And more drill. And then—into it!

Into it with both feet. Living in the trenches. A first terrifying stretch of this, then back to the rear again. More mud and drill. Marches so long and arduous that walking was no longer walking, but a dreadful mechanical motion. Then back into the trenches.

And, finally, over the top! Very little memory of what happened after that. A rush. Trampling over soft heaps that writhed. Someone yelling like an Indian, with a voice somehow like his own. The Germen trench reached. At them with his bayonet. He did it. Into the very trench itself. A great six-foot German struggling with a slim figure that Buzz somehow recognized as his Lieutenant, Hatton. A leap at him like an enraged dog.

"G'wan! Who you shovin', you big slob, you!" yelled Buzz. And he thrust at him—and through him. The man released his grappling hold of Hatton's throat, and grunted and sat down. And Buzz laughed. And the two went on, Buzz behind his Lieutenant. And then something smote his thigh, and he, too, sat down. The dying German had thrown his last bomb, and it had struck home.

Buzz Werner would never again do a double shuffle on Schroeder's drugstore corner. Hospital days. Hospital nights. Wheel chair. Crutches. Home!

It was May once more when Buzz Werner's train came into the little red-brick depot at Chippewa, Wis. Buzz, spick and span in his uniform, looked down rather nervously, and yet with a certain pride, at his left leg. When he sat down you couldn't tell which was the real one. As the train pulled in at the Chippewa Junction, just before reaching the town proper, there was old Bart Oschner ringing the bell for dinner at the junction eating house. Well, for the love of Mike! Wouldn't that make you laugh? Ringing that bell, just like always, as if nothing had happened in the last year!

Buzz leaned against the window to see. There was some commotion in the train, and someone spoke his name. Buzz turned, and there stood Old Man Hatton, and a lot of others, and he seemed to be making a speech, and kind of crying, though that couldn't be possible. And his father was there, very clean and shaved and queer. Buzz caught words about bravery, and Chippewa's pride, and he was fussed to death and glad when the train pulled into the Chippewa station.

But there the commotion was worse than ever. There was a band, playing away like mad. Buzz's great hands, grown very white, were fidgeting at his uniform buttons, and at the stripe on his sleeve, and the medal on his breast. They wouldn't let him carry a thing, and when he came out on the car platform to descend there went up a great sound that was half roar and half scream. Buzz Werner was the first of Chippewa's men to come back.

After that it was rather hazy. There was his mother. His sister Minnie, too. He even saw the Kearney girl, with her loose red mouth and her silly eyes, and she was as a strange woman to him. He was in Hatton's glittering automobile, being driven down Grand avenue. There were speeches and a dinner, and later, when he was allowed to go home, rather white, a steady stream of people kept pouring in and out of the house all day. That night, when he limped up the stairs to his hot little room under the roof, he was dazed, spent and not so very happy.

Next morning, though, he felt more himself, and inclined to joke. And then there was a talk with Old Man Hatton—a talk that left Buzz somewhat numb and the family breathless.

Visitors again all that afternoon.

After supper he carried water for the garden, against his mother's outraged protests. "What'll folk think!" she said, "you carry water for me?"

Afterward he took his smart visored cap off the hook and limped downtown, and leggings and uniform very spick and span. At the corner of Grand and Otuagamie, in front of Schroeder's drugstore, stood what was left of the gang, and some new members who had come during the year that had passed. He knew them all.

They greeted him at first with a mixture of shyness and resentment. They eyed his leg, his uniform and the metal and ribbon thing that hung at his breast. Bing and Red were there. Casey was gone. Finally Red said:

"G'wan, Buzz, give us yer spiel about how you saved young Hatton—the simp!"

"Who says he's a simp?" inquired Buzz, very quietly. But there was a look about his jaw.

"Well, anyway, the papers was full of how you was a hero. Say, is that right that old Hatton's goin' to send you to college? Huh? Je's!"

"Yeh," chorused the others. "Go on, Buzz. Tell us."

Red put his question: "Tell us about the fightin', Buzz. Is it like they say?"

It was Buzz Werner's great moment. He had pictured it a thousand times in his mind as he lay in the wet, cold trenches, as he plodded the muddy French roads, as he reclined in a wheel chair in the hospital garden. He had them in the hollow of his hand. His eyes brightened. He looked at the faces so eagerly fixed on his utterance.

Buzz opened his lips and the words he used were the words he might have used a year before, as to choice. "Ah, there's nothin' to tell. A guy didn't have no time to be scairt. Everything kind of come at once, and you get yours, or either you didn't. That's all there was to it. Je's, it was fierce!"

They waited. Nothing more. "Yeh, but tell us"——

And suddenly Buzz turned away. The little group about him fell back respectfully. Something in his face, perhaps. A quietness; a new dignity.

"S'long, boys," he said. And limped off toward home.

And in that moment Buzz, the bully, the braggart, vanished forever. And in his place—head high, chest up, eyes clear—limped Ernest Werner, the man.

QUAINT LEGENDS ABOUT HELGOLAND

HELGOLAND, naval wall flower during the world war, now seems as much of a military white elephant as the German battleships, says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society which describes the "North Sea Gibraltar."

The fortifications, built to defend the entrance to the Kiel Canal, will be dismantled, dispatches state, and the English propose to use leftover allied and German explosives to blast away the towering rocks which make the island so highly strategic.

Nature has been unkind to this little island of fairy tales and ghost lore, with its quaint, kindly folk and their queer customs, the bulletin continues. The sea all but washed it away, brought shoals of fishes but wafted them back across the channel, cut the island in two, but was unkindest of all, perhaps, when it planted the pleateau rockland to be a magnet for German militarism. It did not take long, after Germany acquired the island from Great Britain in 1890 to convert it into a combination superfoot and Coney Island for overstout German tradesmen.

Thirty miles west of the Schleswig-Holstein coast, less than a square mile in area, the few thousand fisher folk had little chance to make any protest. Yet the sturdy islanders, for centuries, had well defined ideas about self-determination—even if they never heard the phrase.

Upon one memorable occasion the women of the island decided its political fate. About the time William Penn was settling Pennsylvania a Danish Admiral captured the island's fishermen one night while they were placing their nets. He threatened to hold them as hostages until the island surrendered to Denmark. Wives, mothers and sisters arose "to a woman" and forced the Schleswig garrison to relinquish any claim upon Helgoland to Denmark.

Two centuries ago a violent upheaval of the sea churned out the connecting link between the sand lowland and cavern-pierced cliffs. Fairies were supposed to lurk above the great staircase that mounted to the rocky heights. When a baby was born its feet were buttered promptly, so that the child would slip through the fingers of a fairy who might try to exchange it for a fairy's babe.

The ghost of Monk's Rock—the rock was authentic, but disappearered long ago—was supposed to be that of a missionary sent by the King of Denmark to preach Luther's doctrine. When he would not recant, the islanders pitched him over a cliff, but many declared they heard his voice the following night, and many times thereafter.

In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries Helgoland was a center of the North Sea herring fisheries. Then the herring veered back to Scotland's coast and the islanders handed down a tale of the impiety by which they forfeited the boon. Yearly they would form in procession to march about the island to invoke the coming of the fish. One spring, when they had gone but half the route, the herring were sighted. They abandoned the rite and made for the boats. The herring never came again.

Until a few years ago horses were unknown to the island. One story has it that when an old woman saw an Englishman ride one up the hills she dropped dead from the shock of what she believed was a supernatural creature.

Before Germany acquired the island and sent 2000 soldiers there to man the fort, the citizens were law abiding. When there was an occasional misdemeanor there was no need to send a police "look-out" warning. An islander, when arrested, would go to the little jail and inform the keeper he was to be imprisoned.

Visited by so many nationalities, the islanders absorbed customs and ideas of many lands, yet seemed to adorn each with a distinctive touch. They even had a curious quirk in their Satan—a wooden leg—so painted in a picture of "The Temptation of Christ" in the historic church by the island artist of the seventeenth century, Andreas Amelin'. Hence a Schleswig saying: "In Helgoland the devil goes on crutches."

Fifty-Year Retrospect of St. Louis Society - Its Social Customs and Favorite Dances -

Jacob Mahler, who for half a century has been teaching ball room accomplishments to youngsters, recalls belles and beaux of the days when even the schottische was unknown

SCHWEIG PORTRAIT

SHIVERY gyrations may come, have their day and disappear, but their very existence will never obtain recognition from Jacob Mahler, veteran maestro of the dancing art, who will next month celebrate his fiftieth anniversary as a master of this polite profession in St. Louis.

Prof. Mahler has given 50 years of his life to teaching, though he will not admit that he belongs in the old men's division; and anyone beholding him elucidating the intricate movements of some of his dances, would feel very much averse, if actuated by a sense of justice, to giving him such a classification. He pleads guilty to 62, which is not a very large number for one who has been constantly employed for a half century, but he accounts for the apparent disparity between age and performance with the explanation that he was only 12 when he took up the profession as a master of dancing. There have been many dancing steps in his career, but never a wiggle, and he is proud of this record; furthermore, if he is permitted to have a diamond jubilee, the same solemn truth will have to be asserted. Only the expression of the refined will be permitted.

Such was the declaration of this St. Louisan as he reviewed his long career to a Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine writer. Sitting at his desk, surrounded by photographs of pretty children in dancing costumes, he became reminiscent and talked entertainingly of his work in this city since he started out, at the very early age of 12, to establish the name of Mahler as a real institution in the affairs of St. Louis.

"And looking back," he observed, "it has been a wonderful experience. You see, I became a teacher by right of inheritance, as my father was a master and a musician as well. He came to St. Louis in 1857 from Chicago, when I was but 4 months old. I had four brothers and a sister, and father made us all teachers in the same profession. In most homes where there are very little folks, the question usually asked deals with the ability of these youngsters to strike out and walk, but that rule didn't apply in our home. Our progress in dancing was the main thing with my parents. Reared in this school of training, it was not to be wondered at that I was a good dancer at the age of 4. And so it was with my brothers and sister. At that time the whole system of instruction was different from what it is now. The pupils used to stand in a line and there was my father and all the rest of us, ready to take on our partners as the class work progressed.

"But how St. Louis has changed since then! Our first academy was where the Merchants Exchange now stands. We fronted on Pine and looked across the street on Ben de Bar's Opera House, where I used to go very often to see him playing with Lotta and other clever people of that time. But that was only recreation, as dancing was the business that father picked out for us, and when we were not at school we were practicing or taking some of our pupils through the steps. I always liked it. It just took and held my fancy from the start, and no matter how long the hours, I never felt that it was real work. Sometimes a teacher will lose patience with a pupil that just won't take hold, but I never felt that way even as a youngster. I would take a special pride in getting a graceful movement out of the roughest and most unpromising material. My father had an orchestra, as well as the school, and this was in demand for all the big balls. Leading the grand march or showing someone else how to perform that function, was his unquestioned privilege in those days; and how we children used to swell with pride at the grace and elegance he would impart to these formal and impressive affairs. He was in the forefront of the big ball the city gave to the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward, but I was too young then to even get a look at that classic event.

"We went from Third and Pine to Fourth and Lucas avenue, where we had our school over a carpet store. We were on the third floor, and though there was no elevator, nobody seemed to mind. From there we went to a place on Washington avenue between Seventh and Eighth, where I found plenty of work with the classes. While we were there my father was presented with a magnificent silver service by his pupils. Miss Ada Bradford, now Mrs. Howard Blossom, made the presentation speech. We were all proud of that gift, and as pride is usually punished in some way, we got ours the very next day, when burglars came in and carried off that silver service. I can remember that event better than anything else that happened there, as it impressed me most vividly. Then we went to the southwest corner of Twelfth and Pine, thence to Olive street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, across from what is now the Public Library, but at that time was a public park. Then we moved to the old Masonic Hall, at Seventh and Market, where we remained a long while. It was while we were there that my father took ill and died.

Laura Harrison now Mrs. Hoblitzelle.

"No doubt many of the older St. Louis people will recall the Saturday matinees that were the feature of that place. These were given from 5 to 7 and were attended by the most prominent people in the city. They would, on leaving, take supper at Faust's, the Southern, Planters or some other good place, and then attend the theater. It was a very common thing to see the matinee crowds at the theaters after the dance and supper. We closed there about 1878. Then for a while we were at 1007 Locust, next to Dr. Holland's church. All these years we used to give private lessons at homes and clubs in addition to our regular classes at the academy. In this way we were always in touch with the leading society people of the city.

"The old Germania Club, at Eighth and Gratiot was then a notable place and many St. Louis women who are now grandmothers were the life of these affairs. It was at the Germania that we taught Gen. Grant's children. In this connection I received a very pleasant reminder when I was engaged for a few seasons at the home of Mrs. Henderson, wife of Senator John B. Henderson, at Washington. After one of these receptions a lady came up to me and extended her hand, asking me if I did not recall her. She then introduced herself. She was Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, whom he had taught at the old Germania.

"I remember a bit of fun we used to have at the Henderson home when they lived here at 3010 Pine street. Gen Henderson was very fond of looking at others dancing, but he could neither dance himself nor take the time to learn. But he used to come in when the others were practicing, take a few steps and then tell the company to watch him if they wanted to get it right.

"In 1878 I began my first year as master of ceremonies at Congress Hall, Saratoga, N. Y., where I served for 22 seasons. That was a wonderfully popular place and the parties, balls and receptions were splendidly conducted. It was here I met Burton Holmes, as a youngster but 12 years old, and taught him his first steps. A most apt pupil was this little chap, and every time he comes this way we manage to have our little visit. And between classes and formal affairs I had plenty of other employment, keeping me pretty busy at all season. I instructed some of the most distinguished theatrical stars in the special dancing required for tiptoeing stealthily along the hall past my door and toward Fanny's.

"I arose, and, hurrying over to the door, pressed my ear against it and listened. The muffled footsteps halted at Fanny's door. There was an instant of silence; then I heard a faint scratching sound like a person scratching on the panels with his nails. There would be a pause while the prowler harkened for a response, then came the scratching again. At last the person in the hall grew impatient and hazarded a light knock. This had the desired effect; I heard Fanny bounce out of bed and go over to the door."

Her listener was interested, and showed it by the intentness with which he followed the recital. Jeanette pursued:

"There was no light in my room, so I took a chance and noiselessly opened my door an inch or two.

"There stood Burritt, and from the rays of a dim light farther down the hall, I saw he had a parcel wrapped in newspaper in his hand. He was in slippers and dressing gown, as though he had not yet gone to bed, or had just arisen. I couldn't see Fanny, but could hear the hissing of her excited whispering.

"She seemed to be expostulating with Burritt, whose face wore an anxious, pinched look, like a man wretchedly ill. He kept peering over his shoulder, first one way and then the other, up and down the hall; it was plain that he was afraid of being caught in this mysterious midnight proceeding.

"All the while they stood there whispering he was irresolutely holding the parcel out toward Fanny, obviously urging her to relieve him of it—something she seemed loath to do. And all the while his nervousness was increasing, too.

"At last he ended the matter. With sudden determination he thrust the parcel through the door—doubtless into her hands—and turned quickly and scuttled away.

"The only words I caught of this mystifying scene were uttered by Fanny. Just before she closed the door, I heard her exclaim under her breath, in a tense, passionate utterance: 'Old fool! I ought to have known better than to trust anything to you!' Then, without a sonnd, she shut the door."

Drake made no effort to disguise his curiosity.

"H'm!" he muttered. "It is queer, seeing how Burritt seems to dislike her."

"I puzzled myself to sleep over it. The scene was, for me, queerer than you imagine."

"Why?"

"Because the parcel was just the shape and size of sister Elizabeth's diary. It reminded me of it at once."

The hidden significance of this notion quickened the intentness of his look. He hurriedly asked:

"The missing diary? Have you let Burritt or her know that you saw them?"

"No. I haven't mentioned it to another soul."

"That's good. We'll settle this thing right away. Keep Fanny busy in some other part of the house—away from Burritt—and I'll search her room. Hurry, please."

He waited until he believed the coast to be clear, then started toward the room designated by Jeanette as the one at present occupied by Fanny.

Of a sudden he halted. He had nearly collided with Burritt, who was in the hall close to the door, which Jeanette, in departing, had left wide open.

Whether the meeting was accidental, or whether the butler was deliberately spying upon him, Drake could not determine. But it was manifest that Burritt was disagreeably surprised by the unexpectedness of the meeting; he was badly flustered, and, without uttering a word, hastily improvised an errand in some remote part of the house. He moved rapidly away, his felt-soled house shoes, which fell soundlessly upon the floor, and his somber livery, which merged with the dimness of the hall, making his swift, silent departure as uncanny as a ghost's.

It was now pretty plain that Burritt was weighed down with a gnawing anxiety. The pinched look that Jeanette had noticed in his smooth English face had not disappeared.

As Drake resumed his way to Fanny's room, he pondered over the encounter, wondering why the man should be so troubled when nothing had occurred to make him imagine that suspicion was being aimed in his direction. After the butler's final examination by Inspector Callahan, he had been dismissed in a manner intentionally calculated to lull whatever personal fears he might have entertained.

Drake's search of Fanny's room was thorough and systematic, not overlooking hat boxes, dresser and chiffonier drawers, and a trunk and suit case whose locks he experienced no difficulty in picking. He was an adept at this sort of thing and worked rapidly.

But he didn't discover a thing which, to his notion, could by any possibility be made to account for the wrapped parcel. He failed to find even the newspaper wrapping.

The episode, of course, might be accounted for in a quite simple manner; but the parcel had strongly suggested Elizabeth's diary to Jeanette's mind, and for the first time Drake gave serious consideration to the missing book; it had become more than merely a puzzling detail.

If indeed it had been the diary that was handed from butler to maid amid the circumstances so secret and clandestine, it assumed a vastly greater importance in the detective's estimation than the simple record of the invalid's thoughts and impressions had borne—the light and harmless means of occupying hours that otherwise would have been insufferably dull.

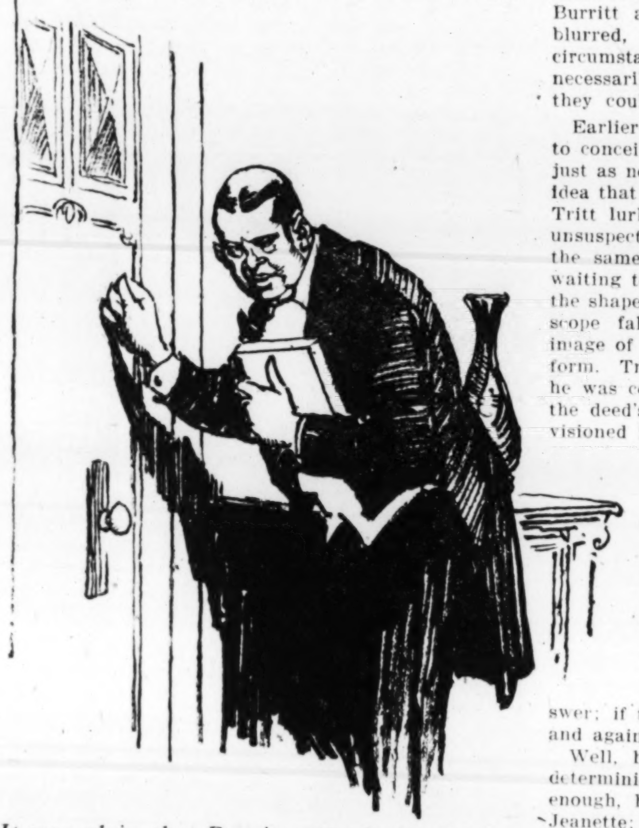
And he recalled Jeanette's description of the diary—metal bound and padlocked, she had said.

But why padlocked?

Of course, the metal-bound edges, the hasp and the lock all were quite appropriate to a diary as embellishments; the thing might be an artistic trifle that appealed to Elizabeth's taste; but then again, it might be something vastly different, something that might be of tremendous consequence in fathoming the mystery. No telling what secrets were hidden away from prying eyes by the silver padlock, between the covers which the invalid had so jealously guarded!

His thorough search brought to light nothing that even remotely suggested the diary.

He took considerable pains to remove all visible evidences of his quest; then, pondering the strange incident that Jeanette had witnessed, trying to determine what weight he should attach to it and to the missing diary, he bent his steps toward the corner of the second story about which now clustered such sinister associations.



"It was plain that Burritt was afraid of being caught."

The rooms were untenanted; yet they seemed to hold a grisly sort of fascination for him. Shunned by both family and servants, as if they harbored the germs of pestilence, dust already had begun to settle upon everything in them—pictures, tapestry, furniture, all alike; the tightly drawn green blinds produced a wan dimness through which the wall-paper patterns took on the semblance of mold and blotches of decay. In the silence of their present isolation, their atmosphere had grown forbidding, conjuring up mental images of the sanguinary deed that had been committed there, and tincturing the thoughts with gloom and dejection. The unbroken stillness was akin to an expectant hush, as if the walls were waiting to behold a fitting sequel to the tragedy that they had so recently looked down upon.

Drake was abruptly brought up before the boudoir door, which he was surprised to find standing a few inches ajar. He felt that it ought not to be open, but tightly shut, like the door of a mortuary vault.

Then he became aware of a mumble of voices, somewhere beyond, in Jeanette's former bedroom.

Hesitating no longer, but moving noiselessly, he rapidly traversed the corner of the boudoir and looked into the bedroom.

He confronted two pale and startled figures, whose nervous alarm was conspicuous notwithstanding the room's dimness. One might have inferred that he was the last person on earth whom they expected or wanted to see, and one also might have guessed that they were asking themselves: how much did he overhear? Their consternation must have lent the quiet, self-possessed detective grim and portentous attributes which he did not ordinarily possess.

Drake was wondering why, of all the available rooms in the immense house, these two individuals should be here with their heads together, unless their confab was of so secret a nature that they feared even to be seen talking together.

Burritt, with dropped jaw, stared at him an instant; then slewed round and vanished into the maids' room, his abrupt departure bearing every sign of headlong flight, as it had appeared when Drake encountered him in the hall some minutes previously.

In a measure, Chancellor Druse recovered his balance. He seemed of half a mind to address the intruder, but thought better of it, for he affected an indifference that he was far from feeling, and strode into the bathroom without a word—obviously on his way to Elizabeth's apartments.

After the doors had shut behind them, Drake dropped into the nearest chair. The encounter and its precipitate ending had a strange effect upon him. Flooded as his mind was with a vivid image of Demar lurching across the room and falling through the door into Jeanette's boudoir, the presence and departure of Burritt and young Druse somehow crystallized his blurred, confused mental picture of the antecedent circumstances that had resulted in the stabbing, which necessarily had been vague and indefinite because they could not certainly be reconstructed.

Earlier in the investigation it had not been difficult to conceive of Jeanette administering the stab wound, just as now it was hard for him to get away from the idea that Sears had inflicted it; he could imagine Effie Tritt lurking in the bathroom, lying in wait for the unsuspecting victim, or Burritt and Chancellor doing the same in the maids' room, or the three of them waiting together in the latter room; and now, just as the shapeless collection of colored glasses in a kaleidoscope fall into a symmetrical pattern, his mental image of the fatal deed all at once assumed a distinct form. True, it might not be the correct one; but still he was confident that he had resolved the manner of the deed's perpetration, whether or not his mentality visioned its perpetrators.

He recalled the idea that had been suggested to him by his first examination of the locus criminis and the body, and how it had been strengthened by Dr. Frye, the Coroner's physician—that Demar possibly might have staggered the length of the bedroom after receiving his death wound.

If he had thus traversed the length of the room, he had been stabbed by some person or persons concealed in either the bathroom or the maids' room. If the former room, there were Sears and Effie to supply the answer; if the maids' room, Chancellor Druse, Burritt—and again Effie.

Well, he might clear the fog a little further by determining one small detail, which, as yet, oddly enough, had not been touched upon. He would ask Jeanette; perhaps she would know about it. But before he could follow up the impulse, she herself came into the bedroom from the boudoir, obviously in quest of him.

"Well?" she queried, as he rose to his feet.

"Nothing doing," was his blunt rejoinder. "If it really was the diary she had last night, she's planted it somewhere outside. Keep on watching her. The chances are she'll betray its hiding place."

The girl frowned. "I'm horribly disappointed," she complained. "I was so sure, and now"——

"And now you're not," he concluded for her, when she fell silent. "Well, neither am I. So let's try to make sure of something that we have an immediate chance of putting through."

"What is it?"

His searching regard rested upon her for some moments; then he asked:

"Do you know where Sears' knife was shortly before it was used to kill Demar?"

The question seemed to open her mind to a wave of possibilities that she had never dreamed of before. Her eyes widened, and she stared at him with an awed look before replying.

"Why, yes," in a hushed voice, "I do know where it was."

"Where?"

"Effie found it where he had left it on the table yonder. He forgot it, I suppose. While I was talking to Elizabeth and showing her my new gown, Effie came into the room. Her entrance seemed to be the signal for Elizabeth to divulge her sad story. But before she launched upon that Effie spoke. She showed us the knife, told us what it was, where she'd found it, and suggested that one or the other of us charge ourself with not letting Ray forget it."

"Surely Miss Tritt didn't stand holding it all the time?"

"Oh, no! She laid it upon Elizabeth's table."

Upon the invalid's table beside her bed! Where

NUMBER THREE — THE TOUGH GUY

Ma Werner, looking up from the garden patch, saw Buzz lounging homeward.

YOU could not be so very tough in Chippewa, Wis. But Buzz Werner managed magnificently with the limited means at hand. Before he was 19 mothers were warning their sons against him and brothers their sisters. Buzz Werner not only was tough—he looked tough.

His name was not really Buzz. His mother called him Ernie, and she alone in all Chippewa was unaware that her son was the town tough guy. But even she sometimes mildly remonstrated with him for being what she called kind of wild. If Buzz's real name was lost in the dim mists of the boyhood, the origin and fitness of his nickname were apparent after two minutes' conversation with him. Buzz Werner was called Buzz not only because he talked too much, but because he was a braggart. He buzzed!

By the time Buzz was 14 he was stealing brass from the yards of the big paper mills down in the flats and selling it to the junk man. At 19 he was running with the Kearney girl.

Twenty-five years hence Chippewa will have learned to treat the Kearney-girl type as a disease and a public menace. Which she was. The Kearney girl ran wild in Chippewa, and Chippewa will be paying taxes on the fruit of her liberty for a hundred years to come. The Kearney girl was a beautiful idiot, with a lovely oval face, and limpid, rather wistful blue eyes, and fair, fine hair, and a long slim neck. The Kearney girl was forever running up and down Grand avenue, which was the main business street. She would trail up and down from the old armory to the postoffice, and back again. When she turned off into the homeward stretch on Outagamie street there always slunk after her some stoop-shouldered, furtive, loping youth. But he was never seen with her on Grand avenue. She had often been up before old Judge Colt for some nasty business or other. Old Judge Colt meted out justice according to his lights. This nymph it was who had taken a fancy to Buzz Werner. It looked very black for his future.

The strange part of it was that the girl possessed little attraction for Buzz. It was she who made all the advances. Buzz had sprung from very decent stock. And something about the sultry unwholesomeness of this girl repelled him, though he was hardly aware that this was so. Buzz and his gang would meet downtown of a Saturday night, very moist as to hair and clean as to soft shirt. They would lounge on the corner of Grand and Outagamie, in front of Schroeder's brightly lighted drug store, watching the girls go by.

This corner, or Donovan's pool shack, was their club, their forum. Here they recounted their exploits, bragged of their triumphs, boasted of their girls, flexed their muscles to show their strength. And all through their talk there occurred again and again a certain term whose use is common to their kind. Their remarks were prefaced and interlarded and concluded with it, so that it was no longer an oath or a blasphemy:

"Je's, I was sore at 'm. I told 'im where to get off at. Nobody can talk to me like that. Je's, I should say not!"

If Buzz's family could have heard him in his talk with his street corner companions they would not have credited their ears. A mouthy braggart in company is often silent in his own home, and Buzz was no exception.

If the Werner family had been city folk they would, perforce, have burrowed in one of those rabbit-warren tenements that line block after block of city streets. But you small-town laboring man is likely to own his two-story frame house, with a garden patch in the back and a cement walk leading up to the front porch, and roast pork on Sundays. The Werners had all this, no thanks to Pa Werner; no thanks to Buzz, surely, and little to Minnie Werner, who clerked in a candy store and tried to dress like Angie Hatton, whose father owned the biggest pulp and paper mill in Fox River Valley. No, the house and the garden, the porch and the cement walk and the pork roast all had their origin in Ma Werner's tireless energy, in Ma Werner's thrift, in her patience and unremitting toil, her nimble fingers and bent back, her shapeless figure and unbounded and unexpressed (verbally, that is) love for her children. An expert stonemason by trade, Pa Werner could be depended on only when he was not drinking or when he was not on strike or when he had not quarreled with the foreman. An anarchist, pa—dissatisfied with things as they were, but with no plan for improving them.

It was in May, a fine warm sunny day, that Ma Werner, looking up from the garden patch where she was spading, a man's old battered felt hat perched grotesquely atop her white head, saw Buzz lounging homeward, cutting across lots from Bates street, his dinner pail glinting in the sun. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

As Buzz espied her his gait became a swagger. At sight of that swagger Ma knew. She dropped her spade and plodded heavily through the freshly turned earth to the back porch as Buzz turned in at the walk.

"What's the matter, Ernie? You ain't sick, are you?"

"Naw."

He took the back steps at a bound and slammed the kitchen door behind him. Ma Werner followed heavily after. Buzz was hanging his hat up behind the kitchen door. He turned with a scowl as his mother entered.

She abandoned pretense. "Ernie, your pa'll be awful mad. You know the way he carried on the last time."

"Let him. He ain't worked five days himself this month."

Buzz turned toward the inside wooden stairway that led to the half-story above. But his mother followed, with surprising agility for so heavy a woman. She put a hand on his arm. "Such a good-payin' job, Ernie. An' you said only yesterday you liked it. Somethin' must 've happened."

There broke a grim little laugh from Buzz. "Believe me, something happened good an' plenty." A little frightened look came into his eyes. "I just had a run-in with young Hatton."

The red faded from her face and a gray-white mask seemed to slip down over it. "You don't mean Hatton! Not Hatton's son. Ernie, you ain't done"——

A dash of his street-corner bravado came back to him. "Aw, keep your hair on, ma. I didn't know it was young Hatton when I hit 'm. An' anyway, nobody his age is gonna tell me where to get off at. Say, w'en a guy who ain't 23, hardly, and that never done a lick in his life except go to college, the sissy, tries t' "——

But the first sentence only had penetrated her brain. She grappled with it, dizzily. "Hit him! Ernie, you don't mean you hit him! Not Hatton's son! Ernie!"

When she quavered her next question, "What was he doin' in the mill?" he turned toward the stairway again, flinging his answer over his shoulder.

"Learnin' the business, that's what. From the ground up, see? Well, believe me, he don't use me as no ground-dirt. An' when I'm takin' the screen off the big roll—see?—he comes up to me an' says I'm handlin' it rough an' it's a delicate piece of mechanism. 'Who're you?' I says. 'Never mind who I am,' he says, 'I'm workin' on this job,' he says, 'an' this is a paper mill you're workin' in,' he says, 'an' not a boiler factory. Treat the machinery accordin', like a real workman,' he says. The simp! I just stepped down off the platform of the big press and I says, 'Well, you look like a kinda delicate piece of mechanism yourself,' I says, 'an' need careful handlin', so take that for a starter,' I says. 'An' with that I handed him one on the nose."

"Oh, Ernie, f'r God's sake! What they goin' to do to you?"

He was half way up the narrow stairway, she at the foot of it, peering up at him. "They won't do anything. I guess old Hatton ain't so stuck on havin' his swell golf club crowd know his little boy was beat up by me."

He was clumping about upstairs now. So she turned toward the kitchen, dazedly. She glanced at the clock. Going on toward 5. She got out a panful of potatoes and began to peel them skillfully, automatically. At 5:30 pa came in. At 6 Minnie. She had to go back to the candy store until 9. Five minutes later the supper was steaming on the table.

"Ernie," called Ma, toward the ceiling. "Er-nie! Supper's on." The three sat down at the table without waiting. Pa had slipped off his shoes and was in his stockinged feet. They ate in silence. It was a good meal. A European family of the same class would have considered it a banquet. There were meat and vegetables, butter and home-made bread, preserves and cake—true to the standard of the extravagant American laboring-class household.

Buzz usually cleaned up after supper. But tonight when he came down he was already clean-shaven, clean-shirted and his hair was wet from the comb. He took his place in silence. His acid-stained work shoes had been replaced by his good tan ones. Evidently he was going downtown.

Buzz ate little. His mother, forever between the stove and the table, ate less. But that was nothing unusual in her. She waited on the others, but mostly she hovered about the boy.

"Ernie, you ain't eatin' your potatoes; look how nice an' mealy."

"Don't want none." He slouched from the table.

Minnie, teacup in hand, regarded him over its brim with wide, malicious eyes. "I saw the Kearney girl go by here before supper, and she rubbered in like everything."

"You're a liar," said Buzz.

Buzz had been headed toward the front porch. He hesitated and turned now and picked up the newspaper from the sofa. Pa Werner, in trousers, shirt and suspenders, was padding about the kitchen with his pipe and tobacco. He came into the sitting room now and stood a moment, his lips twisted about the pipe stem. He regarded Buzz with beady, narrowed eyes. "You let me see you around with that Kearney girl and I'll break every bone in your body. The huzzy!"

Suddenly, "There she is again!" cried Minnie from her bedroom. Buzz shrank back in his chair. Old man Werner, with a muttered oath, went to the open doorway and stood there, puffing savage little spurts of smoke streetward. The Kearney girl stared brazenly at him as she strolled slowly by, a slim and sinister figure. Old man Werner watched her out of sight.

Buzz, with a wary eye up the street, slouched out to the front porch, into the twilight of the warm May evening. Charley Lembke, from his porch across the street, called to him: "Goin' downtown?"

"Yeh, I guess so."

"Ain't you afraid of bein' pinched?" Buzz turned his head quickly toward the room just behind him. He turned to go in. Charley's voice came again, clear and far-reaching: "I heard you had a run-in with Hatton's son, and knocked him down. Some class t' you, Buzz, even if it does cost you a job."

From within the sound of a newspaper hurled to the floor. Pa Warner was at the door. "What's that! What's that he's sayin'? Come in here." Pa Warner faced him, black-browed. "Is that right, what he said? Lembke? Huh?"

"Sure it's right. I had a run-in with Hatton, an'

Presently she looked up, to meet the scrutiny that strove constantly to read her heart and mind.

"Now," she said, "you have touched upon one of the two things I wanted to talk to you about. I had little else to do last night but think; it occurred to me then."

He waited for her to proceed, which she did at once "If you remember, I told you that Ray Sears was very anxious to finish the telephone line on the afternoon of the sixth. It was owing to his importunity about it that I consented to smuggle him into the house, somewhere around 5 o'clock.

"Now then, if he was so desirous to complete the work that day—which you know he did not succeed in doing—wouldn't you imagine that he would have the instruments here in readiness to be installed?"

Drake started, and an anticipatory thrill shot through him. Jeanette added:

"Well, he never brought the instruments to the house. There should have been four sets: one for Elizabeth's invalid table, one for the maids' room, one for my bedroom and the fourth for my boudoir."

"And what do you conclude from that?"

"It's scarcely exact to say that I drew any conclusions at all from his failure to provide the instruments; but a possibility occurred to me, one that is likely to affect your theory of his guilt more than anything that has as yet transpired."

For the first time since his return to the house Drake smiled. He asked:

"You do not suspect him at all, do you, Miss Druse?"

"I never have," was the quiet answer.

"I must confess that you have stirred my curiosity," he said. "The significance of his omission hasn't struck me yet."

"Why," she eagerly explained, "his carrying my sister away was not done on the spur of the moment; that's the possibility that came to me during the night. It may have been an elopement, if a helpless creature like Elizabeth can participate in anything so romantic. They may have planned it days—weeks—ago. It looks to me as if his eagerness to complete the telephone only hid a pretext for him to gain access to her apartments. That the murder befell on the same night was merely a strange fatality."

It was certainly a startling idea; but, after a few moments of consideration he slowly but decisively shook his head in dismissal of it.

"If," he supplemented, "Sears was looking forward to something that must have been, it is reasonable to assume, a happy event in his life, why should he have harbored angry resentment against the date? Think how vindictively he slashed June 6 on his calendar."

"We don't know that it was he who did that," she argued. "Fanny Foster had every opportunity to mutilate the sheet herself. She's crafty, cunning; I wouldn't put it beyond her."

The detective remained silent, thoughtful.

"Let me tell you something, Mr. Drake. I know women perhaps better than you do. This is just the sort of trick that a woman like Fanny would play—mean, sly, underhand."

"But she's desperately in love with him!" he expostulated.

The girl smiled tolerantly at his ignorance of her sex.

"In natures like hers," she elucidated, "the barrier between love and hate is as thin and fragile as a cobweb veil. She believed that both Sears and I had scorned her, and, worse than that, ridiculed her love for him. She was as eager to hurt him as she was me."

Drake's mind was flooded with an array of fresh possibilities. Could it be that, after all, he was clear off the trail, following a specious but false scent?

His deliberate nature would not hastily jump at conclusions. He was reluctant to accept the obvious inferences to be drawn from the postulates which Jeanette had laid before him. He would first go ahead and ask the questions that he had meant to ask her yesterday, and see if they would open the way to further developments. Before he could speak, however, she again addressed him.

"The other matter I wanted to speak about this morning has to do with Fanny. It's rather mysterious."

He politely put the subject of Fanny aside.

"If you don't mind. There are one or two things I want to go into first. We can come back to Fanny later."

He paused a moment while his thoughts went back to the scene in Jeanette's bedroom when Effie had been so frightened by the floating cigarette paper. By and by he spoke:

"Miss Druse, I'm going to ask you a rather unusual question. I want you to consider carefully before you reply."

A startled expression came into the dark eyes.

"What is it?" she asked.

"You know all the persons who had the opportunity to stab Demar; there were yourself, your brother, Burritt, Miss Tritt and Sears—five individuals. Now, which of those five is Miss Tritt so fond of or so attached to, that her soul should be filled with mortal terror and anguish at the thought that his or her hands were stained with another man's blood?"

The question disturbed her, he plainly saw; roused a quick apprehension in her mind that told him he had touched upon a phase of the tragedy of which possibly she held the key. Encouraged by the change in her manner, he waited eagerly for her answer, but she did not reply directly.

"I can't answer that question offhand," she uneasily demurred, "unless you give me an inkling of what you are aiming at. I shan't blindly or carelessly drop a word that may work an injury to anybody, for I see that the potentialities of this case are as dangerous as exposed gunpowder. But," she ended with abrupt earnestness, "believe me, I shall be honest with you, even if I refuse to tell what you want to learn."

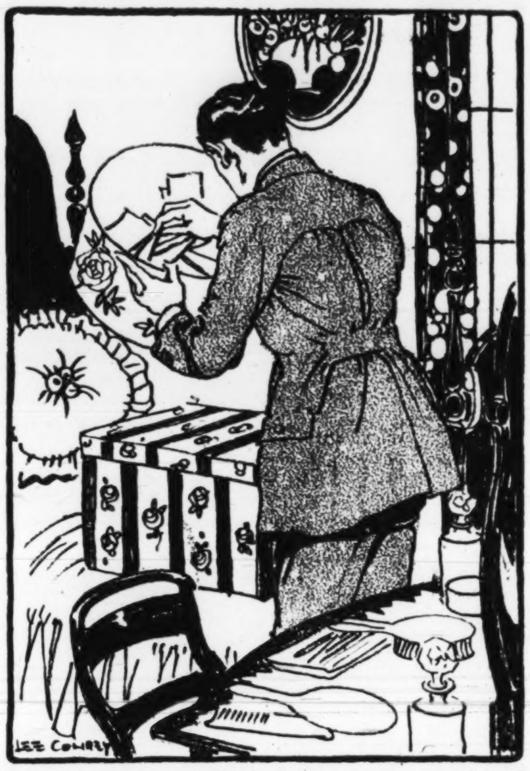
He did believe her; it was impossible for him not to.

Again reverting to the scene with Effie, he described her overwhelming terror at sight of the cigarette paper, and how she had tottered back into the bathroom, pushing the door shut behind her and leaning against it. He pursued:

"And while the others were absorbed in the thing that had frightened her, there was one little incident that nobody but myself heard. When she got into the bathroom she clung to the doorknob as if she were about to collapse. I heard her moan something—words that seemed to be literally torn from her."

Jeanette breathlessly waited for him to go on.

"This is what I heard through the door: 'Oh, why did you do it? Why did you do it? This will be the death of the one who loves you best in all the world!' "



"Drake's search of Fanny's room was thorough and systematic."

"What in the world does it mean?" whispered Jeanette.

"The meaning is plain enough—whom was she referring to? That's what I'd like to know. If Miss Effie wasn't upbraiding herself, she was desperately concerned over the effect the murder might have on somebody attached to the murderer. In either case—she knows who stabbed Demar!"

The color had receded from the girl's cheeks as she listened, leaving them as pale as ashes. She sat silent, motionless, her troubled eyes steadily watching him. Her anxiety quivered in the question she asked him:

"Have you turned aside from Ray Sears? Are you now trying to fasten responsibility for the crime upon my brother?"

"Chancellor? No; I didn't have him in mind at the moment. If he killed Demar, who besides would die as a result?"

Jeanette sat tense, white lipped; she did not answer. He stood up and looked down at her. After a pause, he added:

"I see Miss Effie's outburst signifies something that frightens you. What is it? Why should you be afraid that her words implicate him?"

All at once she laughed in a way that dismissed the idea as being too preposterous to consider seriously.

"That can't possible be the explanation of Effie's words. I happen to know that she doesn't believe Chancellor guilty.

His look bored into her as he demanded: "Is there anything between them?"

"Indeed, no; nothing more than that she idolizes him as a sort of demigod; but it is a silent adoration, the existence of which my brother does not in the least suspect. To Effie—poor child—he is a model of male perfection. To be candid, Chancellor is—well, somewhat self-centered. I believe, outside his work, he harbors only one real, genuine, unselfish emotion—his deep and boundless affection for Elizabeth."

Drake's eyes glinted between narrowed lids. After all, Effie's involuntary utterance was susceptible of several interpretations. In the light of her devotion to Elizabeth, she might have been immediately lamenting her own impulsive act because of its effect upon her benefactress. Or, what was still more probable, she might have been overwhelmed with consternation in which Elizabeth would take Sears' murderous act. And then, lastly, if Chancellor struck the fatal blow, Effie could have been doubly shocked and dismayed—for herself as well as for Elizabeth.

He devoted some seconds to earnest consideration of the last-mentioned postulate, and finally broke the silence by asking:

"Are Miss Tritt and Burritt very fond of each other?"

"Why, yes. In their undemonstrative English fashion, they are warmly attached to each other."

It was vexatious that he could not definitely apply Effie's words to some specific one of the individuals under suspicion. But they made it appear much less improbable that it was Chancellor Druse and his father's butler who directed the blade that ended Demar's life. While Burritt was surveying the library window he was frightened by the discovery that it had been left open; a careless oversight that might condemn the two of them.

And then, how easy it could have been for Chancellor, with Burritt's assistance, to spirit his sister out of the house and away!

CHAPTER XIX.

THE VEIL LIFTS A TRIFLE.

AT this moment the feeling of which Drake was most keenly sensible was one of pleasure; he was glad because once more he could have faith in Jeanette.

While he would not admit to himself that Sears was innocent, he was willing to allow that Jeanette might be honest in her beliefs touching the two crimes. Because, possessed as he was of more data upon which to base his own opinions, his mind was open to any suggestion, any clew that might color the affair with an entirely different aspect. At any moment, experience reminded him, some new angle might be encountered—in the most unexpected way the case might take a sudden turn—that would solve the riddle in a manner never imagined.

Without slighting any other phase of the murder, he had devoted himself to the theory of Sears' guilt—first, by reason of the fact that nearly all the circumstances tended most strongly to implicate Sears; next, if Sears were indeed guilty, the end of the investigation would be accomplished by establishing his guilt. On the other hand, if Sears were innocent, discovery of all the facts would free him from the odium of suspicion and remove one very confusing factor from the puzzle. Accordingly, the search for the murderer would be narrowed, because Sears would no longer have to be considered. Drake would rather believe that Jeanette herself had struck the blow than have the conviction forced upon him that she was insincere, her behavior only a pretense and sham.

As a consequence of considering Sears in the light of a blameless and much misjudged young man, Drake's attention must perforce be confined to the four other actors in the tragedy. Now, eliminate Jeanette, and but three remained: Chancellor Druse, Burritt and Effie.

Was it possible that the quest had narrowed down to these three?

Or, taking another step forward, was it unreasonable to speculate upon the likelihood of the three having acted in concert? They had a common cause upon which to unite, one by which they might hope to justify a deed of such tragic desperation.

He came back from his abstraction to find the gaze of the fine dark eyes bent anxiously upon him. He smiled and asked:

"What else is it you wanted to tell me?"

Jeanette's animation abruptly returned.

"It's about Fanny," she replied. "Since I agreed to retain her I've been watching her. I've taken pains to be pleasant and agreeable with her; but I'm afraid that she noticed my covert espionage. It seemed not so much to make her anxious as it puzzled and worried her."

"And what was the upshot of your surveillance?"

"She's been sleeping in a room adjoining the one which I've occupied the last two nights. Some time in the dead of last night—it must have been 2 or 3 o'clock—I started broad awake, with a nervous feeling that somebody was moving about in my room. Almost at once, though, I realized that I must be mistaken; nobody was in the room, but somebody was licked him, and given it my time. What you goin' to do about it?"

The two men faced each other. The one's a sturdy man boy nearing 30, with a great pair of shoulders and a clear eye, a long, quick arm and a deft hand—these last his assets as a workman. The other gnarled, prematurely wrinkled, almost gnome-like. This one took his pipe from between his lips and began to speak. He began with a string of epithets. Old Man Werner had perhaps been something of a tough guy himself in his youth. As he reviled his son now you saw that son, at 50, just such another stocking-footed, bitter old man.

I don't say that this thought came to Buzz as his father flayed him with his abuse. But there was something unusual, surely, in the nonresistance with which he allowed the storm to beat about his head. Something in his steady, unruffled gaze caused the older man to falter a little in his tirade, and finally to stop, almost apprehensively. Buzz stood regarding him with his unblinking stare. Finally:

"You through?" said Buzz.

"Ya-as," snarled Pa. "I'm through. Get to hell out of here. You'll be hung yet, you loafer. A good-for-nothing bum, that's what. Get out of here!"

"I'm gettin'," said Buzz. He took his hat off the hook and wiped it carefully with the lower side of his sleeve, round and round. He placed it on his head jauntily, and strolled indolently, nonchalantly down the front steps, along the cement walk to the street, and so toward town. The two old people, left alone in the sudden silence of the house, stared after the swaggering figure until the dim twilight blotted it out. And a sinister something seemed to close its icy grip about the heart of one of them.

Out of the shadows of the great trees stepped the Kearney girl like a lean and hungry cat. She thrust one hand through Buzz's arm and linked it with the other. "I've been waiting for you, Buzz."

"Well, here I am." He pulled away from her, but she twined her arm the tighter about his.

"Ain't sore at me, are yuh, Buzz?"

"Nah. Leggo my arm."

"Oh, Buzz, I'm batty about you. I can't help it, can I? Hm? Look here. Look here, you go on to Grand street and hang around for an hour, maybe, and I'll meet you here an' we'll walk a ways. Will you? I got something to tell you."

"Naw, I can't tonight. I'm busy."

He jerked loose from her then and was off. He ran one block. Then, after a backward glance, fell into a quick walk that brought him to the drugstore corner. There was his crowd. Spider and Red and Ding and Casey. They bestowed on him the low epithets with which they expressed admiration. Red worked at one of the bleaching vats in the Hatton paper mill. The story of Buzz's fistic triumph had spread through the big plant like fire.

"Go on, Buzz, tell 'em about it," Red urged now.

Buzz hitched himself up with a characteristic gesture and plunged into his story. His audience listened, entranced, interrupting him with an occasional "Yeh" of awed admiration. But the thing seemed to lack a certain something. Perhaps Casey put his finger on that something when at the recital's finish he asked:

"Didn't he see you was goin' to hit him?"

"Nah. He never see a thing."

Casey ruminated a moment. "You could of give him a chance to put up his dukes," he said at last.

Buzz shifted uncomfortably. "He's a bigger guy than I am. I bet he's over six foot. The paper was always telling how he played football at that college he went to."

Casey spoke up again. "They say he didn't wait for this here draft. He's goin' to Fort Sheridan, around Chicago somewheres, to be made a officer."

"Yeh, them rich guys, they got it all their own way," Spider spoke up gloomily. "They——"

From down the street came a dull, muffled thud-thud-thud-thud. Already Chippewa, Wis., had learned to recognize it.

"Company G," said Red. "I hear they're leavin' in a couple of days."

And down the street they came, thud-thud-thud. Company G, headed for the new red-brick armory. Chippewa had never taken Company G very seriously until now. How could it? When Company G was made up of Willis Kempf, who clerked in Hassel's shoe store; Fred Garvey, the reporter on the Chippewa Eagle; Hermis Knapp, the real estate man, and Earl Ericson, who came around in the morning for your grocery order. Thud-thud-thud. And to Chippewa, standing at the curb, quite suddenly these everyday men and boys were transformed into something remote and almost terrible. Something grim. Something sacrificial. Something sacred. The company passed on down the street—vanished. And Grand avenue went its way.

A little silence fell upon the street-corner group. Ding was the first to speak.

"They won't get me in this draft. I got a mother and two kid sisters to support."

"A swell lot of supportin' you do!"

"Who says I don't? I can prove it."

"They'll get me all right," said Casey. "I ain't kickin'."

"I'm under age," from Red. "You're only 20, ain't you, Buzz?"

"Yeh." Silence fell again. Then: "But I wouldn't mind goin'. Anything for a change. This place makes me sick!"

Red laughed. "You better be a hero and go and enlist."

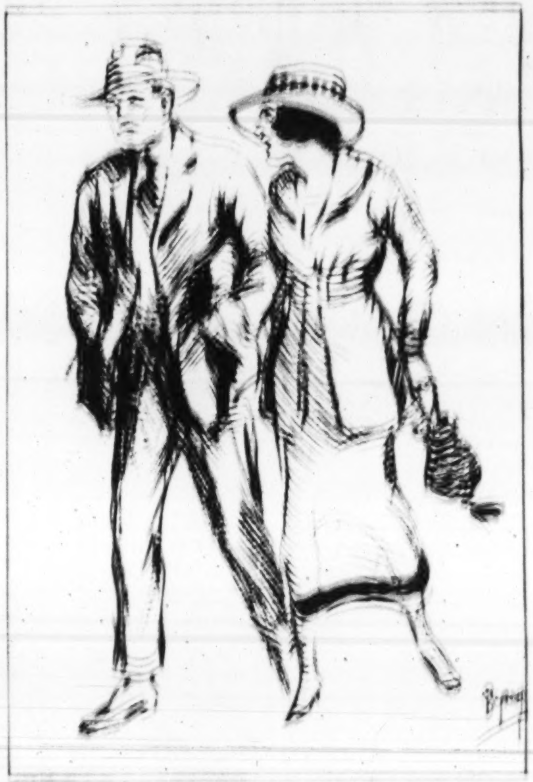
Buzz's head came up with a jerk. "Yes, I never thought of that!"

Red struck an attitude, one hand on his breast. "Now's your chanst, Buzz, to save your country an' your flag. Enlistment office's right over the Golden Eagle clothing store."

Buzz was staring at home, open-mouthed. His gaze was fixed, tense. Suddenly he seemed to gather all his muscles together as for a spring. But he only threw his cigarette into the gutter, yawned elaborately and moved away. "S'long," he said, and was off.

If they had watched him they would have seen him change his usual lounging gait when he reached the corner. They would have seen him stand a moment, sending a quick glance this way and that, then turn, retrace his steps almost at a run and dart into the doorway that led to the flight of wooden stairs at the side of the Golden Eagle clothing store.

A dingy room. A man at a bare table; another seated at the window, his chair tipped back, his feet on the sill, a pipe between his teeth. Buzz, shambling, suddenly awkward, stood in the door.



"Ain't sore at me, are yuh, Buzz?"

"This the place where you enlist?"

The man at the table stood up. The chair in front of the window came down on all fours.

"Sure," said the first man. "What's your name?"

Buzz told him.

"Meet Sergt. Keith. He's a Canadian. Been through the whole game."

Five minutes later Buzz's fine white torso rose above his trousers like a great pillar. Unconsciously his sagging shoulders had straightened. His stomach was held in. His chest jutted shelf-like. His ribs showed through the pink-white flesh.

"Get some of that pork off of him," observed Sergt. Keith, "and he'll do for a couple of Fritzes before he's through."

Buzz, fumbling with his hat, put this question: "When—when do I go?" For he had signed his name in his round, boyish, sixth-grade scrawl.

"Tomorrow. Now, listen to these instructions."

"Tomorrow!" gasped Buzz.

He was still gasping as he reached the street and struck out toward home. Tomorrow! When the Kearney girl again stepped out of the tree shadows he stared at her as at something remote and trivial.

"Will you meet me tomorrow night? Will you, Buzz?"

"If I'm in this town tomorrow night I'll meet you. Is that good enough?"

Then he turned and went on toward home. Alone. The family was still up. The door was open to the warm May night. Pa, shirt-sleeved, stocking-footed, asleep in his chair. Ma's dress open at the front, sitting in an untidy kimono, sewing.

On this flaccid group Buzz burst bomb-like. He flung his hat on the hook, wordlessly. The noise he made woke his father, as he had meant that it should. Buzz leaned against the stairway door, negligently. The eyes of the three were on him.

"Well," he said, "I guess you won't be bothered with me much longer."

Ma Werner's head came up sharply at that. "What you done, Ernie?"

"Enlisted."

Ma Werner rose at that, heavily. "Ernie! You never!"

Pa Werner was wide awake now. Out of his memory of the old country, and soldier service there, he put his question. "Did you sign to it?"

"Yeh."

"When you goin'?"

"Tomorrow."

Even Pa Werner gasped at that.

There was nothing dramatic about Buzz's going. He seemed to be whisked away. One moment he was eating his breakfast at an unaccustomed hour, in his best shirt and trousers, his mother only half understanding even now, standing over him with the coffee pot; the next he was standing with his cheap shiny suitcase in his hand. Then he was waiting on the depot platform and Hefty Burke, the baggage man, was saying: "Where you goin', Buzz?"

"Goin' to fight the Germans."

Hefty had hooted hoarsely. "Ya-a-a, so you are! You big bluff!"

"Who you callin' a bluff, you! I'm goin' to war, I'm tellin' you."

And thus Buzz Werner went to war. He was vague about its locality. It was somewhere in Europe. He was pretty sure it was France. A line from his fourth-grade geography came back to him. "The French," it had said, "are a gay people, fond of dancing and light wines." Well, that sounded all right.

The things that happened to Buzz Werner in the next 12 months cannot be detailed here. Chicago first. Buzz had never seen Chicago. Now that he saw it, he hardly believed it. Then came a camp, a rough, temporary camp, compared to which the present cantonments are luxurious. The United States Government took Buzz Werner by the slack of the trousers and the slack of the mind, and holding him thus, shook him into shape and into submission. And eventually—though it required months—into an understanding of why that submission was manly, courageous and fine. But before he learned that he had learned many other things. He learned there was little good in saying "Aw, g'wan!" to a dapper young Lieutenant, if they clapped you into the guardhouse for saying it. There was little point in throwing down your shovel and refusing to shovel coal if they clapped you into the guardhouse for doing it, and made you shovel harder than ever when you came out. He learned what it was to rise at dawn and go thud-thud-thudding down a dirt road for endless weary miles. He became an olive-drab unit in an olive-drab village. He learned what it was to wake up in the morning so sore and lame that he felt as if he had been pulled apart, limb from limb, during the night and never been put together again. He stood out with a raw squad in the dirt of No Man's Land between barracks and went through exercises that took hold of his great slack muscles and welded them into whipcords.

So much for his body. It soon became accustomed to the routine, then hardened. His mind was less supple. But that, too, was undergoing a great change. He found that the topics of conversation that used to interest his little crowd on the street corner in Chippewa were not of much interest here. But heard men, men as big as he, speak openly of things that he had always sneered at as soft. After one of these conversations he wrote an awkward but significant scrawl home to his mother.

"Well, Ma," he wrote, "I guess maybe you would like to hear a few words from me. Well, I like it in the army. It is the life for me you bet. I am feeling great. How are you all."

Ma Werner wasted an entire morning showing it around the neighborhood, and she read and reread it until it was almost pulp.

Six months of this. Buzz was an intelligent machine composed of steel, cord and iron. I think he had forgotten that the Kearney girl had ever existed. One day, after three months of camp life, the man in the next cot had thrown him a volume of Kipling. Buzz fingered it disinterestedly. Until that moment Kipling had not existed for Buzz Werner. After that moment he dominated his leisure hours. The Y. M. C. A. hut had many battered volumes of this writer. Buzz read them all.

The week before Thanksgiving Buzz found himself on his way to New York. For some reason unexplained to him he was separated from his company in one of the great shiftings performed for the good of the army. He never saw them again. He was sent

The PADLOCKED BOOK

A Modern Mystery Detective Story
By CHARLES EDMONDS WALK

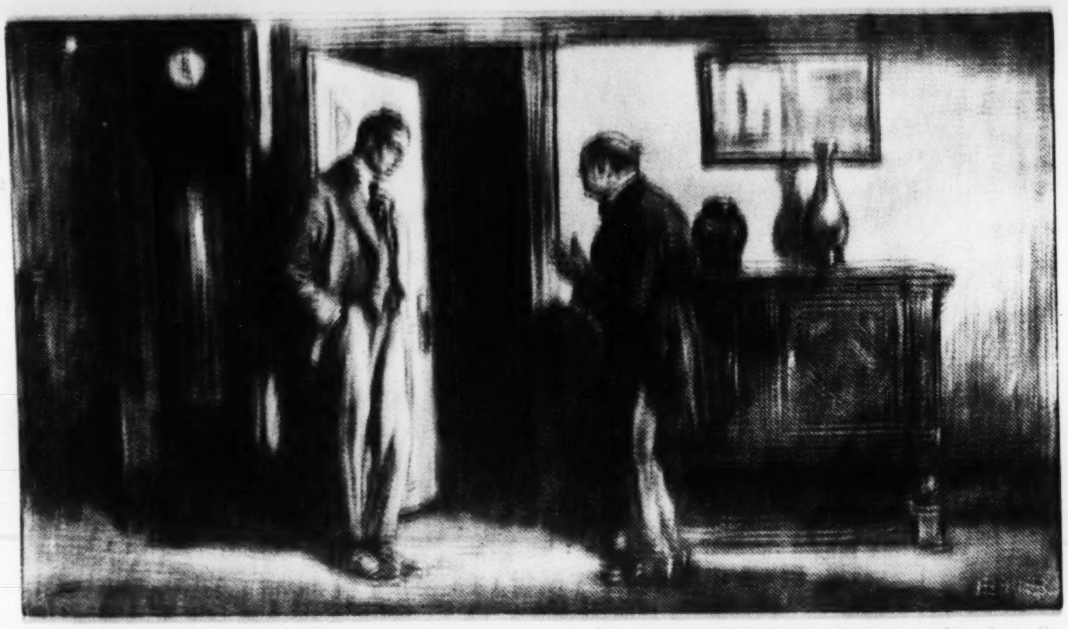
Illustrated by LEE CONREY

THE STORY FROM THE START

At the luxurious Druce home, Lord Frederick Demar, fiance of the younger daughter, Jeanette, has been mysteriously murdered—stabbed by an unknown assassin, whom nobody will admit having seen or suspected. Inspector Callahan and Fergus Drake, the police detectives, learn that Chancellor Druce, Jeanette's brother, has accused Lord Demar of having wronged a young English girl, Effie Tritt, niece of the butler, Burritt, and now employed as companion to Elizabeth Druce, the elder daughter of the house, a bedfast invalid, who for years past has never been seen outside her apartment.

While Drake is investigating a clew that points to a die-hard chauffeur named Raymond Sears, the startling announcement is made that Elizabeth has unaccountably disappeared. The supposed helpless invalid has gone or been spirited away, taking with her a private diary which she had kept in a silver-bound book fastened with a padlock.

The interest in the search for Elizabeth is in a way overshadowing that in the murder of Lord Demar, when Detective Drake, by chance, overhears something that brings back to his mind Effie Tritt, the pretty niece of Burritt, the butler.



Drake had nearly collided with Burritt, who was in the hall, close to the door."

CHAPTER XVIII
A NEW TRAIL

"HEY, Drake!" the desk man at the Detective Bureau hailed him when he appeared there next morning. "Lady wants you to phone soon as she can get you." The man handed him a slip of paper. "Here's the number. Lakeside [illegible]."

Drake smiled as he heard the number. It was the Druce telephone. Manifestly, after a night of uneasy rumination on her position and the significance of his allusion touching her brother, Jeanette had resolved to try a new tack with him. The truth he did not now expect from her.

He did not rush to the nearest telephone, however, and call her up; she would know that he had not [illegible] by this time, and he meant to discipline her a bit further. As the day dragged along he believed that her anxiety would grow. No telling what she might not yield up when anxious waiting in the face of uncertainty had gotten her into a certain frame of mind.

It was on the cards, however, that he was to change his own mind very shortly. He had seen the flaunting headlines that proclaimed the $10,000 reward, and he had not taken many steps away from the desk before he was given cause to believe that Inspector Callahan likewise had read them.

A colleague, hurrying down the stairs from the second story, stopped short when he saw Drake.

"Gosh! Glad you've come," declared the man with an air of relief. "The old man's in a stew because you're late. He wants you bad. Better beat it up to his room."

Drake's steps quickened, and a few seconds later he entered his chief's private sanctum.

Callahan's cold eyes lighted up at sight of him. Without preface, he shoved a morning paper at the young man and held the big headlines under his nose.

"Seen that?" he demanded.

Drake acknowledged that he had, but added that he was unable to vouch for the genuineness of the offer.

"Well, I can," Callahan bluntly assured him. "Just had old Druce on the phone. The offer's straight."

A silence fell. The burly inspector's cold regard rested upon his subordinate with a crafty, calculating look. When Drake showed no disposition to speak, the other continued:

"Drake, 10,000 bucks is a whole lot of money, if it's not split too many ways."

Drake admitted this to be a fact.

"Well, it's up to you—and me—to see that it isn't split more than once. Get me? Fifty-fifty, Drake—just the two of us."

Still Drake remained taciturn, and Callahan pressed the matter further.

"There's no reason why any more than two should sit in at this game. You and I've done all the work; we've got the case doped out, and it's only a little matter of grabbing this Sears guy, giving him the 'third,' returning the lost heiress to her distracted parents and collecting the kale. You and I hold all the cards."

Twenty-four hours ago Drake would have said that the hand he held was mostly winning trumps; now he felt that there had been a misdeal, with no likelihood of matching the hand on the next round. He descried a widespreading maze of uncertainties and baffling angles lying between either of them and attainment of the reward, but the only one he mentioned to his superior was:

"But suppose Elizabeth Druce is dead?"

"I don't believe it. But even if she is, Druce assured me he'd make it worth our while to remove all doubts about her, and do better still if we recovered the body."

The young man did not argue the point, but relapsed once more into silence. His reticence and lack of enthusiasm made no particular impression upon Callahan, who was accustomed to his quiet, unemotional ways. The older officer thought only of the capable intelligence behind that taciturn front, and considered how it might best be used to collect the $10,000.

Then he began to question Drake, an inquisition that was shaped by his years of practice in the art of forcing an unwilling witness to yield up whatever knowledge he might at the time be after. Drake shrank from the ordeal of trying to parry and evade the shrewd, searching questions and bethought himself of the slip of paper bearing the Druce telephone number.

"Chief," he interrupted, "Miss Druce has phoned me; she wants me in a hurry. I don't know what's up, but I'd better run up to Lakeside instead of wasting time talking here. You know all the main facts anyway."

So instead of avoiding Jeanette, Drake presently found himself hastening to see her as fast as an elevated express could carry him.

When she came to meet him in the big reception hall, she gave him a quick, searching glance and led him to a room whose coziness and atmosphere of never remaining long empty denoted that it must be a favorite spot with certain members of the family. Like all the other rooms he had been in, it had its extension telephone, which stood upon a heavy lacquered table of peculiar design.

Jeanette was perfectly composed, but her beautiful face was grave. She motioned him to a seat and herself sank upon a chaise longue, so that she sat facing him. Her first words were:

"I'm glad you came without bothering about phoning. There are two matters that I think you ought to have an opportunity of considering."

Drake furtively watched her. He was keenly alert, despite his imperturbable mien, to detect any token of action or speech that might betray her, any word that she might drop that he could pounce upon to hold up and confound her by its discrepancy.

But, as previously while in her presence, he found it impossible to say to himself with assurance that she was acting a part. The splendid dark eyes, which so unfalteringly met his, discouraged doubt and distrust. With the high-bred sensitive features it was impossible to reconcile deliberate falsehood. In short, her beauty and agreeable personality could not, without effort, be associated in his mind with duplicity and deceit of any kind. He combated the spell that her presence seemed to throw around him; cold, unimpassioned reason could not entirely conquer the intuitive feeling that he was horribly wronging her by misjudging her. If such were the case, then he hadn't even found the key to the riddle.

Disregarding her words, he suddenly leaned forward, his keen gaze fastened upon her with a peculiar intensity.

"Miss Druce," he said bluntly, "have you been honest with me?"

The question did not disconcert her, nor even raise an angry flush to her cheeks. On the contrary, she steadily returned his penetrating look for a long moment before replying. At last she said calmly, in tones that carried conviction:

"The situation is too serious for me to take offense, for us to quarrel, Mr. Drake. I never deliberately lied to anybody in my life. Why should you think that I would break a lifelong habit for the first time in my intercourse with you? Intolerable as are the things that are happening to us, they have not changed my nature."

With a little gesture of his right hand, which was as much as to say, "I give up!" he drew a long breath and leaned back in his chair once more.

"I want to believe you," he earnestly assured her; "all my instincts tell me that you are honest, sincere. But, Miss Druce, have you considered how the possibility of Sears being fond of your sister instead of you turns everything topsy-turvy? Everything points to him as being the guilty man, as being—pardon me—your lover instead of Miss Elizabeth's. My reason, without some new and transforming developments, can't accept any other solution. My theory casts doubt upon everything you have told me."

"I can only hope that the transforming developments will quickly materialize," she returned. "Until then you will either have to trust me or else not expect another word or token from me."

He suddenly asked:

"Why did you keep silent about Sears' success with his invention, the organization of the company, the money that was advanced to him?"

The question did not disturb her; the only change to be detected in her manner was a kind of wonderment that he should be apprised of those matters.

"Because," she unhesitatingly replied, "sister Elizabeth and I both pledged ourselves to keep the matter secret. I can't see how his success even remotely bears upon Lord Demar's death."

"Where is your keenness of perception?" he asked. "The money made your sister's abduction possible; it provided him with the means of making his getaway. He's covered his tracks so well that he's getting a start that will be hard to overcome."

The girl thoughtfully smoothed a fold of her skirt

AFTER THE WAR STUFF

Character Sketches
by

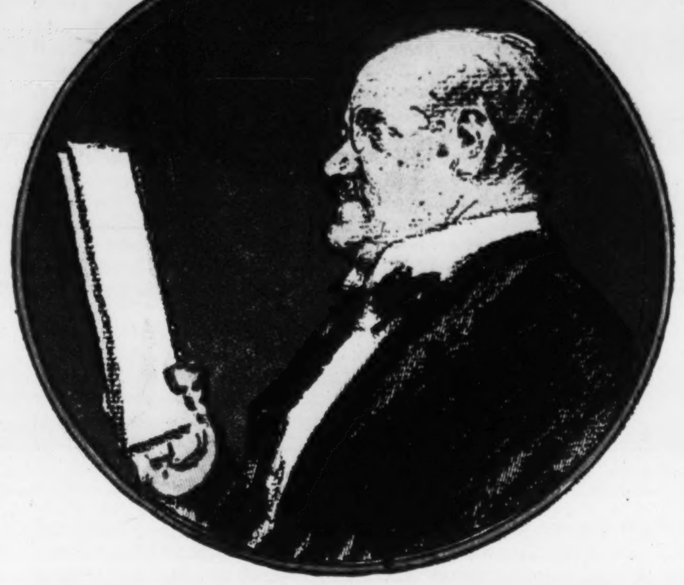
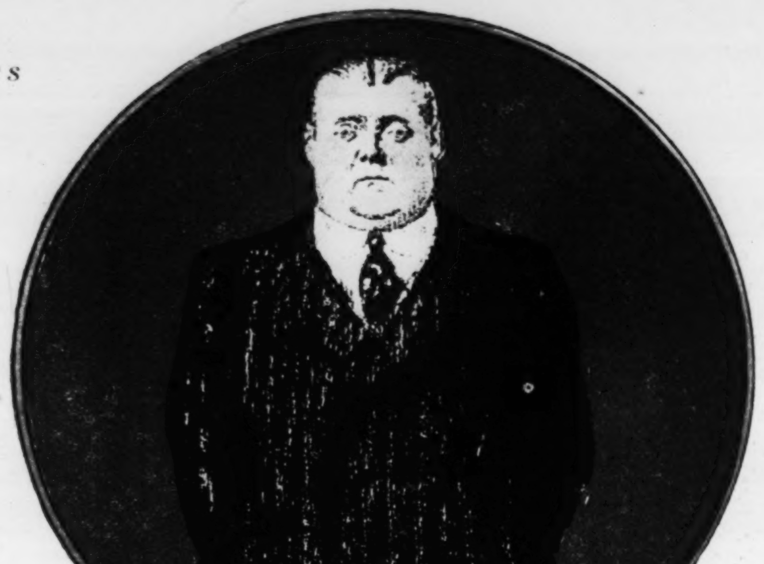
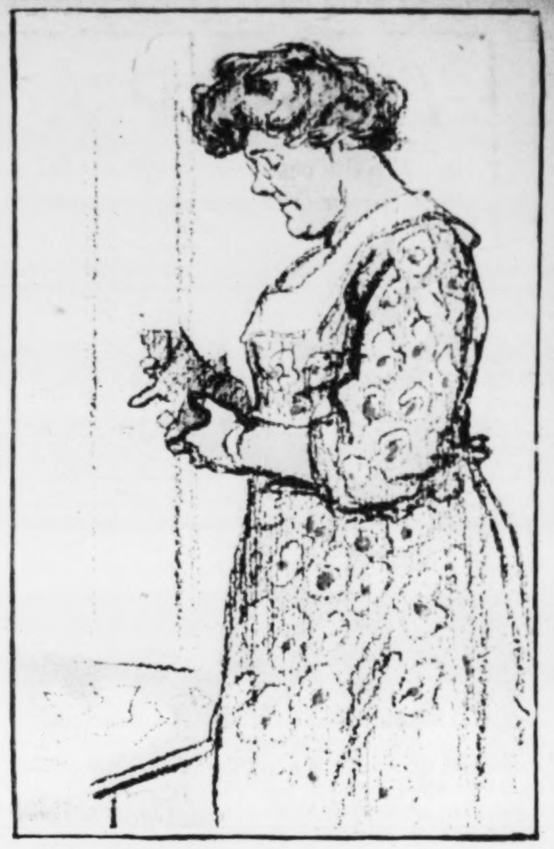
"Why, there was a time last December when the pipes froze and not ONE of the men in Wilfred's barracks could have a bath for a WHOLE WEEK!" Lieut. James, late of the Western Front, was about to pull a little hero stuff on Mrs. McGraw, whose son helped win the war in a Southern camp. Mrs. McGraw isn't going to let anyone get there first when it comes to war experiences.



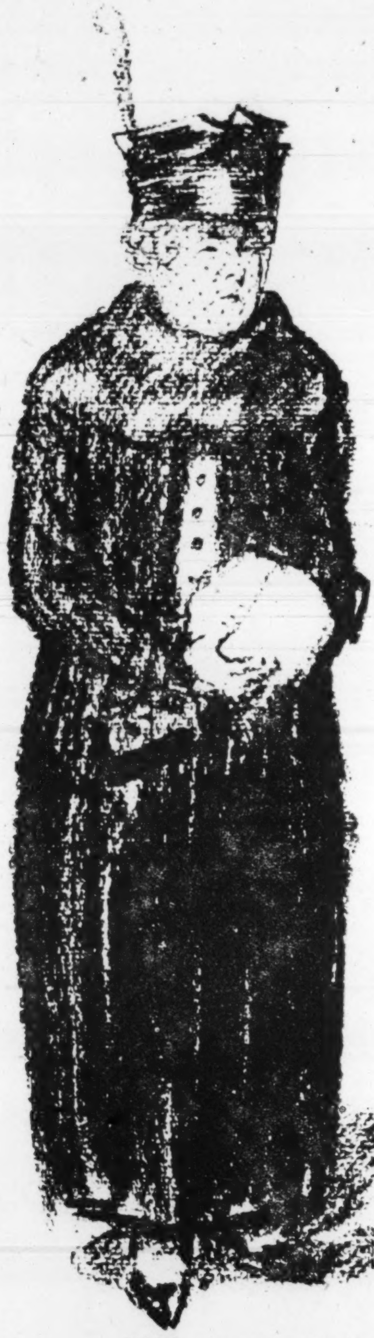
The hotel proprietors who did such heroic work cutting down everything on the bill of fare to war portions—except the price—can't realize that the war is over.



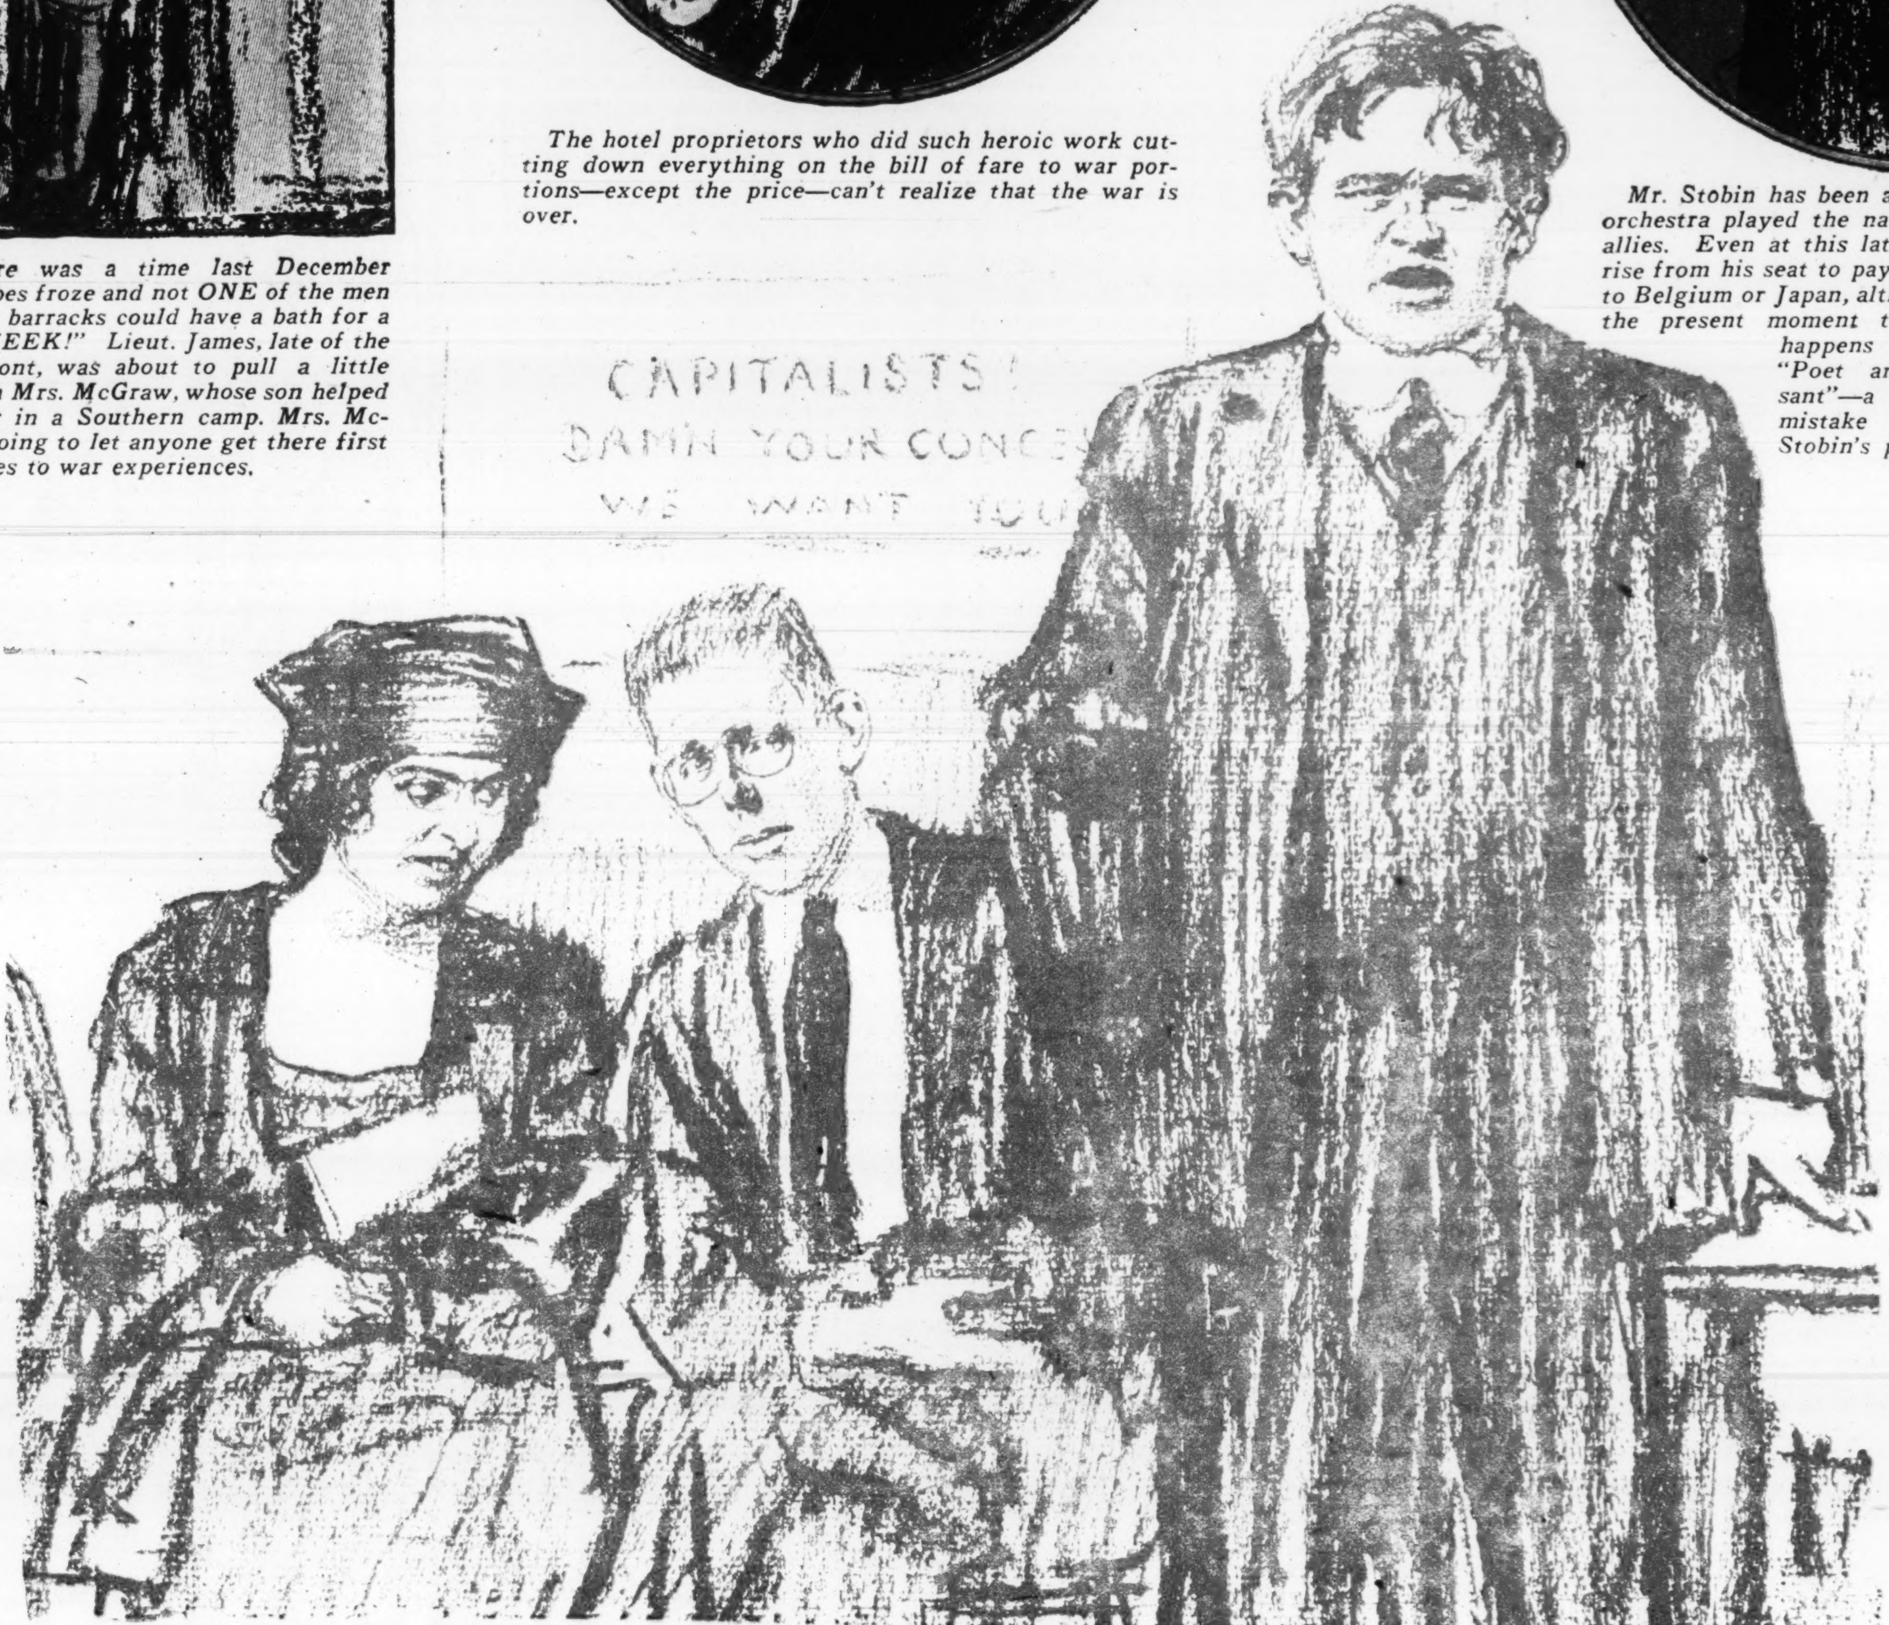
Mr. Stobin has been accustomed to stand whenever an orchestra played the national anthem of any one of the allies. Even at this late date Mr. Stobin never fails to rise from his seat to pay homage to Belgium or Japan, although at the present moment the tune happens to be "Poet and Peasant"—a little mistake on Mr. Stobin's part.



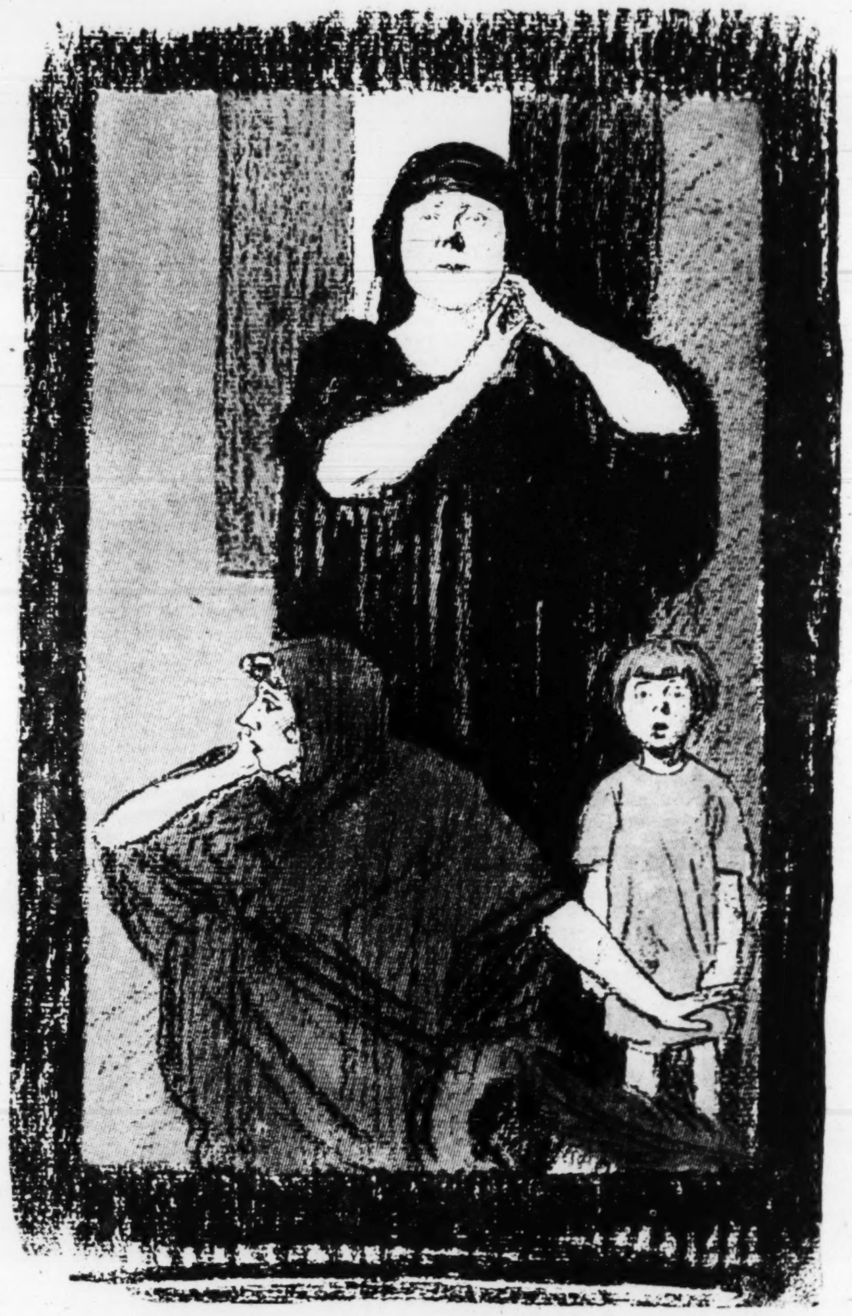
Miss Wizzy just can't stop saving tinfoil—war or no war—though what use it will be put to Miss Wizzy hasn't figured out.



Will someone please tell Mrs. Toehill whether several pounds of carefully hoarded prune pits should be sent to the Red Cross or to the Belgian Reconstruction Committee? Mrs. Toehill has forgotten just what the Government wanted them for.



Comrade Growl, late pro-German agitator, has become so used to being arrested at least once a week that a return to everyday life—and work— seems an awful anti-climax.



One of the most difficult readjustments to be effected since the armistice has to do with those ladies who were always getting up tableaux for the benefit of this and that war charity, and posing as stricken Belgium. Now that the war is over they simply can't break themselves of the habit.

PERHAPS no other texture is as beautiful as the human skin at its best.

And this fine satin-texture, which is within the reach of nearly everyone, is promoted largely by the use of a pure soap.

But, added to its utter purity, Fairy Soap possesses other most valuable soap-qualities.

"Mellowed together" for the particular care of skins, Fairy Soap cleanses perfectly—and rinses off. It leaves no soapy deposit behind in the tiny pores to coarsen them and spoil the fine skin-texture. No soap remains on the tender outer skin, after rinsing, to cause it to feel "tight" or "dry."

There is only one way to enjoy the full pure benefits of Fairy Soap. And that is to use it consistently.

Make friends with Fairy Soap. Buy several cakes at once. Then let its regular, day-by-day use help your skin toward a fine satin-textured loveliness.

IMPORTANT FACTS about "Skins and Soaps"

The face-skin is more active than the skin elsewhere on the body. It therefore requires special attention if the satin-texture is to retain its fresh, refined loveliness. Of course the soap used must be pure. It must be more. It must possess also these three valuable qualities:

1. It must cream into pores and cleanse them.
2. It must cream out of pores leaving them soothed as well as freshened.
3. It must easily and completely rinse off the tender outer cuticle.

Fairy Soap is a tonic that a fine skin-texture welcomes. Fairy's pure creamy lather reaches gently into pores. It creams thoroughly out of pores. It carries away excess oil, salts and acid matter from the pores as well as surface dust and impurities. And after this perfect cleansing, Fairy perfectly rinses off. These Fairy Soap qualities make for a fine-textured loveliness to your skin.

THE N.K. FAIRBANK COMPANY

FAIRY SOAP

Have you a little Fairy in your home?

Your skin is changing every day

How to make it as attractive as you would love to have it

A skin clear, radiant! The natural beauty that can be yours! You cannot keep your skin lovely without taking care continually of the new skin that is forming every day.

Every day, as old skin dies, new forms to take its place. To keep this new skin soft and lovely, use the following stimulating treatment daily.

Lather your wash cloth well with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap. Apply it to your face and distribute the lather thoroughly. Now with the tips of your fingers work this cleansing, antiseptic lather into your skin, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse first with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. Finish by rubbing your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Always be careful to dry the skin thoroughly.

This brings the blood to the surface and stimulates the small muscular fibres. Use this treatment persistently. It will keep your skin clear, radiant!

You will find Woodbury's Facial Soap on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. Get a cake today and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Write today for a week's size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough to last for a week of any Woodbury treatment, together with the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," giving the famous Woodbury's skin treatment. Where Fatima Stands

These facts are reprinted to show you.

The advertisements reproduced here have all appeared in the papers. Please look at them again. They help to illustrate Fatima's unique position as the only inexpensive cigarette that seems actually to be preferred to expensive cigarettes.

For example, Fatima outsells or closely rivals in sales even the highest-priced cigarettes, at such places as —the Astor, New York

—the Copley Plaza, Boston
—the Gibson and the Sinton, Cincinnati
—the Stock Exchange, New York
—the Touraine, Boston
—the Waldorf-Astoria, New York
—the Yale Club, New York —and also at many other such places, not mentioned in these advertisements—for instance:

—the Auditorium, Chicago
—the Capitol Building, Washington
—the Congress, Chicago
—the Statler, St. Louis
—the Willard, Washington

Men who buy their Fatimas at such places as these, buy them not because of moderate price, but because they prefer Fatimas. They prefer Fatimas' taste and they find that Fatimas treat them right.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

NOTE: More and more men, it seems—both those who care nothing for price and those who feel that they should not smoke high-priced cigarettes—are realizing the commonsense of adopting Fatima as their steady smoke.

Twenty to the package

. . . and at the Stock Exchange

A fact:

At this, the very heart of Wall Street itself, one would naturally expect only high-priced cigarettes to be popular. But Fatima has proved an exception.

Fatima's popularity at the Stock Exchange is, in fact, so great that only one cigarette—a high-priced one, of course—equals or leads Fatima in sales.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

. . . and at the Waldorf-Astoria

A fact:

The Waldorf in New York is but one of the many hotels all over the country, where Fatima is the largest-selling cigarette. The same thing is true, for example —at the Astor, New York, where over 200,000 Fatimas are sold every month:

—at the Willard, in Washington
—at the Gibson and the Sinton, in Cincinnati:
—at the Copley Plaza, the Touraine, the Parker House and Young's, in Boston: —and at dozens of other leading hotels (and clubs, too) all over the country.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

. . . and with the 200 men who sailed for the Peace Conference

A fact:

For the 200 or more men of note who sailed on the George Washington for the Peace Conference, more than a dozen different brands of cigarettes were carried in stock by the ship's "canteen." Of these, the cigarette carried and sold in far the largest quantity was Fatima.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

FATIMA
A Sensible Cigarette

. . . and at the Yale Club

A fact:

At this—one of New York's finest clubs—Fatima is the only inexpensive cigarette enjoying a large sale. Month after month, Fatimas hold their place as one of the Yale Club's three leading sellers.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

FATIMA
A Sensible Cigarette

. . . and cigarettes helped to win it

What a part the cigarette played!

In those grim, tense moments, waiting for the word to "go"; in that blessed lull, hours afterward, just before the relief party came; in those other, sterner moments when his spirit fought to smile, what was the thing he wanted most?

The cigarette!

And now, with the big job done, what so much as the cigarette will help "keep him smiling" until he's home again?

A fact:

Over 740 million Fatimas have so far been shipped to our soldiers abroad. And more are constantly on the way for the boys who still are over there.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

FATIMA
A Sensible Cigarette

. . . and with the every-day man on the job

A fact:

At the Capitol Building in Washington, at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and at scores of other such places—where you would naturally expect only high-priced cigarettes to sell—Fatimas lead in sales. But important as these sales are, they're but a "drop in the bucket" compared with the MILLIONS of Fatimas smoked every day by the big, plain, "you-and-me" public.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

FATIMA

. . . and in Boston, too

A fact:

At the four most exclusive hotels in Boston—the Copley Plaza, the Touraine, the Parker House and Young's—the biggest-selling cigarette is not one of the high-priced brands, as one might expect, but Fatima.
